869. Incumbents.

A pastoral scheme providing for the creation of a new benefice¹ by the union of two or more benefices may provide for the designation or selection of the first incumbent of the new benefice and of the incumbent of any of the benefices concerned which falls vacant before the union takes effect, and for restricting the rights of presentation on any such vacancy². This does not, however, apply to the first rector in a team ministry or the first incumbent of a benefice in a group ministry³.

Generally, where any office attaches to a benefice which is united with another or others by a pastoral scheme, that office attaches to the new benefice created by the union unless the scheme otherwise provides⁴.

1 For the meaning of 'benefice', see PARA 768 note 1 ante.

2 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 23 (1). The provisions of Sch. 3 para 4 (see PARAS 835, 843 ante), are applied with respect to the admission and induction of incumbents of benefices created or affected by pastoral schemes: s 23 (4).

3 Ibid s 23 (3). For the provisions which apply to them, see ss 19 (4), 20 (3), and PARAS 870, 872 post.

NOTES--Now Pastoral Measure 1983 s 24 (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 6).

TEXT AND NOTE 2--Now a pastoral scheme providing for the creation of a new benefice may provide for the designation or selection of the first incumbent of the new benefice and of the incumbent of any benefice concerned which falls vacant before the new benefice comes into being, and for rights of presentation on any such vacancy: ibid s 24(1).

Subject to any provision for the designation or selection of the first incumbent of a new benefice created by a pastoral scheme, the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 ss 7-16 (see PARAS 818A.1-8) apply to the making of the first presentation to the benefice as if the coming into operation of the scheme were the occurrence of a vacancy in the benefice: ibid s 29(3).

B. TEAM AND GROUP MINISTRIES

870. Constitution of team ministries.

A pastoral scheme may provide for the establishment of a team ministry for the area of any benefice¹, namely for the sharing of the cure of souls in that area by a team of ministers consisting of the incumbent of the benefice which (if it is not one already) becomes a rectory², and one or more other ministers who have the title of vicar and a status equal to that of an incumbent of a benefice³. The office of rector in a team ministry may, depending on the scheme, be either a freehold office or an office to be held for a specified term of years⁴. The rector is a corporation sole and as such holds the property of the benefice during his term of office⁵. The office of vicar in a team ministry is an ecclesiastical office constituted by the scheme held for a term of years specified in the scheme or fixed in accordance with the bishop's licence, and the vicar has the same security of tenure as an incumbent of a benefice⁶.

The scheme may designate the first rector or first holder of any office of vicar⁷. If it does not, or when it becomes necessary to appoint a subsequent rector, the scheme must provide for the presentation of the rector either by a patronage board constituted by a pastoral scheme⁸, or by the diocesan board of patronage⁹. If however, the sole patron is the bishop, the rector is then collated by the bishop¹⁰.

The vicars are chosen by the bishop and rector jointly; they are appointed by licence under seal and are publicly admitted in a church in the area¹¹. A scheme or order may make provision as to places of residence for vicars in team ministries¹².

A pastoral scheme may terminate a team ministry by abolishing the offices of vicars and restoring the rectory, if it is held for a term of years, to the status of a freehold office¹³; and a scheme or order may alter such a ministry by abolishing one or more of the offices of vicar or increasing the number of vicars¹⁴ or change the office of rector from a freehold to a term of years or alter the term of years for which an office of rector or vicar is held¹⁵.

If a benefice for which a team ministry has been established is dissolved by a pastoral scheme the offices of the vicars (as well as that of rector) cease to exist¹⁶.

1 For the meaning of 'benefice', see PARA 768 note 1 ante. Where two or more benefices are held in plurality and a team ministry is established or is to be established for the area of one of those benefices a pastoral scheme may provide for extending the operation of the team ministry, so long as the plurality continues, to the cure of souls in the area of any other benefice so held: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 19 (11). In this event s 19 (6), (7), (10), Sch. 3 para 3 (1)-(4), have effect as if references to the area of the benefice were references to the combined areas of the benefices concerned: s 19 (11).

3 Ibid s 19 (1) (b).

4 Ibid s 19 (2). The term of years may be extended: s 19 (5). The fact that the office is held for a term of years is not to affect its other attributes as a benefice: s 19 (2).

5 Ibid s 19 (2).

6 Ibid s 19 (3). The term of years may be extended: see s 19 (5). The tenure of the vicar's office is unaffected by a vacancy in the benefice of the rector: s 19 (3).

7 Ibid s 19 (4). The first rector may be the existing incumbent: s 19 (4).

8 The board consists of the bishop as chairman, with such other members as the scheme may provide, regard being had to the interests of persons who previously had patronage rights in the benefices concerned, although they need not be members where there are pastoral or practical objections: ibid Sch. 3 para 1 (3). For the meaning of 'bishop', see PARA 813 note 3 ante. The bishop may authorise a suffragan or assistant bishop or archdeacon to exercise his voting rights at a meeting of the board and any other member may authorise a representative to act and vote on his behalf: Sch. 3 para 1 (4). The board is a body corporate for the purpose of holding the rights of patronage conferred upon it, and has a seal and power to regulate its own procedure: Sch. 3 para 1 (5). The right to be a member of the board is transferable inter vivos and on death, but is not saleable and may not be deemed to be a right in land: Sch. 3 para 1 (7). People holding such rights must give the diocesan registrar particulars of their rights and of any transfer or devolution of them, or those rights may be disregarded for the purposes of Sch. 3 para 1: Sch. 3 para 1 (8).

9 Ibid s 19 (4) (a), Sch. 3 para 1 (1). As to diocesan boards of patronage, see PARA 790 ante. If the scheme provides for presentation by the diocesan board of patronage the scheme must give those persons specified in it who would have been members of a patronage board the like rights to attend and vote at the sittings of the diocesan board of patronage at which the persons to be presented are considered and chosen: Sch. 3 para 1 (6). The provisions of Sch. 3 para 1 (7) (see note 8 supra) apply to such rights: Sch. 3 para 1 (7).

10 Ibid Sch. 3 para 1 (1) proviso. The Benefices (Exercise of Rights of Presentation) Measure 1931 and any other enactment, Measure or rule of law relating to the presentation or collation of incumbents applies to any presentation or collation under the Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 1: Sch. 3 para 1 (2).

14 Ibid ss 21 (1) (b), 38 (e). An alteration cannot be made by order without the vicar's consent: s 38 proviso.

15 Ibid ss 21 (1) (c), 38 (e). This can only be done on a vacancy or with the consent of the rector or vicar concerned: ss 21 (1) (c), 38 (e). Supplementary, consequential and transitional provisions may be made by scheme or, with the vicar's assent (s. 38 proviso), by order including in particular provisions relating to patronage as required by Sch. 3 paras 1 (9), 3 (see ss 21 (1) (f), 38 (e)). Where a pastoral scheme terminates a team ministry it must, so far as practicable and having regard to pastoral considerations, provide for restoring rights of patronage in respect of the benefice concerned to those who would have possessed them if the team ministry had never been established; if and so far as such provision is not practicable the scheme must provide otherwise for the vesting and exercise of the rights of patronage: Sch. 3 para 1 (9). Schedule 3 para 3 makes provision as to parochial church meetings where a team ministry is established: see PARAS 549, 563 et seq, 580, 589 ante, 871 post.

16 Ibid s 21 (2). This is without prejudice to the creation of offices for any benefice created or altered by the scheme: s 21 (2).

UPDATE

870-873 Team and Group Ministries

The Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 makes further provision with respect to team and group ministries.

870 Constitution of team ministries

TEXT AND NOTES--In the case of a team ministry established for the area of any benefice under a pastoral scheme made and confirmed by Order in Council under the Pastoral Measure 1968 (a 1968 Measure team ministry), the scheme is deemed to contain provisions for the pastoral care of persons in that area by those who are to share the cure of souls therein together with all other persons who are from time to time authorised by licence or permission of the bishop to serve in that area as members of the team: Pastoral Measure 1983 s 20A(1) (s 20A added by Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 2). The persons who are to share the cure of souls in the relevant area constitute the team chapter, and the team chapter together with the other persons deemed to be referred to in the scheme constitute the team: 1983 Measure s 20A(2). The pastoral committee of each diocese must, as soon as possible after 28 June 1995, send to the secretary of the parochial church council of every parish comprised in the area of a benefice in the diocese for which a 1968 Measure team ministry is established a notice stating that written representations to the effect that the above provisions should not apply to the team ministry may be made to the pastoral committee within the period of six months immediately following the date on which the notice was sent, and require him to affix a copy on or near the principal door of every church in the parish and every building licensed by the bishop for public worship in the parish: ibid s 20A(3). The provisions do not apply to any team ministry until the expiration of the period of six months immediately following the date on which the notice was sent to the parishes concerned and if, within that period, written representations with respect to a 1968 Measure team ministry are received by a pastoral committee (1) the pastoral committee must forthwith refer the representations to the Church Commissioners, and the commissioners must then as soon as possible consider the representations and determine whether or not the provisions are to apply to the team ministry; and (2) the provisions do not apply to the team ministry unless and until the commissioners determine that they are to apply to it: 1983 Measure s 20A(4). Where the commissioners have determined under s 20A that the provisions of s 20A(1), (2) are not to apply, a pastoral order may apply those provisions to a 1968 Measure team ministry: 1983 Measure s 37(2), added by Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 5(4).

A pastoral scheme establishing a team ministry or, subject to the scheme, the bishop's licence may assign to any member of the team who is not a member of the team chapter (see) a special responsibility for pastoral care in respect of a part of the area of the benefice, so far as consistent with that member's office: 1983 Measure s 20(8A), added by the Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 1(7). If any such provision is made by the bishop's licence, it may (subject to the scheme) be varied or revoked by a subsequent licence under seal: 1983 Measure s 20(8A).

NOTE 1--Now where two or more benefices are or are to be held in plurality; and words 'the cure of souls in' omitted; Pastoral Measure 1983 s 20(12), referring to ibid s 20(7), (8), (11), Sch 3 para 4(1)-(3), (5), (6).

TEXT AND NOTES 2, 3--Now such a scheme must provide (a) for the sharing of the cure of souls in that area by the incumbent of the benefice which, if it is not or would not otherwise be a rectory, is to be a rectory and one or more other ministers who have the title of vicar and a status equal to that of an incumbent of a benefice; and (b) for the pastoral care of persons in that area by those who are to share the cure of souls in it together with all other persons who are from time to time authorised by a provision contained in a licence or permission of the bishop to serve in that area as members of the team. The persons who are to share the cure of souls in the area constitute the team chapter, and the team chapter together with the other person referred to in the scheme by virtue of head (b) constitute the team: 1983 Measure s 20(1), as amended by 1995 Measure s 1(2).

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Replaced. Now, the office of rector in a team ministry may be held by each holder thereof for the specified term of years: 1983 Measure s 20(2), as amended by the 1995 Measure s 1(3). For meaning of 'specified term of years' see 1983 Measure s 20(15), added by the 1995 Measure s 1(12).

NOTE 4--1968 Measure s 19(5) now 1983 Measure s 20(6) (as amended by the 1995 Measure s 1(6)). Where a person is deemed under the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1978 s 2(2) (see PARA 654) to be a rector or vicar in a team ministry for a term of years, the restrictions in the Ecclesiastical Offices (Age Limit) Measure 1975 s 1 (para 654) do not prohibit the extension of the term: 1978 Measure s 2(3).

NOTE 5--Now Pastoral Measure 1983 s 20(2).

TEXT AND NOTE 6--For 'term of years' to 'bishop's licence' read 'the specified term of years': see now 1983 Measure s 20(3), as amended by 1995 Measure s 1(4). For meaning of 'specified term of years' see 1983 Measure s 20(15), added by the 1995 Measure s 1(12). A person ordained to the office of deacon who is authorised (ie by virtue of TEXT AND NOTES 2, 3, head (b)) by licence of the bishop (1) to serve in a team ministry as a member of the team, and (2) for the purposes of the team ministry to perform, so far as consistent with the office of deacon, all such offices and services as may be performed by an incumbent, may serve for the specified number of years: 1983 Measure s 20(3A), added by 1995 Measure s 1(5). The Ecclesiastical Offices (Age Limit) Measure 1975 s 1 (see PARA 664) applies to appointments under the 1983 Measure s 20(3A), with the effect that licences may not be issued in respect of persons over the age of 70 years: see ibid s 20(9A), added by the 1995 Measure s 1(9). The specified term may be extended: 1983 Measure s 20(6), amended by the 1995 Measure s 1(6). The deacon has the same security of tenure as an incumbent of a benefice: 1983 Measure s 20(3A) as added. Any other person who is so authorised by licence of the bishop to serve in a team ministry as a member of the team may serve for a term of years specified in the licence provided, subject to exceptions, that he has been nominated for that purpose by the rector with the consent of a majority of the other members of the team and of each parochial church council concerned: 1983 Measure s 20(3B), as added. For meaning of 'specified term of years' see 1983 Measure s 20(15), as added.

NOTE 6--1968 Measure s 19(5) now 1983 Measure s 20(6) (as amended by the 1995 Measure s 1(6)).

NOTES 7, 8--The body or other persons who are entitled to choose a person to be a vicar in the team ministry may not make an offer of appointment to any person until the making of the offer to the person in question has been approved by the parish representatives: 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 2(6)(a), added by 1995 Measure s 6(3). The approval may be deemed to have been given in certain circumstances: Sch 3 para 2(6)(b), as added. Where approval of an offer is refused the body or other persons may request the archbishop of the province in which the benefice in question is to review the matter and if, after review, the archbishop authorises the body or other persons to make the offer in question, that offer may be made accordingly: Sch 3 para 2(6)(d). 'Parish representative' means two lay members of the parochial church council concerned appointed by that council to act as representatives of the council in connection with the selection of vicars in the team ministry: Sch 3 para 2(6)(e).

TEXT AND NOTE 7--Now ibid s 20(4) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 4). Where a pastoral scheme designates a person as the first holder of the office of vicar in a team ministry, the bishop must offer to issue a licence appointing him to the office, and if that person does not accept the offer within one month after it is made to him, the designation ceases to have effect: 1983 Measure s 20(5).

NOTE 8--Now the board consists of the bishop as chairman, subject to the 1983 Measure Sch 1 para 2(2), the rector, every vicar in a team ministry, any member of a team to whom s 20(3A) applies, any person having a special responsibility for pastoral care under s 20(8A) with such other member or members as the scheme may provide: Sch 3 para 1(4) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 59(1), (2)). Without prejudice to the generality of Sch 3 para 1(4) the scheme may provide for empowering the bishop to appoint one or more persons, but not exceeding the number specified in the scheme, to be a member or members of the board for such period as the bishop may specify when making the appointment: ibid Sch 3 para 1(5). 1968 Measure Sch 3 para 1(4) now 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1(6); Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 Sch 4 para 25, which requires the representative to be a person who has made the declaration of membership within the meaning of the 1986 Measure (see ibid s 8(1); PARA 818A.2). Subject to the 1983 Measure Sch 3 paras 1(7A), (7B), 2(3), (3A), a pastoral scheme by which a patronage board is constituted may provide that any member of the board specified in the scheme is entitled to such number of votes as may be so specified and that where there is an equal division of votes the bishop, as chairman, has a casting vote, but except in so far as the scheme so provides, each member of the board is entitled to one vote: Sch 3 para 1(7) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 59(1), (3)). Every vicar in a team ministry, any member of a team to whom the 1983 Measure s 20(3A) applies and any person having a special responsibility for pastoral care under s 20(8A) are entitled between them to one vote which is to be exercised by such one of them or such two or more of them (acting unanimously or by majority) as may be present at the meeting in question: Sch 3 para 1(7A) (Sch 3 para 1(7A) added by the 1995 Measure s 6(2); 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1(7A), (7B) substituted for Sch 3 para 1(7A) by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 59(1), (4)). Every person referred to in the 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1(7A) other than a person who wishes to be considered for presentation is entitled to attend at meetings of the diocesan board of patronage at which the person to be presented as rector of the team ministry is considered and chosen and is entitled to vote as provided in that provision: Sch 3 para 1(7B) (as so substituted). 1968 Measure Sch 3 para 1(5) now 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1(8). Now the right to be a member of the board is, except where such a right is vested in a person in right of his office or only for life or for a term of years, transferable inter vivos and on death, but in no case is such a right saleable and may not be deemed to be a right in land: ibid Sch 3 para 1(10). 1968 Measure Sch 3 para 1(8) now 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1(11).

TEXT AND NOTE 9--Now 1983 Measure s 20(4)(a), Sch 3 para 1(1).

NOTE 9--Now if the scheme provides for the patron to be the diocesan board of patronage the scheme must give those persons specified in it rights to attend and vote at meetings of the board at which the person to be presented is considered and chosen, and regard must be had in determining the persons to whom those rights are to be given to the interests of the persons mentioned in 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1(4) (see NOTE 8), but it is not necessary, in cases where there are pastoral or practical objections, for those persons or all of them to be given those rights: ibid Sch 3 para 1(9); Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 Sch 4 para 25.

TEXT AND NOTE 10--Replaced; see now 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1(2); as follows: 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1(1) does not apply in relation to a benefice of which the bishop is the sole patron, but in that case the pastoral scheme establishing a team ministry for that benefice may provide as mentioned in PARA 1(1), and if the scheme does not so provide, the bishop must choose the rector, other than the first rector, if designated by the scheme, to whom he collates the benefice.

NOTE 10--The 1931 Measure is repealed and the 1968 Measure, Sch 3 para 1(2), as consolidated in the 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1(3), is amended accordingly: Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 Sch 4 para 25. Before the patronage board or the diocesan board of patronage exercise their right of presentation or the bishop exercises his right of collation under these provisions they or he, as the case may be, must consult the other members of the team: 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1(3).

TEXT AND NOTE 11--Replaced; see now 1983 Measure s 20(4)(b), as follows: the vicar or vicars are chosen in accordance with ibid Sch 3 para 2, are appointed to the office by licence of the bishop under seal and, unless the bishop otherwise directs, are publicly admitted in a church in the area.

A pastoral scheme establishing a team ministry which provides for the presentation of the rector by a patronage board constituted by the scheme or by the diocesan board of patronage may provide for the vicars in that ministry, other than the first holder of any office of vicar therein, if designated by the scheme, to be chosen by the same body: 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 2(1). Where such a scheme so provides, the rector of the team ministry must be a member of the patronage board for the purpose only of meetings at which the person to be appointed a vicar in that ministry is considered and chosen and is entitled to attend and vote at meetings of the diocesan board of patronage for the like purpose: Sch 3 para 2(2) (amended by the 1995 Measure s 6(3); and the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 59(1), (5)). Every vicar in a team ministry, any member of a team to whom the 1983 Measure s 20(3A) applies and any person having a special responsibility for pastoral care under s 20(8A) are entitled between them to one vote which is to be exercised by such one of them or such two or more of them (acting unanimously or by majority) as may be present at the meeting in question: Sch 3 para 2(3) (Sch 3 para 2(3), (3A) substituted for Sch 3 para 2(3) by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 59(1), (6)). Every person referred to in the 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 2(3) other than a person who wishes to be considered for appointment is entitled to attend at meetings of the diocesan board of patronage at which the person to be chosen as vicar in a team ministry is considered and chosen and is entitled to vote as provided in that provision: Sch 3 para 2(3A) (as so substituted). Where such a scheme does not provide as mentioned above, the vicar or vicars in the team ministry, other than the first holder of office of vicar in it, if designated by the scheme, must be chosen by the vicar and the rector jointly: Sch 3 para 2(4). Before the body or other persons who are entitled to choose a person to be a vicar in a team ministry make their choice, they must consult the other members of the team, the parochial church council of every parish belonging to the benefice for the area of which the team ministry was established and if a special cure of souls in respect of a part of the area is to be assigned in accordance with s 20(8)(a) (see PARA 690) to the vicar, any district church council concerned: Sch 3 para 2(5).

NOTE 12--Now 1983 Measure s 31.

TEXT AND NOTES 13-16--Now 1983 Measure ss 22, 37(1)(e) (as renumbered by the 1995 Measure s 5(3); 1983 Measure s 37(1)(e) amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 58(1)). A pastoral scheme may also: (1) alter a team ministry by providing for the right of presentation of the rector to be transferred to a patronage board constituted by the scheme or to the diocesan board of patronage; (2) alter a team ministry by providing for the vicars therein to be chosen by the body entitled to present the rector (see TEXT AND NOTE 11); and (3) specify the term of years (for which certain members of a team are to hold office or serve) for the purposes of the 1983 Measure s 20(2), (3), (3A): s 22(1)(bb), (bbb), (cc), added by 1995 Measure s 3(2). 'Specified term of years' has the same meaning as in the 1983 Measure s 20(15): ibid s 22(3), as added by the 1995 Measure s 3(3). The 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 1 applies in part in relation to a pastoral scheme or order altering a team ministry under s 22(1)(bb) and 37(1)(e)(v) (as renumbered): Sch 3 para 1(13), added by the 1995 Measure s 6(2)(c).

TEXT AND NOTE 15--Replaced. Now a pastoral scheme may, with the consent of the rector concerned, change the office of a rector in a team ministry from a freehold office to an office held for the specified term of years or alter the term of years for which an office of rector or vicar in a team ministry is held to accord with the specified term of years: 1983 Measure s 22(1)(c), substituted by the 1995 Measure s 3(2)(b). For meaning of 'specified term of years' see the 1983 Measure s 20(15), added by the 1995 Measure s 1(12).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(5) PASTORAL SCHEMES AND ORDERS/(ii) Functions of Diocesan Pastoral Committees/B. TEAM AND GROUP MINISTRIES/871. Organisation of team ministries.

871. Organisation of team ministries.

The rector and vicars¹ must meet as a chapter to discuss and reach a common mind on all matters of general concern or special interest to the team ministry². A pastoral scheme establishing a team or group ministry³ may provide, or authorise the bishop by instrument under his hand with the concurrence of all the members of the ministry to provide, for establishing a group council comprising all the members of that ministry and lay representatives of each of the parochial church councils in the area, as may be specified in the scheme, to consult together on matters of common concern⁴.

Such a scheme may also provide or authorise the bishop by instrument under his hand with the rector's concurrence to provide for the election, by the annual church meeting of the parishes in the area, of a district church council for any district in the parish in which a church⁵ or place of worship⁶ is situated and of deputy churchwardens for it⁷, for the assignment to them of such of the functions of the parochial church council and churchwardens of the parish, in relation to the church, place of worship or district, as may be specified⁸, for a vicar in the team to be chairman of the district church council, and for that council's constitution, meetings and procedure⁹.

1 For the relationship between the rector and vicars in a team ministry and their respective duties, see the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 19 (6), (7), and PARAS 690, 691 ante. The Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 applies to such vicars as if they were incumbents of the benefice of the area in which the team ministry is established: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 19 (8).

2 Ibid s 19 (9). The rector must convene regular chapter meetings and preside when present, and in his absence a vicar appointed by him as deputy chairman presides: s 19 (9). The scheme, or the bishop's licence to any team vicar, may also assign to any such vicar the duties, or a share in them, of the chairmanship of the annual parochial church meeting (see PARA 563 ante) and the parochial team ministry is established: s 19 (10), Sch. 3 para 3 (1). Provision may also be made concerning other duties of the minister of the parish under the Church Representation Rules, contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 19 (10), Sch. 3 para 3 (1). If the duties of chairmanship are to be shared, the arrangements must be such that the chairman on any occasion is determined in advance: Sch. 3 para 3 (1) proviso.

3 As to group ministries, see PARA 872 post.

4 Ibid Sch. 3 para 3 (4) (a). 870-873 Team and Group Ministries

The Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 makes further provision with respect to team and group ministries.

871 Organisation of team ministries

TEXT AND NOTES--Where a benefice for which a team ministry is established becomes vacant the bishop may appoint a person holding the office of vicar in a team ministry to act as rector in the team ministry for the purposes of the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 20(3B) (see PARA 870), (7) and (10) (see TEXT AND NOTE 2), and any person so appointed is deemed to hold the office of rector in the team ministry for those purposes while the benefice remains vacant: s 20(14), added by the Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 1(12).

The General Synod may by canon empower the bishop of a diocese, in the case of a benefice in his diocese in respect of which a team ministry is established: (1) to grant licences to deaconesses, readers, licensed lay workers and other lay persons to serve in the area of the benefice for a term of years specified in the licence; and (2) to revoke the licence summarily and without further process before the expiration of the specified term for such cause and subject to such conditions as the canon provides: Deaconesses and Lay Ministry Measure 1972 s 1A, added by the Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 13. This is without prejudice to the Church of England (Legal Aid and Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1988 s 7(1) (see PARA 702): 1972 Measure s 1A, as added.

NOTE 1--Now Pastoral Measure 1983 s 20(7), (8), (9). The 1963 Measure similarly applies to deacons in a team ministry to whom the 1983 Measure s 20(3A) (see PARA 870) applies: 1983 Measure s 20(9), as amended by the 1995 Measure s 1(8).

TEXT AND NOTE 2--Now the rector in a team ministry must convene meetings of the team at regular intervals for the purpose of discussing and reaching a common mind on all matters of general concern or special interest to the team ministry and unless a pastoral scheme otherwise provides, the rector must preside, except that if he requests otherwise or is absent a deputy appointed by the meeting must preside: 1983 Measure s 20(10), amended by 1995 Measure s 1(10). Any member of the team in a team ministry may, by notice in writing, request the rector to convene a team meeting to be held within the period of 28 days following the service of the notice; and, if the rector fails to comply with such a request, that member may himself convene the meeting: 1983 Measure s 20(10A), as added by 1995 Measure s 1(11). 1968 Measure Sch 3 para 3(1) now 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 4(1).

TEXT AND NOTES 4-9--Now where a pastoral scheme establishes a team ministry for the area of a benefice which comprises a parish in which there are two or more churches or places of worship, the scheme may make provision, or authorise the bishop by instrument under his hand with the concurrence of the rector to make provision (a) for ensuring due representation of the congregation of each such church or place on the parochial church council of the parish; (b) for the election of a district church council for any district in the parish in which such church or place is situated and for the constitution, chairmanship and procedure of that council; (c) for the functions of the parochial church council of the parish which must or may be delegated to the district church council; (d) for the election or choice of deputy churchwardens for such church or place and for the functions of churchwardens of the parish which must or may be delegated to the deputy churchwardens, being provisions to the same effect as those which may be made by a scheme under the Church Representation Rules in the like case: 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 4(2).

Where a pastoral scheme establishes a team ministry for the area of a benefice which comprises more than one parish, the scheme may make provision, or authorise the bishop by instrument under his hand with the concurrence of the rector to make provision (a) for the establishment of a team council; (b) for the chairmanship, meetings and procedure of the team council; and (c) subject to the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 Sch 2 para 19 (see PARA 818A.14), for the function of the parochial church council of each parish in the area which must or may be delegated to the team council, being provisions to the same effect as those which may be made by a scheme under the Church Representation Rules in the like case: 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 4(3); 1986 Measure Sch 4 para 25.

Any provisions included in a pastoral scheme or the bishop's instrument by virtue of the above provisions cease to have effect at the expiration of such period as may be specified in the scheme or instrument, as the case may be, being a period which does not exceed five years from the date of the establishment of the team ministry to which the pastoral scheme or instrument of the bishop relates, and that period may not be extended or renewed by a subsequent scheme or instrument: 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 4(5). As to period of validity of provisions included in a scheme or instrument by virtue of ibid Sch 3 para 4(2) or (4) as originally enacted, see Sch 3 para 4(6).

Where the rector in a team ministry established for any benefice receives a statutory notice concerning ecclesiastical property in the benefice, he must (1) keep every member of the team informed of matters arising from the notice, (2) afford every member of the team an opportunity to express views thereon before taking any action in response to the notice, and (3) have regard to those views before taking any such action: 1983 Measure s 20(13), added by 1995 Measure s 1(12). For meaning of 'ecclesiastical land' and 'statutory notice' see 1983 Measure s 20(16), as added.

872. Group ministries.

A pastoral scheme may provide for establishing a group ministry for a specified group of benefices¹. Each of the incumbents has authority to perform offices and services in each of the benefices². It is the duty of all the incumbents to assist each other so as to make the best possible provision for the cure of souls throughout the area of the group ministry³. The pastoral scheme may designate the first person (who may be the existing incumbent) to hold any benefice as a benefice in the group but otherwise he is presented or collated to the benefice by the patron⁴.

The incumbents must meet as a chapter for the purpose of discussing and reaching a common mind on all matters of general concern or special interest to the group ministry⁵. The rights and duties⁶ of each incumbent in a group ministry attach to his office and, so long as the group continues and the benefice is included in it, the incumbent may not resign or withdraw from those rights and duties, except by resigning the benefice⁷. On a vacancy the new incumbent is admitted to the benefice as an office in the group ministry, with its rights and subject to its duties⁷.

The scheme may provide for establishing a group council comprising all the incumbents and lay representatives of each of the parochial church councils in the area⁸. All the incumbents of a group ministry are entitled to attend the parochial church meetings and parochial church council meetings of all the parishes in the area of the group ministry⁹.

A pastoral scheme may terminate a group ministry by abolishing the rights and duties¹⁰ attaching to the benefices in the group¹¹ or alter it by reducing, increasing or changing the benefices in the group¹², and may make supplementary, consequential and transitional provisions¹³.

1 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 20 (1). A pastoral scheme making provision for establishing a group ministry for benefices from two or more dioceses must make such transfers of benefices from one diocese to another as may be necessary to bring the whole group within the diocese designated by the scheme: s 35 (4). A scheme may include in a group ministry a benefice for which a team ministry is established, in which case s 20, Sch. 3 paras 2, 3 (4), (5), apply to all the vicars in the team ministry, as well as the rector, as they apply to the incumbents of the other benefices in the group except that directions to those incumbents in respect of their ministry in the area of the benefice for which the team ministry is established are to be given only by the rector: s 20 (6).

2 Ibid s 20 (1) (a). An incumbent performing offices and services in the area of another benefice must act in accordance with the directions of the incumbent of the other benefice: s 20 (1) (b).

3 Ibid s 20 (1) (c).

4 Ibid s 20 (3). For the meaning of 'patron', see PARA 813 note 5 ante. The patron must obtain the bishop's approval, to be given only after consultation with the other incumbents in the group, of the person to be presented: s 20 (3), Sch. 3 para 2 (1). For the meaning of 'bishop', see PARA 813 note 3 ante. If the approval is withheld the patron may bring the decision before the archbishop of the province for review and may lawfully present the person concerned if the archbishop authorises him to do so: Sch. 3 para 2 (1) proviso. Time does not run for the purposes of lapse (see PARA 826 et seq ante) whilst the bishop's decision is under review: Sch. 3 para 2 (2). Where the patron of any such benefice is required to obtain the bishop's approval or the archbishop's authorisation under the Benefices (Exercise of Rights of Presentation) Measure 1931, s 3 (see PARA 818 ante), the requirements of s 3 as well as of the Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 3 para 2, must be complied with: Sch. 3 para 2 (3).

5 Ibid s 20 (4). Unless the scheme provides for a chairman the members elect a chairman, normally for three years; he must convene regular chapter meetings and preside when present, and in his absence a deputy appointed by the meeting presides: s 20 (4).

6 Ibid under ibid s 20 (1).

7 Ibid s 20 (2).

8 Ibid s 20 (5), applying Sch. 3 para 3 (4), for which see PARA 871 ante.

TEXT AND NOTES--Repealed: Pastoral (Amendment) Measure 1982 ss 19, 28(2).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/5. BENEFICES/(5) PASTORAL SCHEMES AND ORDERS/(ii) Functions of Diocesan Pastoral Committees/C. ANCILLARY POWERS AND MATTERS/874. Endowments.

C. ANCILLARY POWERS AND MATTERS

874. Endowments.

A pastoral scheme may provide for the transfer or appropriation of the whole or a part of the endowments¹ of any benefice, whether existing or to be created, (1) to another benefice, so as to become the endowments of that benefice²; or (2) in the case of glebe land or a glebe house, to the diocesan board of finance³, or for providing a residence for a vicar in a team ministry or an assistant curate⁴; (3) to the capital account of the diocesan stipends fund⁵ or, if the endowment is a periodic payment, to its income account⁶. If the scheme would otherwise have provided that any endowments be transferred or appropriated to a benefice held by the provost of a parish church cathedral⁷ it must provide instead that they go to the cathedral chapter or that a periodical payment become part of the capitular revenue of the cathedral⁸.

A pastoral scheme or order may also provide that the whole, or a specified annual amount, or the excess over a specified amount⁹, of the endowments of a benefice be paid to the income account of the diocesan stipends fund¹⁰.

These powers with respect to the endowments or the income from them of any benefice (not being one which ceases to exist by virtue of the scheme) may only be exercised (1) where the provision is to take effect during or on the occurrence of a vacancy in the benefice¹¹; or (2) where the incumbent consent¹²; or (3) where the income of the endowments, disregarding any gift or bequest made during the existing incumbency, is not to be reduced below its amount when the incumbent was admitted¹³; or (4) where the benefice is to be held in plurality and the provision will only operate during the continuance of the plurality¹⁴. In every case the Church Commissioners must satisfy themselves that the income of the endowments of the benefice or, in the fourth case, the aggregate of the income of the endowments of the benefices, will be adequate¹⁵. These provisions apply also, as far as may be, to the endowments of an archdeaconry as they apply to the endowments of a benefice¹⁶.

1 'Endowments' in relation to a benefice (defined in PARA 768 note 1 ante) does not include a church (defined in PARA 865 note 1 ante), churchyard, parsonage house (defined in PARA 814 note 5 ante) or right of patronage (defined in PARA 813 note 5 ante), but, subject to that, any question of what constitutes the endowments or the income of the endowments is to be conclusively determined by the Church Commissioners, who may include income arising from a parsonage house: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 90 (1).

2 Ibid s 33 (1) (a). In the application of this provision to the endowments of an archdeaconry this power is a power to transfer the endowments to another archdeaconry: s 33 (10).

3 Ibid s 33 (1) (b). The board must dispose of it in accordance with Sch. 3 para 9 (see PARA 886 post): s 33 (1) (b).

4 Ibid s 33 (1) (b). As to team ministries, see PARA 870 et seq ante; as to assistant curates, see PARA 706 et seq ante.

7 For the meaning of 'parish church cathedral', see PARA 619 note 1 ante: ibid s 33 (1) proviso.

8 Ibid s 33 (1) proviso.

9 In this case, unless the scheme otherwise provides, any gift or bequest received, or any grant made by the Church Commissioners, after the confirmation of the scheme is to be disregarded in calculating the income of the endowments: s 33 (2) proviso.

10 Ibid s 33 (2). Where two or more benefices are held in plurality or are to be so held by virtue of the scheme, they may be treated for the purpose of s 33 (2) as one and the aggregate of the income of their endowments may be treated for this purpose as the endowment income of that one benefice: s 33 (2). The commissioners may, with the consent of the bishop and the diocesan board of finance, revoke or vary any provision made under s 33 (2) so as to reduce the amount of any income payable: s 33 (4).

A pastoral scheme may charge the income account of the diocesan stipends fund with the payment to the incumbent of any benefice of such stipend as may be specified¹. Any previously created charge³ on the endowment income of a benefice which forms the sole endowment, or part of the endowments, of another benefice may be extinguished by a pastoral scheme⁴.

TEXT AND NOTES--1968 Measure, as amended, consolidated in Pastoral Measure 1983; see s 31 as follows.

A pastoral scheme or order (see 1983 Measure s 37(1)(h) (as renumbered by the Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 5)). may provide for any of the following matters: (1) the designation of any house belonging to a benefice as the place of residence of the incumbent of any benefice created or affected by the scheme or of the incumbent of any benefices to be held in plurality by virtue of the scheme; (2) the designation of any house as the place of residence of any vicar in a team ministry established for the area of any benefice by the scheme; (3) the transfer to the incumbent of any benefice as his official residence, or as a site therefor, of a parsonage house, part of a parsonage house, a house situated on diocesan glebe land, any parsonage land or any diocesan glebe land; (4) the transfer of a parsonage house, part of a parsonage house or any parsonage land to the Diocesan Board of Finance to be held by the Board as part of the diocesan glebe land of the diocese or for disposal in accordance with ibid Sch 3 para 9 (see PARA 886) or for use for parochial or diocesan purposes: ibid s 31(1).

The power under head (1) or (2) to designate a house as the place of residence of an incumbent or a vicar in a team ministry is without prejudice to the subsequent exercise of any power to dispose of the house or to the subsequent exercise by the bishop of any power he may have to give directions as to the place where the incumbent or vicar is to reside: 1983 Measure s 31(2).

Where in exercise of the power under head (4) a parsonage house or part of one is to be transferred to the Diocesan Board of Finance, but any land held with that house is not to be so transferred, the pastoral scheme which provides for the transfer may also provide that the land is to be deemed to be parsonage land for the purposes of the Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976: 1983 Measure s 31(3).

In the above provisions, 'diocesan glebe land' and 'parsonage land' have the same meanings as in the 1976 Measure: 1983 Measure s 31(4).

A diocesan board of finance may sell a parsonage house transferred to it pursuant to s 31(1) for use for diocesan purposes and use the proceeds of sale for diocesan purposes: Barnes v Derby Diocesan Board of Finance [2002] EWHC 2940 (Ch), [2003] Ch 239.

A. PREPARATION AND SUBMISSION OF PASTORAL SCHEME OR ORDER

878. Procedure.

If the bishop¹ approves the draft proposals formulated by the pastoral committee², either with or without amendments³, he submits them to the Church Commissioners, who then send copies to the interested parties⁴ informing them of their right to make representations if draft schemes or orders are made⁵. The commissioners must consider the proposals and, with the bishop's agreement given after consultation with the pastoral committee, may make such amendments as appear to them desirable⁶, and if the proposals provide for a declaration of redundancy⁷, and also provide⁸ for the demolition of the church or for its being put to use involving architectural or structural changes in it, the commissioners must consult the Advisory Board for Redundant Churches⁹.

The commissioners must then prepare a draft pastoral scheme or order¹⁰, and must serve a copy on each of the interested parties¹¹ together with a notice stating that written representations may be made to the commissioners not later than a specified date being not less than twenty-eight days after service of the notice¹². If a draft scheme provides for a declaration of redundancy the commissioners must also serve a copy on the Advisory Board for Redundant Churches¹³ and publish notice of it in one or more newspapers circulating in the locality affected¹⁴, and a similar notice must also be published if the scheme makes provisions¹⁵ relating to the churchyards and burial grounds not annexed to a redundant church¹⁶. The commissioners may extend any period for making representations, either before or after that period expires¹⁷.

The commissioners must consider any representations duly made to them and may, if they think fit, afford any person an opportunity of making oral representations to their representative¹⁸. With the agreement of the bishop given after consultation with the pastoral committee the commissioners may amend the draft scheme or order, either as a result of representations or otherwise¹⁹, but notice must be given of an amended draft scheme or order as in the case of an original draft scheme or order²⁰.

If, having considered any representations, the commissioners are of opinion that the draft scheme or order should be made and do not propose to make any or any further amendments, they must (1) in the case of a draft scheme, submit it to the bishop for his consent and then seal a copy and submit the scheme so made for confirmation by Her Majesty in Council²¹; or (2) in the case of a draft order, seal a copy and submit it to the bishop, who makes the order by sealing it²².

4 For the meaning of 'interested parties', see PARA 862 note 2 ante. In the case of a parochial church council, two copies of any document must be sent so that one may be exhibited to the public: ibid s 83 (2).

5 Ibid s 3 (6). The bishop must also send to the commissioners any annexe containing comments and information furnished by the Council for Places of Worship: s 3 (6).

6 Ibid s 4 (1). These include any amendments which may seem to them necessary for the purpose of correcting any drafting mistake or omission: s 15 (1). Such amendments may be made without reference to any person: s 15 (1).

It must appear to them that the implementing of the proposals would be within the powers exercisable under Part II (ss. 16-41) (other than s 36, for which see PARA 457 ante) or Part III (ss. 42-66) by pastoral scheme or order: s 4 (3). If any of the powers concerned are exercisable only by scheme they must prepare a draft scheme (s. 4 (3) (a)), or if all the proposals can be implemented by the exercise of powers mentioned in s 38 (see PARA 860 ante) under a pastoral order they must prepare a draft order (s. 4 (3) (b)). If some but not all the proposals could be so implemented they may prepare a draft order for those proposals and a draft scheme for the others: s 4 (3) proviso (ii). With the bishop's agreement given after consultation with the pastoral committee, the commissioners may decide to proceed with some only of the proposals and then they proceed as if they were the only proposals: s 4 (3) proviso (i).

11 See note 3 supra.

12 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 5 (1). The commissioners must send the secretary of the parochial church council of any parish affected by a draft scheme copies of a notice stating the objects of the draft scheme, naming a place locally where a copy may be inspected, and stating that written representations may be made to the commissioners not later than a specified date being not less than twenty-eight days after the sending of the notice: s 5 (3). The secretary must be required to affix a copy on or near the principal door of the parish church or each of the parish churches and of any other church in the parish to which a proposed declaration of redundancy relates: s 5 (3).

13 Ibid s 5 (2) (a).

22 Ibid s 7 (b). As soon as possible after the order is made a notice must be published in the London Gazette sufficiently identifying it and stating that it has been made and where a copy may be obtained: s 9 (1). The commissioners must send a copy of the order to the interested parties (s. 9 (2)), and to the registrar of the diocese concerned, who must file it in the diocesan registry (s. 9 (3)). The validity of an order so notified may not be questioned in any legal proceedings: s 10 (1). Except as specified in the order, the order comes into operation on the date on which notice of it is gazetted: s 10 (2).

TEXT AND NOTES 1-7--Any person who has duly made written representations with respect to the draft scheme may appeal to Her Majesty in Council against the scheme or any provisions thereof, but only with the leave of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council: Pastoral Measure 1983 s 9(1) (s 9 substituted by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 4). As to such appeals and the reconsideration of draft schemes, see the 1983 Measure s 9(4)-(7) (as so added). 881. Appeals.

Any person who has duly made written representations¹ with respect to a pastoral scheme may appeal to Her Majesty in Council against the scheme or any provision of it by lodging notice of appeal in writing with the Clerk of the Privy Council by registered post or the recorded delivery service, and sending a copy to the Church Commissioners, before the expiration of twenty-eight days beginning with the day immediately after the date of the first publication of the notice of the submission of the scheme² to Her Majesty in Council for confirmation³. If notice of appeal is duly given Her Majesty in Council may order that the appeal be heard by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council⁴, whereupon the Clerk of the Privy Council gives notice of the order to the appellant and to the Church Commissioners⁵, who are the respondents, and the appellant must without delay lodge in the Privy Council registry his petition of appeal⁶ and, within fourteen days after doing so, serve a copy on the commissioners⁷ who must, without delay, lodge their answer in the registry⁸ and, within fourteen days after doing so, serve a copy on the appellant⁹. As soon as the answer is lodged the appeal must be set down¹⁰, and before the hearing the commissioners must lodge a map showing clearly the boundaries of any ecclesiastical area affected by the scheme¹¹.

At the hearing the onus is on the appellant to satisfy the Judicial Committee that the scheme is open to objections on the merits which justify its being upset¹². The committee may consider the scheme de novo and on its merits, but it will be slow to dissent, save for the most cogent reasons, from the recommendations embodied in the scheme¹³. Having heard the appeal the committee reports on it and may propose to Her Majesty in Council that the appeal should be allowed, dismissed or returned to the commissioners for reconsideration, whereupon Her Majesty in Council may accordingly (1) allow the appeal, in which case the scheme is of no effect but without prejudice to the making and submission of a further scheme¹⁴; or (2) dismiss the appeal and confirm the scheme¹⁵; or (3) return the scheme to the commissioners for reconsideration¹⁶, in which case the commissioners may withdraw it¹⁷, re-submit it without amendment¹⁸ or amend it with the agreement of the bishop given after consultation with the pastoral committee¹⁹. All bills of costs under any order of the Judicial Committee on such an appeal must be referred to the Registrar of the Privy Council for taxation²⁰.

1 As to representations, see PARA 878 ante. Where more than four persons representing the same interest have joined in representations the notice of appeal must be given and the appeal made by not more than four of them acting on behalf of all of them: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 8 (8), Sch. 2 para 2.

The registrar must send a copy of the letter to the appellant or his solicitor and to the commissioners: Sch. 2 para 8.

6 Ibid Sch. 2 para 4. The petition, five copies of which must be lodged, must state succinctly and clearly in consecutive numbered paragraphs the facts necessary to enable the Judicial Committee to make its report under s 8, and to each copy must be annexed a copy of the scheme and any documents in the appellant's possession to which he may wish to refer: Sch. 2 para 4.

7 Ibid Sch. 2 para 4. The annexed documents must also be served: Sch. 2 para 4.

881 Appeals

TEXT--The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council may give such further directions in matters of practice and procedure affecting applications for leave to appeal, and appeals, as it considers just and expedient: Pastoral Measure 1983 Sch 2 para 13.

TEXT AND NOTES 1-5--Replaced. Now any person who intends to apply for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council under 1983 Measure s 9 (see PARA 880) must on or before the date specified in the notice served on him under s 8(1A) send written notice of his intention to the Registrar of the Privy Council. The notice must be sent by registered post or recorded delivery service and a copy must be sent to the Commissioners: Sch 2 para 1 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 25). Where five or more persons acting jointly duly made written representations with respect to the draft scheme, notice of their intention to apply for leave to appeal, the application for such leave, and, if such leave is granted, the appeal, must be given or made, as the case may be, by not more than four of those persons acting on behalf of themselves and the others: 1983 Measure Sch 2 para 2.

If the Registrar of the Privy Council is satisfied that a notice has been given by a person who has duly made representations with respect to the scheme in question he shall so notify the applicant and the Commissioners. If he is not so satisfied he must inform the applicant and the Commissioners that the applicant is not entitled to proceed with his application: Sch 2 para 3 (amended by the 2005 Measure Sch 4 para 25).

Within the period of 28 days beginning with the date on which an applicant for leave to appeal receives a notification under the 1983 Measure Sch 2 para 3 from the Registrar he must lodge in the registry of the Privy Council five copies of his application for leave, and the application must state the grounds of his appeal including a succinct statement of any reasons why he considers that the scheme in question, or any particular provision of it, should not have been made, and summarise succinctly and clearly any facts on which, if such leave is granted, he intends to rely in prosecuting his appeal. There must be annexed to each copy of the application a copy of the scheme and of the Commissioners' statement given to the applicant under s 8(1A): Sch 2 para 4 (amended by the 2005 Measure Sch 4 para 25).

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council must consider an application for such leave, and if it grants leave, the Registrar of the Privy Council must forthwith register the appeal and notify the applicant and the Commissioners that he has done so: 1983 Measure Sch 2 para 5 (amended by the 2005 Measure Sch 4 para 25).

NOTE 5--Now where an appellant, having been granted leave to appeal, fails to lodge his petition of appeal within a period of three months beginning with the date on which he received a notification under ibid Sch 2 para 5 or such extended period as the Registrar of the Privy Council may allow, these steps may be taken: ibid Sch 2 para 11.

TEXT AND NOTE 6--Now after receiving notice that leave to appeal has been granted, the appellant must without delay lodge his petition of appeal: ibid Sch 2 para 6.

NOTE 6--There must also be annexed to each copy a copy of the Commissioners' statement given to the appellant under ibid s 8(1A): Sch 2 para 6 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 25).

882. Operation of pastoral schemes.

A provision of a pastoral scheme which dissolves any benefice¹, archdeaconry or rural deanery or abolishes or results in the abolition of any office of vicar in a team ministry² may be brought into operation without the assent of the incumbent, archdeacon, rural dean or vicar and without waiting for a vacancy to occur³.

A pastoral scheme, any provision of which will or may have the effect of vacating a benefice⁵ or of dissolving a benefice or archdeaconry or of abolishing the office of vicar in a team ministry which is not already vacant, must provide that provision is not to come into operation until a date at least six months after the scheme is gazetted⁶ or after the happening of any event or contingency upon which the operation of the scheme depends⁷.

Where a pastoral scheme creates a new benefice¹ by the union of benefices any church², churchyard, burial ground, parsonage house³ or other property previously vested in right of his benefice in the incumbent of any constituent benefice vests in the incumbent of the new one⁴, subject to any express provision of the scheme and to provisions⁵ which apply where property is held on charitable trusts⁶.

Where by virtue of a pastoral scheme (other than one to which the foregoing applies) or a pastoral order any church or churchyard or burial ground previously vested in the incumbent of a benefice becomes situated in a parish⁷ belonging to another benefice, then, subject as aforesaid, the property and any movable property used for its purposes and so vested vests in the incumbent of that other benefice⁸. If any movable property used for the purposes of a church or churchyard is vested in the churchwardens or parochial church council of a parish and as a result of a pastoral scheme or order the church or churchyard becomes situated in another parish, then subject as aforesaid the property vests in the churchwardens or parochial church council of that other parish⁹.

Where property is transferred by a pastoral scheme or order, or vests in a person by virtue of the general vesting provision¹⁰, it vests without any conveyance and free from all previously existing trusts and charges in favour of any benefice¹¹.

With the incumbrancer's consent a scheme or order may provide for the apportionment of any sum charged on property of which only part is transferred, and for securing the sums so apportioned on the respective parts of the property¹².

Where a loan¹ has been made in respect of property vested in an incumbent in right of his benefice and the property is transferred by a pastoral scheme or order to the incumbent of another benefice or vests in him by virtue of any provision of the Pastoral Measure 1968, the loan becomes secured on the property and revenues of the benefice to which the transfer is made². If the property is transferred to the diocesan board of finance the Church Commissioners may, unless the scheme or order otherwise provides, cause the loan to be discharged immediately out of the diocesan pastoral account or any proceeds of the disposal of the property³.

Where any property belonging to a benefice is transferred by a pastoral scheme or order to, or is, by virtue of the Pastoral Measure 1968, vested in the diocesan board of finance or the incumbent of another benefice, the commissioners and the diocesan parsonages board⁴ may respectively make consequential variations in any existing order or assessment made under the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Measures 1923 to 1951 and may apply any such order or assessment or part of it to any new benefice affected by the transfer or vesting⁵.

Where any property is transferred¹ by a pastoral scheme or order to the diocesan board of finance² for disposal, the board may dispose of it as a whole or in parts and at such time or times as it deems right, and the board's powers include powers of sale, letting and exchange of land³.

The scheme or order may provide for the application of the net proceeds of disposal (including net premiums and rents), or any part of them, towards the provision of a church⁴ or the provision, restoration, improvement or repair of a church or parsonage house⁵ or a house for a vicar in a team ministry or an assistant curate⁶.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, the board may elect to take over and hold as part of its corporate property any property transferred to it for disposal, giving such consideration as, with its concurrence, the commissioners may determine as representing the fair value of the property⁷.

Where a pastoral scheme or order provides for the transfer of property to the board for use for diocesan or parochial purposes the transfer is, scheme otherwise provides, without consideration, in which case no rent is payable by a parochial church council which uses it for parochial purposes⁸. The board may appoint such a council as managers or managing trustees of any property to be used for parochial purposes⁹.

Sums to be paid into any of these accounts are taken over and held by the commissioners as part of their corporate property, and they must credit the appropriate fund or account with an equivalent amount charged upon their general fund: Sch. 3 para 10 (1). 887. Ecclesiastical charities.

Where on the dissolution of a benefice by a pastoral scheme, whether in consequence of a union of benefices or otherwise, any property of a charity established for ecclesiastical purposes of the Church of England is vested in or under the management or control of the incumbent, with or without other persons, or of a corporation of which he is a member, the trusts of the charity or constitution of the corporation have effect with the substitution for that incumbent of the incumbent of the new benefice created by the union or, in a case arising otherwise than in consequence of a union, of the incumbent of a benefice¹ specified by the Charity Commissioners².

Where a pastoral scheme brings about a union of benefices or parishes or alters the area of a benefice or parish and the purposes of an ecclesiastical charity are defined by reference to a benefice or parish affected by such a scheme, the trusts of the charity take effect with reference to the benefice or parish created by the union, or as altered³.

Where, by reason of the dissolution of a parish by pastoral scheme, the parochial church council ceases to exist and any property vested in it or held on its behalf is not otherwise dealt with under the foregoing provisions, the property, without any conveyance or other assurance, vests in or is held on behalf of the parochial church council of the parish in which the parish church of the dissolved parish, or its site, is situated, for the like purpose, as nearly as may be, as those for which it was previously applicable⁴.

If as a condition of any benefaction, attendance at or the performance of divine service or any other act is required at a church which ceases to be used for divine service in consequence of a declaration of redundancy⁵ made by a pastoral scheme and the case is not provided for under the foregoing provisions, the parish church of the parish where the redundant church or its site is situated becomes the relevant place for the purpose of the performance of the required act⁶.

(vi) Compensation of Clergy

888. Principles of entitlement.

The incumbent of a benefice dissolved by a pastoral scheme or deemed¹ to be vacated, the archdeacon of a archdeaconry dissolved by a pastoral scheme and a vicar in a team ministry whose office is abolished by or as a result of a pastoral scheme or order are entitled to compensation for any consequential loss², and special provisions³ relate to pensions payable under the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961⁴.

The right to and amount of compensation are determined in the first instance by the pastoral committee, with a right to appeal by the claimant to the appeal tribunal for the relevant province⁵. The committee's compensation functions may not be delegated to a sub-committee⁶. At any meeting of the committee at which a compensation decision or determination is made or the person affected is interviewed the members present must include the bishop⁷ or suffragan bishop and the member representing the diocesan board of finance⁸.

Compensation consists of periodical payments or a lump sum payment, or partly of one and partly of the other⁹. The pastoral committee must take into account the emoluments of any ecclesiastical office (including another benefice) to which the claimant has been or is to be appointed and any other regular remunerated employment in which he is or is to be appointed and any other regular remunerated employment in which he is or is to be engaged¹⁰, and may take into account those of any ecclesiastical office which he refuses without good reason to accept, if the committee considers it reasonably comparable to the office in respect of which compensation is claimed¹¹. Any person who has been refused compensation or who is receiving or has received compensation may apply to the committee for a grant, renewal or increase of compensation¹² on the ground that circumstances¹³ have materially altered to his disadvantage¹⁴.

Every claimant, applicant¹⁵ and person receiving compensation by way of periodical payments must disclose to the committee any ecclesiastical office to which he has been appointed or to which has been offered to him, together with any other remunerated employment in which he is or is to be engaged and any specified matter¹⁶ entitling the committee to refuse a claim¹⁷.

If anyone claiming, receiving or having received compensation (1) executes a deed of relinquishment¹⁸, (2) becomes a member of a religious body not in communion with the Church of England¹⁹, or (3) becomes disqualified from holding preferment in the Church of England²⁰, the pastoral committee may refuse his claim or order that no further payment be made²¹.

² Ibid s 25, Sch. 4, PARA 1. The same persons are also entitled to compensation for loss following upon resignation if they resign, by agreement with the pastoral committee, to enable a pastoral scheme or order to come into operation or to facilitate its doing so: Sch. 4 para 3. Where the incumbent of a benefice for which a team ministry is established is designated or appointed the first rector, for a term of years, he is entitled to compensation for loss if required to vacate his office on the expiration of any term for which it is held: Sch. 4 para 2.

The loss suffered includes loss arising from ceasing to occupy the parsonage house or other official residence and any expenses arising from a change of residence: Sch. 4 para 4. For the meaning of 'parsonage house', see PARA 814 note 5 ante.

3 Thus, any period after the dissolution, abolition, vacation or resignation and before his retirement during which he is not in pensionable service (as defined in PARA 742 ante) is deemed for the purposes of the Clergy pensions Measure 1961 to be a period of pensionable service, except for any period after the happening of the events described in the Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 4 para 10 (see infra), and in the case of a vicar in a team ministry, any period after his term of office would have ended: Sch. 4 para 12 (1) (a). On attaining the retiring age (as defined in PARA 743 note 2 ante) he is deemed to retire unless he is then in actual pensionable service, and if his total period of such service is less than the qualifying period (as defined in PARA 742 ante) it is deemed to be increased to that period: Sch. 4 para 12 (1) (b). This increase is disregarded in determining compensation under Sch. 4 para 12 (2). If he is thus deemed to retire and his total period of pensionable service is less than forty years the pastoral committee may add to his pension and the pension (if any) of his widow or dependant periodical payments to bring it up to the amount payable after forty years' service; otherwise compensation ceases to be payable when he is deemed to retire or retires: Sch. 4 para 12 (1) (c). The Committee may, with the agreement of the Church of England Pensions Board and the person concerned, modify these provisions or substitute others which appear more appropriate, provided they are not less advantageous to the person concerned: Sch. 4 para 12 (1) Proviso. As to clergy pensions generally, see PARA 738 et seq ante.

4 Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 4 para 12. This extends to any dissolution, abolition, vacation or resignation under Sch. 4, PARAS 1-3: see the text to notes 1, 2 supra.

5 Ibid Sch. 4 para 5. As to the appeal tribunals, see PARA 890 post. The Church Commissioners are empowered to make procedural rules relating to claims for compensation, alterations, termination and suspension of payments and proceedings before appeal tribunals: Sch. 4 para 15 (1). The rules must be laid before and approved by the General Synod, and operate as a statutory instrument made under an Act providing that rules be subject to annulment by resolution of either House of Parliament: Sch. 4 para 15 (2); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2). 888-891 Compensation of Clergy

The provisions of Pastoral Measure 1968 Sch 4 paras 5-14, 16 and 17 were extended to apply to compensation available under Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure 1977: ibid s 13(3); Church of England (Legal Aid and Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1988 Sch 2. The 1968 Measure is now consolidated in the Pastoral Measure 1983; see Sch 4.

Certain paragraphs referred to above are amended where stated for the purposes of the 1977 Measure only; as to general amendments now contained in the 1983 Measure, see PARAS 888, 889, 890, 891.

The 1983 Measure Sch 4 applies to any person in respect of whom a penalty of removal from office or revocation of a licence to serve in a diocese is imposed under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003: 2003 Measure s 41.

888 Principles of entitlement

NOTE 1--Now Pastoral Measure 1983 s 25 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 8).

NOTE 2--Now ibid s 26 (amended by Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 4), Sch 4 para 1. Schedule 4 now has effect in relation to a deacon to whom the 1983 Measure s 20(3A) (see PARA 870) applies as it has effect in relation to a vicar in a team ministry: s 26(2), as added.

Entitlement to compensation for loss following upon resignation arises on resignation after the making of the scheme or order: 1983 Measure Sch 4 para 4 (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 21). Where the incumbent of a benefice being a benefice for the area of which a team ministry is established or a benefice dissolved by a pastoral scheme, is designated or chosen as the first holder of any office of vicar in a team ministry, he is, if he is required to vacate the office on the expiration of any term for which it is held, entitled to compensation for consequential loss: 1983 Measure Sch 4 para 3. 1968 Measure Sch 4 paras 2, 4 now 1983 Measure Sch 4 paras 2, 5.

NOTE 3--Now 1983 Measure Sch 4 para 13. In 1968 Measure Sch 4 para 12(1)(c) (now 1983 Measure para 13(1)(c); Priests (Ordination of Women) Measure 1993 Sch 3 para 8; SI 2005/3325), for 'forty years' read 'the prescribed period' which means, in relation to a person who is deemed to retire for the purposes of the 1961 Measure (replaced in part by the Church of England Pensions Regulations 1988, SI 1988/2256; SI 1992/1748; SI 2005/3325) and 1983 Measure Sch 4 para 13, the minimum period of pensionable service the performance of which by him would entitle him to a pension at the highest rate applicable in his case: Sch 4 para 13(1). Provision that otherwise compensation ceases to be payable when he is deemed to retire or retires omitted.

These provisions apply in relation to any lump sum payable in accordance with any rules made under Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1967 s 3 to a person entitled to a pension under 1961 Measure as they apply in relation to a pension under the 1961 Measure (replaced in part: SI 1988/2256): 1983 Measure Sch 4 para 13(2). 1968

Measure Sch 4 para 12(1) proviso now 1983 Measure Sch 4 para 13(3); Priests (Ordination of Women) Measure 1993 Sch 3 para 8; SI 2005/3325.

1968 Measure Sch 4 para 12(2) now 1983 Measure Sch 4 para 13(4) as follows: compensation is not payable for any loss which the incumbent, archdeacon or vicar in a team ministry might suffer by reason of the provision in Sch 4 para 13(1) (b) that on attaining the retiring age within the meaning of the 1961 Measure he is deemed to retire for the purposes of that Measure and Sch 4 para 13, and, except as provided by Sch 4 para 13(1) (c), compensation ceases to be payable when he attains that age. Cf Re Flenley [1981] Fam 64, PARA 733F.

In determining the amount of the compensation, if any, to which the incumbent, archdeacon or vicar in a team ministry is entitled under Sch 4 in respect of any period before he retires or is deemed to retire for the purposes of the 1961 Measure and Sch 4 para 13, any benefit which may accrue to him by virtue of Sch 4 para 13(1) is to be disregarded: Sch 4 para 13(5).

Any reference in Sch 4 para 13 to the 1961 Measure is construed as a reference to that Measure, as amended by any regulations approved under Clergy Pensions (Amendment) Measure 1972 s 6 and now replaced in part by the 1988 Regulations, SI 1988/2256: 1983 Measure Sch 4 para 13(6).

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Now, the incumbent of any benefice which is resigned or vacated in the circumstances mentioned in Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure 1977 s 4 or s 10 is entitled to compensation for any consequential loss and special provisions relate to pensions payable under the Clergy Pensions Measure 1961: Pastoral Measure 1968 Sch 4 para 12(1); Incumbents (Vacation of Benefices) Measure 1977 s 13(3) (b).

889. Claim for compensation.

A Claim for compensation must be made in writing and sent to the secretary of the pastoral committee¹, before the date on which the relevant provision of the pastoral scheme or order comes into operation or not later than thirteen weeks after that date². The claim must give particulars of the loss suffered³ and of the matters which it is the claimant's duty to disclose⁴. The amount claimed must be stated, whether as periodical payments or a lump sum, or partly one and partly the other (stating the amounts under each head⁵).

The claimant has a right to an interview with the committee before the determination of his claim⁶, at which he may be represented by a barrister or solicitor or assisted by a friend⁷.

The committee must give a reasoned decision in writing within twenty-eight days of the making of the claim or of the interview⁸. It must explain how the amount of compensation is calculated, and is not limited to the amount claimed, or bound by the form in which compensation is claimed⁹.

Before the committee exercises its powers with regard to the suspension, reduction or termination of compensation, or the recovery of payments¹⁰, the secretary must give written notice to the person concerned that the committee is considering the exercise of those powers on grounds specified in the notice¹¹. That person may, within fourteen days after the giving of the notice, send written representations to the secretary with respect to any relevant matters¹². The committee must give a reasoned decision in writing¹³.

An application¹⁴ for a grant or renewal of compensation or for an increase on the ground of change of circumstances must be in writing sent or delivered to secretary¹⁵, giving particulars of the change and, if it is for a grant or increase, must state the amount claimed, whether by way of periodical payments or a lump sum, or partly one and partly the other (stating the amounts under each head)¹⁶.

1 Compensation of Clergy Rules 1970, S.I. 1970 No. 1009, r 3(i). The committee concerned is the pastoral committee for the diocese in which the incumbent, vicar in a team ministry or archdeacon concerned was serving before the coming into operation of the relevant provision of the pastoral scheme or order affecting his benefice or diocese or, in the case of a claim made before then, the diocese in which he is serving: r 2. The committee must take steps to inform all persons who have or may have a right to compensation of the name and address of the committee secretary, whose duty it is to give assistance to those persons in connection with claims or other proceedings under the rules: r 13.

2 Ibid r 3 (2). The committee may extend the time for making a claim, and the making of a claim does not preclude the giving of supplementary written information or any addition to or amendment of the claim: r 3 (2).

3 This includes any loss arising from the claimant's ceasing to occupy the parsonage house or other official residence and expenses arising from a change of residence: ibid r 4 (1).

4 Ibid r 4 (1). As to these matters, see PARA 888, text to notes 15-17 ante.

5 Ibid r 4 (2). The claimant may be required to verify information given or to give further information: r 4 (3).

890. Appeal tribunals.

For the purposes of compensation provisions there is an appeal tribunal for each of the provinces of Canterbury and York¹, constituted of (1) the Dean of the Arches and Auditor, who is chairman; the vicar-general of the Province of York, who is deputy chairman²; (2) four persons nominated for each appeal by the Dean of the Arches or the vicar-general of the Province of York from a panel of six appointed by the Lower House of the convocation of the province concerned from among its members³; and (3) two persons similarly nominated for each appeal from a panel of four appointed by the House of Laity of the General Synod⁴. The Church Commissioners must appoint a secretary to the appeal tribunal for each province or to both tribunals⁵.

The tribunal's expenses in connection with any appeal are paid out of money standing to the credit of the diocesan pastoral account of the diocese from which the appeal is brought⁶.

Any costs reasonably incurred by a claimant⁷ are to be reunded to him out of the legal aid fund⁸, and any question whether costs have been so incurred or as to their amount is to be determined on application to the diocesan registrar with a right of appeal to the chancellor⁹.

Sequestration¹ of a benefice is a process issued by the bishop or other Ordinary, or by an ecclesiastical court, whereby the profits and income of the benefice are ordered to be taken by one or more persons, called sequestrators, and to be applied in the manner required by the circumstances of the case, care being taken that the duties of the church are provided for out of them².

Sequestration of a benefice is issued either for the recovery of a debt from the incumbent or on his bankruptcy¹, or in the course of proceedings against him in an ecclesiastical court², or during a vacancy in the benefice³, or in certain cases of default by the incumbent⁴. It may also be issued where the incumbent is suffering from mental disorder⁵.

(ii) Sequestration for Debt or on Bankruptcy

894. How sequestration is obtained.

Sequestration is the legal means by which the creditors of an incumbent can obtain satisfaction of their debts out of the profits of his benefice¹. It is obtained by a writ of fieri facias de bonis ecclesiasticis or a writ of sequestrari facias de bonis ecclesiasticis issued out of the court in which a judgment or order has been obtained for payment of the debt, after a writ of execution has been issued to the sheriff and the sheriff has made a return that the debtor has no goods or chattels out of which the debt can be satisfied, but that he is incumbent of a benefice named in the return². The writ can be issued in an action in the Chancery Division of the High Court where the defendant has been attached for non-payment of a sum which he has been ordered by the court to pay, and non est inventus has been returned to the attachment, and the ordinary writ of sequestration has been thereupon issued, and the return has been made to it that the defendant has no lay property, but is incumbent of a benefice named in the return³.

The writ is admissible in evidence even if the judgment roll contains no entry of its having been awarded⁴. It must not be issued for a sum exceeding the amount of the debt due⁵.

895. Warrant of sequestration.

The writ is directed to the bishop and, having recited the judgment debt and the return, commands him to enter into the benefice and church and take and sequester them into his possession, and hold them until he has levied the debt, costs and interest out of their profits, and to make a return of the amount after execution¹. The writ must be delivered to the bishop to be executed by him², and on its delivery to him he issues a warrant of sequestration³ to a named sequestrator, which is published by being affixed on or near the door of the church or churches in the benefice⁴. The bishop is personally responsible for the execution of the writ, however, and for any wrong done by a sequestrator, and the warrant of sequestration is merely a direction by the bishop to his own agent to do what the court has ordered him to do⁵.

Possession is taken, and the property is bound, from the time when the warrant is issued and the sequestrator appointed, but publication is necessary to give priority against conflicting rights⁶. After the warrant has been issued the creditor cannot require the bishop to hand the writ back to enable him to indorse a claim for interest upon it⁷.

As between two writs of sequestration against the same benefice, in the absence of a court direction to the contrary, the bishop must issue his warrants of sequestration under them in the order in which they are delivered to him, and not in the order of their teste¹. Where several judgments are entered against an incumbent and writs of sequestration are granted in aid of them, however, the court may require the bishop to issue sequestration in the order in which the judgments are entered². Where a benefice is under sequestration at the suit of a judgment creditor, a subsequent judgment creditor who has taken out sequestration can obtain in the Chancery Division of the High Court an account of the surplus profits in the hands of the first sequestrator, and an order for payment out of them of his debt³.

897. Continuance of sequestration.

A writ of sequestration is a continuing execution and remains in force, without reference to the date on which it is nominally returnable, until the debt and costs to be levied under it are realised, or until the bishop is ruled to return it, in which case the return puts an end to the writ. If the bishop to whom the writ is directed dies during its continuance his successor is bound to return it¹. Where a sequestration is granted to levy the amount of a mortgage debt and the mortgaged property is foreclosed and sold for a sum not sufficient to satisfy the debt, the sequestration will not be set aside but will continue for the levy of the balance².

The sequestration need not be published before the day on which the writ is nominally returnable³. Until the full amount is levied the return of the writ should not be moved for, but an account should be demanded from the bishop from time to time as to the amounts which he has levied⁴. If the bishop returns the writ before the execution is satisfied it will be sent back to him to remove the return and to certify instead what has been done under it⁵. The sequestrator ought to make payment to the creditor at the earliest possible moment⁶. Where either on the bankruptcy of an incumbent¹, or under a judgment recovered against him, a sequestration of his benefice issues² and continues for six months, the bishop, after the expiration of that six months and so long as the sequestration continues, is to take order for the performance of the services of the church of the benefice, and may appoint and license for that purpose one or more curates or additional curates, as the case may require, with such stipend in each case, specified in the licence, as the bishop thinks fit³. Every such stipend is to be paid by the sequestrator out of money coming to his hands under the sequestration so long as it continues, in priority to all sums payable by virtue of the bankruptcy or the judgment under which the sequestration has issued, but not in priority of liabilities in respect of charges on the benefice⁴. Where any such sequestration continues for more than six months and it appears to the bishop that scandal or inconvenience is likely to arise from the incumbent continuing to perform the services of the church while the sequestration continues, the bishop may, after the expiration of the six months, inhibit the incumbent from performing any services of the church within the diocese during the continuance of the sequestration⁵.

905. Sequestration for non-residence and unlawful trading.

Where it appears to a bishop that the incumbent of a benefice in the diocese, not having a licence to reside elsewhere than in the house of residence of the benefice, nor having a legal cause of exemption from residence¹, does not sufficiently² reside on the benefice, his residence there may be enforced by monition and, if necessary, by an order, instead of or after proceedings for the statutory penalties for non-residence³, and in case of non-compliance with the order the bishop may sequester the profits of the benefice until it is complied with or until sufficient reasons for non-compliance are stated and proved⁴. The profits of the benefice of an incumbent who has been suspended for unlawful trading⁵ are liable to sequestration in a similar manner⁶.

The incumbent may, within one month after service upon him of the order for sequestration, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who must make such order as may appear to him just in relation to the sequestration, or to the sequestered profits, for the return of them or of any part of them to the incumbent, or to a sequestrator appointed at the suit of a creditor or otherwise, but the sequestration is to be in force during the appeal⁷.

If, in obedience to a monition or order requiring him to reside, whether a sequestration has issued or not, the incumbent begins to reside, but within twelve months after commencing residence wilfully absents himself from the benefice for one month, either at one time or in the aggregate, the bishop may, without any further monition or order, sequester and apply the profits of the benefice in the same manner as in the case of a sequestration to enforce an original order for residence, and may proceed in that manner in similar circumstances as often as occasion requires⁸.

In proceedings by monition and sequestration for non-residence and for non-payment of curates, the monition issues under the bishop's hand and seal and is served personally on the incumbent, and immediately after service is returned into the consistory court of the diocese, where it is filed with an affidavit of service¹. The incumbent may thereupon show cause by affidavit or otherwise why a sequestration should not issue according to the terms of the monition, and if he does not show sufficient cause to the contrary within the time assigned by the monition the sequestration issues under the court's seal and is served and returned into the registry of the court in the same manner as is required with respect to the monition². Where a monition has been served on an incumbent requiring him to reside on his benefice, no sequestration is to issue until an order requiring him to proceed and reside upon his benefice within thirty days has been served upon him in the same manner as is required with respect to the monition³.

On a benefice becoming void sequestration is issued, usually to the churchwarden¹, to receive the profits and pay out of them the cost of serving the cure during the vacancy², and to account for the net balance to the succeeding incumbent³, who may maintain an action against the sequestrators for this balance⁴. If the profits received by the sequestrators during the vacancy are not sufficient to pay the assigned stipend or stipends, the deficiency is to be paid by the succeeding incumbent out of the profits of the benefice, and the bishop may, if necessary, enforce the payment by monition and sequestration of these profits⁵.

Where the bishop has declared a 'suspension period'⁶, he must appoint sequestrators during that period⁷.

910 Sequestration on avoidance of benefice

TEXT AND NOTES--During the vacancy of a benefice and otherwise where the profits of a benefice are to be sequestered, the churchwardens of every parish comprised in the benefice and the rural dean and such other person as the bishop of the diocese appoints, if he considers it desirable to do so, are to be the sequestrators of the benefice and any rule of law requiring the bishop to issue a writ of sequestration on a benefice becoming vacant ceases to have effect: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 s 1(1). In the case of a benefice in respect of which a team ministry is established, s 1(1) has effect as if for the words 'rural dean' there is substituted 'ministers in the team ministry', provided that the bishop of the diocese concerned, if he considers that any of the ministers in the team ministry should not be a sequestrator of the benefice, may direct accordingly: s 1(1A), proviso, added by Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 17. 'Minister' in relation to a team ministry means a person (1) who is a vicar in a team ministry, or (2) to whom a special responsibility for pastoral care in respect of a part of the benefice has been assigned under the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 20(8A) (see PARA 870), that part of the benefice not being a part in respect of which a special cure of souls has been assigned to a vicar in the team ministry by a scheme under that Measure or by his licence from the bishop (see PARA 690): 1992 Measure s 1(1B), as added.

In addition to the payment of the cost of serving the cure¹ the sequestrators² may make provision for (1) the proper care, custody and upkeep of the house of residence of the benefice and of any land belonging to or occupied with the house; (2) the cost of professional assistance required by them in connection with their duties; and (3) the payment of interest on money borrowed by them in the exercise of their duties³. Subject to the rights of an outgoing incumbent or the representatives of a deceased incumbent, the sequestrators may sell the produce of any garden or other land belonging to the house of residence and treat the proceeds as part of the income of the benefice⁴.

1 See PARA 910 ante. As to the sequestrators' powers during a 'suspension period', see PARA 815 ante.

2 Certain additional powers are exercised by sequestrators appointed where the bishop has suspended the filling of a vacant benefice under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 67: see s 68, Sch. 7, and PARA 815 ante.

3 Benefices (Sequestrations) Measure 1933, s 2 (1). These powers are, however, exercisable only with the approval of the bishop who may, at his discretion, give a general approval of the powers or some of them being exercised or sanction only particular items of expenditure: s 2 (2) (i). Where he thinks it desirable to give directions, the powers must be exercised in the manner and to the extent which he directs: s 2 (2) (ii). He may delegate his powers so far as they relate to benefices within a particular archdeaconry to the archdeacon of that archdeaconry, and may revoke the delegation: s 2 (3). References to the bishop in the Benefices (Sequestrations) Measure 1933 are, during a vacancy of the see, deemed to refer to the guardian of the spiritualities of the see (as to whom see PARA 489 ante): Vacancies in Sees Measure 1959, s 5 (1). The sequestrator is a bailiff or agent to the bishop, and gives security for duly accounting for the money received by him. His office does not pass to his executors, administrators or assigns¹. He is bound to provide out of the profits of the benefice for the repairs of the house of residence and glebe buildings and for their reinstatement in case of fire, as well as for the performance of divine service; in fact, for all outgoings which are inseparable from the benefice². 932. Cure of souls and income during vacancy.

When a benefice becomes vacant a sequestration is issued¹, and the duties are performed by a curate or curates appointed by the bishop², or, in default of any appointment by him, employed for the purpose by the sequestrators³. The fact that any stipendiary curate who is licensed to the parish continues in office, his stipend being paid out of the income of the benefice during the vacancy⁴, sometimes renders the employment of any other clergyman unnecessary. The bishop may assign to every curate appointed to perform the duties a stipend not exceeding the net annual income of the benefice⁵. The sequestrators pay the amount out of the profits of the benefice which come to their hands, and if these are not sufficient the incoming incumbent is liable to pay the balance out of the profits received by him⁶. If, on the other hand, the sequestrators have a balance of profits after paying for the services and for the costs of the sequestration, the new incumbent is entitled to it⁷.

(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP

(i) In general

933. The Book of Common Prayer.

Following limited liturgical reform in the reign of Henry VIII the accession of Edward VI in 1547 inaugurated a series of far-reaching changes designed to bring worship in the Church in England more into line with Reformation theology. The administration of Holy Communion to the people in both kinds was ordered by statute¹, and in 1549 the first English Book of Common Prayer was published and its use was made compulsory². Far-reaching as the liturgical changes effected by this prayer book were, it failed to satisfy the more extreme reformers, and three years later another prayer book was introduced³. The accession of Mary in 1553 led to the repeal of the Edwardian enactments and the reintroduction of the earlier Latin rite⁴, but in Elizabeth's reign the Second Prayer Book of Edward VI, with important changes, was brought into use again⁵. It was further revised in the reign of James I⁶, but its use was forbidden during the Commonwealth⁷. Upon the restoration of the monarchy the prayer book was reintroduced, in amended form, as the Book of Common Prayer of 1662⁸, despite puritan objections to many of its features⁹. This prayer book, with minor amendments¹⁰, has remained in constant use to the present day. Under the present legislation its use is authorised¹¹ and its continuing availability for use safeguarded¹².

1 Sacrament Act 1547, s 8: Royal Proclamation (Order of the Communion) dated March 1548. 'In both kinds' signifies both the bread and the wine.

2 Act of Uniformity 1548, s 1 (repealed). The prayer book is generally known as the First Prayer Book of Edward VI.

3 The Second Prayer Book of Edward VI. Its use was enforced by the Act of Uniformity 1551, s 4 (repealed).

4 1 Mar. sess. 2, c. 2 (Repeal of Acts) (1553) (repealed).

5 Act of Uniformity 1558, s 1 (repealed). This Act repealed 1 Mar. sess. 2, c. 2 (Repeal of Acts) (1553), and amended the Second Prayer Book of Edward VI. The resulting prayer book was less extreme than its predecessor of 1552, which had marked the zenith of protestant reform.

6 The changes effected by James I arose from the Hampton Court Conference attended by the King, in 1604. It was at this council that it was decided to embark upon a new translation of the Bible, and in 1611 the 'Authorised' or 'King James' version was published. In fact the version has no statutory or other formal authority, and the name 'authorised' probably arose from the king's close association with the translation which was undertaken, as the full title shows, 'by His Majesties speciall commandement'.

7 This was effected by a Parliamentary Ordinance of 1645, which replaced the prayer book with a Directory for the Public Worship of God in the Three Kingdoms.

8 Act of Uniformity 1662, s 1 (repealed). This followed the abortive deliberations of the Savoy Conference, set up by Warrant dated 25th March 1661, as promised by Royal Declaration dated 25th October 1660, and the more fruitful deliberations of the Convocations of Canterbury and York. References in this title to the Book of Common Prayer are references to this prayer are references to this prayer book of 1662, the long title of which is 'The Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments and other Rites and Ceremonies of the Church according to the Use of the Church of England together with the Psalter or Psalms of David pointed as they are to be sung or said in Churches and the Form and Manner of Making Ordaining and Consecrating of Bishops Priests and Deacons'. There is commonly bound up with it the Thirty-Nine Articles, or Articles of Religion, the full title of which is 'Articles agreed upon by the Archbishops and Bishops of both Provinces and the Whole Clergy in the Convocation holden at London in the year 1562 for the avoiding of Diversities of Opinions and for the establishing of Consent touching True Religion'. A table of kindred and affinity is also included.

9 Its introduction led to the resignation of nearly 2,000 ministers, who objected to the kneeling at Holy Communion, the retention of the surplice, the use of the sign of the Cross at baptism etc.

10 As now printed the Book of Common Prayer incorporates amendments effected by eg the Calendar (New Style) Act 1750; Prayer Book (Tables of Lessons) Act 1871; Clergy (Ordination and Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1964, ss 3-5 (repealed); Prayer Book (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1965, s 3 (repealed); Prayer Book (Further Provisions) Measure 1968, ss 1 (1), (2), 3 (repealed). The repeal of the cited provisions of the Measures of 1664, 1965 and 1968 by the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 6 (3), Sch. 2, does not affect the amendments to the rubrics in the Book of Common Prayer effected by those Measures: s 6 (4), Sch. 3 para 4.

Further, the prayers for or referring to the Sovereign or other named members of the royal family have from time to time been updated by Order in Council made under the Act of Uniformity 1662, s 21 (repealed), and may henceforth be revised by royal warrant under the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (7): see PARA 357 ante.

Other enactments affecting the Book of Common Prayer and the forms of service are the Act of Uniformity Amendment Act 1872 (repealed), although the shortened forms of Morning and Evening Prayer set out in the Schedule to that Act are saved by the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, Sch. 3 para 3, and Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B1 para 1 (b) (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3: see PARA 939 post); Revised Tables of Lessons Measure 1922 (see PARA 945 post); Holy Table Measure 1964 (repealed, but see Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon F2, and PARA 966 post); Vestures of Ministers Measure 1964 (repealed, but see Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B8, and PARA 970 post); Prayer Book (Versions of the Bible) Measure 1965 (see PARA 945 post); Admission to Holy Communion Measure 1972 (see PARA 977 post).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(i) In general/934. The principle of conformity.

934. The principle of conformity.

The clergy were formerly required to adhere strictly and exclusively to the forms of service contained in the Book of Common Prayer. All ministers¹ in all places of public worship were to use in the morning and evening prayers, in the celebration and administration of both sacraments², and in all other public and common prayer, the forms set forth in the Book of Common Prayer³, and no form or order of common prayers, administration of sacraments, rites or ceremonies was to be openly used other than what was prescribed in that book⁴. That principle of uniformity has in recent years been replaced by a principle of conformity⁵ in consequence of legislation repealing the old statutes⁶ and making provision for the authorisation of forms of service additional to those contained in the Book of Common Prayer⁷. Subject to a limited discretion allowed to ministers⁸ every minister must use only the authorised forms of service⁹. Deviation from the Book of Common Prayer is permitted only insofar as other forms of service are authorised, or insofar as a minister is allowed to exercise a discretion to vary the authorised forms. The declaration of assent which is required to be made by a clerk in holy orders at the time of ordination and on admission to a benefice includes a promise to use, in public prayer and administration of the sacraments, only the forms of service authorised or allowed by canon, which include the forms prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer¹⁰.

1 As to the duties of incumbents in relation to services, see PARA 698 et seq ante.

2 Flemmings Case (1584) 1 Leon 295. The two sacraments of the Gospel are Baptism and Holy Communion: Book of Common Prayer, Articles of Religion 25.

3 Act of Uniformity 1662, s 1 (repealed).

4 Ibid s 13 (repealed). The object of a Statute of Uniformity, as stated in the preamble to the Act of 1662, was to produce a universal agreement in the worship of Almighty God, an object which would be wholly frustrated if each minister, on his own view of the relative importance of the details of the service, were to be at liberty to omit, to add to or to alter any of those details: Martin v Mackonochie (1868) LR 2 PC 365 at 382, 383. Hence, in strictness a minister had no discretion to make any such variation, even by way of omitting words from a lesson directed to be read: Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 14 (revoked); Colefatt v Newcomb (1705) 2 Ld Raym 1205; Newbery v Goodwin (1811) 1 Phillim 282. See also Bennett v Bonaker (1828) 2 Hag Ecc 25; Bennett v Bonaker (1830) 3 Hag Ecc 17. Some slight deviation would, however, be overlooked: see Newbery v Goodwin supra. For the discretion which the law allows to a minister today, see PARA 941 post. As to common prayers, see PARA 987 note 7 post.

5 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B1 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3) is entitled 'Of Conformity of Worship'.

6 Act of Uniformity 1662, s 20 (repealed); Statute Law (Repeal) Act 1969, confirming the Acts of Uniformity of 1548, 1551 and 1558 (all repealed).

7 See PARA 937 post.

8 See Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B5 (amended by Amending Canon No. 3), and PARAS 940, 941 post.

9 Ibid Canon B1 para 2 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3, made under the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (1)): see also PARA 937 post.

10 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C15 para 1 (1) (substituted by Amending Canon No. 4): see PARA 660 ante. A similar promise in respect of public prayer is made by deaconesses (see Canon D2 para 5, and PARA 760 ante) and readers (see Canon E5 para 4, and PARA 765 ante). Prior to the coming into force of the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974 the declaration, under the Clerical Subscriptions Act 1865, ss 1, 4, promised to use the form in the Book of Common Prayer prescribed and none other, 'except so far as shall be ordered by lawful authority': see Canon C15 para 1 (2) (as originally promulgated). The meaning of 'lawful authority' and the extent to which it might be invoked to justify deviation from the Book of Common Prayer was formerly the subject of controversy, especially after the rejection by Parliament of the proposed Prayer Book of 1928: see eg a memorandum on 'Lawful Authority' by Vaisey J in the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on the Canon Law of the Church of England (SPCK 1947) 215 et seq. Among the questions in dispute was that of the jus liturgicum of archbishops and bishops, whereby they might authorise, in some circumstances, what would otherwise have been unlawful. With the coming into force of the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, and the substitution in the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical by Amending Canon No. 3 of references to services authorised by canon or approved by the General Synod for references in earlier canons to forms prescribed by the Book of Common Prayer or sanctioned by lawful authority, the 'lawful authority' controversy may be said to be over. See, however, the power mentioned in PARA 940 post, to approve special forms of service.

As to the present extent of the bishop's jus liturgicum there has been some uncertainty. The question was much discussed during the period following the rejection of the proposed Prayer Book of 1928 (see supra), and also in connection with the revision of the canons (see eg the memorandum of Vaisey J referred to supra at 220). In Rector and Churchwardens of Bishopwearmouth v Adey [1958] 3 All ER 441, [1958] 1 WLR 1183, it was held that the bishop's sanction for reservation of the sacrament was justified by the jus liturgicum; and in Re St Peter and St Paul, Leckhampton [1968] P 495 at 499, [1967] 3 All ER 1057 at 1060, it was held that, as the rubrics in the Series 2 Holy Communion service give no directions as to the method of reservation, it is at large and must come within the bishop's jus liturgicum and the discretion of the consistory court. See also Garth Moore, An Introduction to English Canon Law (1967) 63-65.

In Rector and Churchwardens of Bishopwearmouth v Adey supra at 446 and at 1190, and in Re St Peter and St Paul, Leckhampton supra at 499 and at 1060, reference was also made to the doctrine of necessity; see also Garth Moore, An Introduction to English Canon Law (1967) 64, 65, 69, 108, 150. The doctrine of necessity in the canon law was of a wider scope than in the common law (see Dictionnaire de Droit Canonique, 'Necessite'); but it is not clear whether the doctrine survived the Reformation (see PARA 308 ante); nor is it clear what place, if any, the doctrine in its narrower form holds in ecclesiastical law.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(i) In general/935. Power to authorise forms of service.

935. Power to authorise forms of service.

The General Synod of the Church of England¹ may make provision by canon with respect to worship in the Church of England, including provision for empowering the General Synod to approve, amend, continue or discontinue forms of service², and may make provision by canon or regulations thereunder for any matter, except the publication of banns of matrimony³, to which any of the rubrics⁴ contained in the Book of Common Prayer⁵ relate⁶. Provision is, however, made to protect the special position of the Book of Common Prayer⁷. Any canon making any such provision, and any regulations made under any such canon, have effect notwithstanding anything inconsistent therewith contained in any of the rubrics of the Book of Common Prayer⁸.

No canon making any such provision may be submitted for the Queen's licence and assent unless it has been finally approved by the General Synod with a majority in each House of the synod of not less than two-thirds of those present and voting, and no regulation under any such canon, nor any approval, amendment, continuance or discontinuance of a form of service by the synod under any such canon has effect unless it has been finally approved by the synod with a similar majority in each House⁹. Further, every such canon, regulation, form of service or amendment must be such as in the synod's opinion is neither contrary to nor indicative of any departure from the doctrine of the Church of England¹⁰ in any essential matter¹¹, and the synod's final approval conclusively determines that the synod is of that opinion¹².

Without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing the General Synod may make provision by canon for empowering the convocations¹³, the archbishops and the diocesan bishops to approve forms of service for use on occasions for which no provision is made by forms of service contained in the Book of Common Prayer or approved by the General Synod or the convocations under canon¹⁴, and for empowering any minister to make and use minor variations in the forms of service contained in that book or approved by the General Synod, convocation, archbishops or bishops under canon and to use forms of service considered suitable by him on occasions for which no provision is made by any such form of service¹⁵. Any such canon must provide for requiring the forms of service and variations approved, made or used under it to be neither contrary to nor indicative of any departure from the doctrine of the Church of England in any essential matter¹⁶. Further, the General Synod may provide by canon that where a form of service is in course of preparation with a view to its submission to the synod for approval by the synod under canon, the archbishops may authorise that service in draft form to be conducted by a minister in the presence of a congregation consisting of such persons only as the archbishops may designate¹⁷.

1 As to the General Synod, see PARA 390 et seq ante.

2 Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (1) (a). 'Form of service' means any order, service, prayer, rite or ceremony whatsoever, including the services for the ordination of priests and deacons and the consecration of bishops and the catechism or form of instruction before confirmation: s 5 (2). The Measure extends to the whole of the provinces of Canterbury and York except the Channel Islands, but may be applied to the Channel Islands in accordance with the Channel Islands (Church Legislation) Measures 1931 and 1957 (see PARA 402 ante) in accordance with those Measures: Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 7 (3). The Measure (together with Amending Canons Nos. 3, 4) comes into force on such day as the Archbishops of Canterbury and York appoint: s 7 (2). The power to make canons is exercisable before that day but no such canon comes into force before that date: s 7 (2) proviso. At the date (1st May 1975) at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed, but it is understood that a day during the summer of 1975 is likely to be appointed, and the law in this volume is stated as if the Measure and the canons which have been made thereunder were in force.

3 Parliament thus reserves to itself the power to regulate the publication of banns. For the exercise of this power, see the Marriage Act 1949, ss 6-14, and PARA 1006 et seq post.

4 'Rubrics' of the Book of Common Prayer include all directions and instructions contained in it, and all its tables, prefaces, rules, calendars and other contents: Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 5 (2). The name is derived from the red ink in which the rubrics are sometimes printed. No amendment or revocation of any of the rubrics effected by any Act or Measure repealed by the Measure of 1974 is affected by that repeal: s 6 (4), Sch. 3 para 4. The rubrics have the force of law: see PARA 955 post.

5 'Book of Common Prayer' means the book annexed to the Act of Uniformity 1662 (repealed) (ie the Book of Common Prayer of 1662, including the Ordinal) as amended by any Act or Measure or in accordance with the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (7) (see PARA 357 ante): s 5 (2).

8 Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (2).

9 Ibid s 3: see PARA 937 post. This applies also to canons under s 2 (1) relating to declarations of assent.

10 References to 'the doctrine of the Church of England' are to be construed in accordance with the statement contained in the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon A5, that that doctrine is grounded in the holy scriptures, and in such teachings of the ancient fathers and councils of the church as are agreeable to those scriptures, and that in particular that doctrine is to be found in the Articles of Religion, the Book of Common Prayer and the Ordinal: Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 5 (1).

UPDATE

935 Power to authorise forms of service

NOTE 2--The Measure has been extended to the Channel Islands by SI 1984/1689. The appointed day for the commencement of the Measure was 1 September 1975.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(i) In general/936. Safeguards for position of the Book of Common Prayer.

936. Safeguards for position of the Book of Common Prayer.

The position of the Book of Common Prayer is protected by both general and local safeguards. The General Synod's powers¹ to provide by canon for the worship of the Church of England must be so exercised as to ensure that the forms of service² contained in the Book of Common Prayer continue to be available for use in the Church of England³.

If there is disagreement between the minister⁴ and the parochial church council as to which of the authorised forms of service⁵ (other than the services known as occasional offices⁶) are to be used in any church⁷ in a parish⁸, and so long as the disagreement continues, the forms in the Book of Common Prayer must be used unless other authorised forms of service were in regular use in that church during at least two of the four years immediately preceding the date when the disagreement arose and the parochial church council resolves that those other forms are to be used either to the exclusion of or in addition to the forms contained in the Book of Common Prayer⁹.

1 le under the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (1): see PARA 935 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'form of service', see ibid s 5 (2), and PARA 935 note 2 ante.

3 Ibid s 1 (1). Thus the power to abolish, replace (or even, it seems, to amend) the Book of Common Prayer is exercisable only by Act or Measure, not by canon. For the meaning of 'Book of Common Prayer', see PARA 935 note 5 ante.

4 The canons use the term 'minister' where the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (3), uses the term 'incumbent', which it defines, in s 5 (2), in the terms in which 'minister' is defined in the Church Representation Rules (see PARA 544 note 6 ante). It may be noted that the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (4)-(6), uses the term 'minister' in relation to the person conducting a service.

5 le authorised by the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B1 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3): see PARA 937 post.

6 'Occasional offices' is not defined, but appears to mean services other than those (such as Holy Communion and Morning and Evening Prayer) which are held regularly, with particular reference to services in which the church's ministrations are offered to individual 'persons concerned' (see eg para 938 post).

7 'Church' includes any building or part of a building licensed by the bishop for public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B3 para 1 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3). The same definition appears in the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 5 (2).

8 As to the decision as to which authorised form is to be used, see the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B3 para 1 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3), and PARA 938 post.

9 Ibid Canon B3 para 2 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3). This canon is required by the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (3) (b). 937. Authorised forms of service.

The following forms of service¹ are authorised for use in the Church of England:

- 17 (1) the forms of service contained in the Book of Common Prayer²;
- 18 (2) the shortened forms of Morning and Evening Prayer set out in the Act of Uniformity Amendment Act 1872³.
- 19 (3) the form of the service authorised by royal warrant for use on the anniversary of the accession of the reigning sovereign⁴;
- 20 (4) any forms of service approved under specified canons⁵, subject to any amendments so approved⁶.

Every minister may use only these authorised services except so far as he may exercise the discretion allowed to him under the canons⁷.

The General Synod may (a) approve forms of service for use in the Church of England and amend any form of service which it approves, (b) approve the use of any such form for a limited period or without limit of period, (c) extend the period of use of any such form and discontinue any such form⁸. Any form of service or amendment of it so approved must be such as in the synod's opinion is neither contrary to nor indicative of any departure from the doctrine of the Church of England in any essential matter⁹, and no such approval, amendment, continuance or discontinuance has effect unless finally approved by the General Synod with a majority in each House of not less than two-thirds of those present and voting¹⁰.

Power was given to the convocations in 1965, and subsequently to the General Synod, to approve for experimental use for a period not exceeding seven years, with certain powers of extension and renewal, forms of service alternative to those prescribed by the Book of Common Prayer¹¹; but these forms could not be used in churches without the agreement of the parochial church council or, in the case of occasional offices, if any of the persons concerned objected beforehand¹². Under the provisions detailed above the General Synod now has power to give permanent approval to these forms¹³.

937 Authorised forms of service

TEXT--The General Synod may approve new forms of Collect for use in any service approved under Canon B2 or B4 and Tables of Lessons for use in any service authorised under Canon B2; Canon B4a, added by Canon promulgated 25 February 1976.

938. Choice of authorised services.

Decisions as to which of the authorised forms of service¹, other than the services known as occasional offices², are to be used in any church³ in a parish are to be taken jointly by the minister⁴ and the parochial church council⁵. In the case of the occasional offices, other than the order of confirmation, where more than one form of service is authorised the decision as to which form is to be used is to be made by the minister⁶ who is to conduct the service, but if any of the persons concerned objects beforehand to the use of the form selected and he and the minister cannot agree as to which form is to be used the matter must be referred to the diocesan bishop for his decision⁷.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(i) In general/939. Shortened forms of service.

939. Shortened forms of service.

A shortened form of service for Morning Prayer and for Evening Prayer was provided in 1872¹ for use on any day other than Sunday and certain special days either in cathedrals in addition to, or in churches in lieu of, the forms prescribed by the Book of Common Prayer². These forms are now authorised for use on any day³.

1 The forms of service are set out in the Act of Uniformity Amendment Act 1872, Schedule (repealed). They follow the forms set out in the Book of Common Prayer save that they omit the invitation to the general confession, the Venite (in Morning Prayer), one of the canticles, one of the lessons (unless two proper lessons are assigned), the second Lord's Prayer, and the prayers for the Queen's Majesty, the royal family and the clergy and people.

2 Act of Uniformity Amendment Act 1872, s 2 (repealed).

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B1 para 1 (b) (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3). These shortened forms may be included in the services authorised by canon notwithstanding the repeal of the Act of Uniformity Amendment Act 1872 by the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 6 (3), Sch. 2: s 6 (4), Sch. 3 para 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(i) In general/940. Services for use on special occasions.

940. Services for use on special occasions.

Special forms of service may be approved for use in any cathedral or church or elsewhere on occasions for which no provision is made in the Book of Common Prayer or by the General Synod under its power to approve forms of service¹, being forms of service which in both words and order are in the opinion of those approving the forms, reverent and seemly and neither contrary to nor indicative of any departure from the doctrine of the Church of England in any essential matter². This power may be exercised (1) by the Convocations of Canterbury and York within their respective provinces³; (2) where no such provision is made by the convocations, by the archbishops in respect of use in the provinces of Canterbury and York⁴; and (3) where no such provision is made by the convocation or the archbishops, by the Ordinary in respect of use in the diocese, but subject to any regulations made from time to time by the convocation of the appropriate province⁵.

Subject to any regulations made from time to time by the convocation of the province the minister may, on occasions for which no provision is made in the Book of Common Prayer or by the General Synod, the convocation, the archbishops or the Ordinary as described above, use forms of service considered suitable by him for those occasions⁶, being forms which are reverent and seemly and neither contrary to nor indicative of any departure from the doctrine of the Church of England in any essential matter⁷.

1 Ie its power under the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B2 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3): see PARA 937 ante.

2 Ibid Canon B4 paras 1-3 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3), made under the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (5) (a): see PARA 935 ante. As to doctrine, see PARA 935 note 10 ante. This provision would, it seems, be applicable to such occasions as the institution and induction of an incumbent.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B4 para 1 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3).

4 Ibid Canon B4 para 2 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3).

5 Ibid Canon B4 para 3 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3). As to the Ordinary, see PARA 458 ante.

Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B5 para 2, would, it seems, be applicable to eg a family service, harvest festival or festival of lessons and carols.

7 Ibid Canon B5 para 3 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3). Any question concerning the observance of this provision may be referred to the bishop so that he may give such pastoral guidance or advice as he thinks fit, but such reference is without prejudice to the matter being made the subject matter of proceedings under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B5 para 4. As to doctrine, see PARA 935 note 10 ante.

941. Minor variations at minister's discretion.

The minister may in his discretion make and use variations which are not of substantial importance in any authorised form of service¹. All such variations must be reverent and seemly and neither contrary to, nor indicative of any departure from, the doctrine of the Church of England in any essential matter².

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B5 para 1 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3), made under the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 1 (5) (b): see PARA 935 ante. In determining whether or not a variation is of substantial importance some guidance may perhaps be derived from a comparison of the rubrics in the Book of Common Prayer with those of other authorised forms of service; thus it might be argued that matters in respect of which mandatory directions are given in the former but not in the latter should not be regarded as of substantial importance. As to the preaching of a sermon at Morning or Evening Prayer (for which no provision is made in the Book of Common Prayer), see PARA 946 post.

2 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B5 para 3 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3). Any question concerning the observance of this provision or whether a variation is of substantial importance may be referred to the bishop so that he may give such pastoral guidance or advice as he thinks fit, but such reference is to be without prejudice to the matter in question being made the subject matter of proceedings under the Ecclesiastical, Jurisdiction Measure 1963: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B5 para 4. As to doctrine, see PARA 935 note 10 ante.

942. Experimental use of draft forms of service.

Where a form of service is in course of preparation with a view to its submission to the General Synod for approval¹ the archbishops may authorise the service in draft form to be conducted by a minister in the presence of a congregation consisting of such persons only as the archbishops may designate².

943. Obligation to perform divine service.

Provision is made in mandatory terms for the regular performance of Morning and Evening Prayer, the Litany, and the Holy Communion.

In respect of Holy Communion the normal minimum requirement, in both cathedral and parish churches, is celebration on all Sundays, on feast days and on Ash Wednesday¹. In every cathedral church the services of Morning and Evening Prayer, with the inclusion on the appointed days of the Litany, are to be said or sung daily². A similar requirement applies to parish churches³, subject to the exercise of a dispensing power by the bishop and to the recognition of a certain latitude in the case of ordinary weekdays⁴. Morning and Evening Prayer according to the Book of Common Prayer must be used daily in the chapels of certain university colleges⁵.

An obligation is laid upon all ministers having the cure of souls to administer, or cause to be administered, the occasional offices when required⁶.

For this purpose a building or part of a building designated as a parish centre of worship is deemed to be a parish church: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 29 (2). In respect of a place of worship which is neither a parish church nor a parish centre of worship, the bishop may direct what services shall be held or shall not be required to be held: ibid s 74 (3); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B11A para 1 (added by Amending Canon No. 3). Cf. the Pluralities Act 1838, s 80, which empowers the bishop to order that there shall be two full services on every Sunday throughout the year or any part of the year in the church or chapel of every or any benefice within his diocese.

943 Obligation to perform divine service

NOTE 3--Now for this purpose any church in any parish, other than a parish church, or any building or part of a building licensed for public worship in any parish designated as a parish centre of worship is deemed to be a parish church: Pastoral Measure 1983 s 29(2) (amended by the Churchwardens Measure 2001 s 15(2), Sch 3). 1838 Act s 80 amended: Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1993.

944. Language of divine service.

All prayers and services prescribed in and by the Book of Common Prayer are to be said or sung in the vulgar tongue, save that Latin may be used in the convocations, in the chapels or other public places of the several colleges and halls in the universities or in the university churches, in the colleges of Westminster, Winchester and Eton, and in such other places of religious and sound learning as custom allows or the Ordinary may permit¹.

¹ Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B42. See also the Book of Common Prayer, Concerning the Service of the Church.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(i) In general/945. Lessons and psalms.

945. Lessons and psalms.

Changes have been made from time to time in regard to the portions of scripture prescribed for use at Morning and Evening Prayer. In 1871 new tables of lessons and new directions concerning lessons and psalms were substituted for those previously prescribed by the Book of Common Prayer¹. In 1922 alternative tables of lessons were authorised for use at the minister's discretion in lieu of the 1871 tables, with the proviso that when the alternative tables have once been adopted in any church or chapel they must be continuously followed at least until the end of the ecclesiastical year². More recently the range of permissible alternative lessons and psalms has been further extended; and similar provision has been made in respect of lessons at Holy Communion³.

Wherever in the Book of Common Prayer a portion of scripture is set out and appointed to be read, said or sung⁴, the minister has discretion to use in place of it the corresponding portion contained in any version of the Bible authorised for the purpose by the General Synod⁵, although an alternative version must not be so used without the agreement of the parochial church council or guild church council or, in the case of occasional offices⁶, if any of the persons concerned objects before hand to its use⁷.

1 Prayer Book (Tables of Lessons) Act 1871, s 2 Schedule. If Evening Prayer is said at two different times in the same place of worship on any Sunday (except a Sunday in which alternative second lessons are specially appointed in the table) the second lesson at the second time may at the minister's discretion by any chapter from the four Gospels or any lesson appointed in the table of lessons from the four Gospels: Schedule, Part II. Upon occasions to be appointed by the Ordinary other psalms may with his consent be substituted for those appointed in the Psalter: Schedule, Part II. Although still printed in the Book of Common Prayer the 1871 tables of lessons have in practice been superseded by more recently published tables.

2 Revised Tables of Lessons Measure 1922, s 1. The ecclesiastical year ends immediately before the first Sunday in Advent (which is the nearest Sunday to 30th November, whether before or after).

3 A lectionary of 1955, approved by the convocations in 1961, has been widely used, and additional provision has been made in the forms of service approved for use under the canons, as to which see PARA 937 ante.

4 This provision appears to apply only where the text is 'set out' in full (eg in the Epistles and Gospels for Holy Communion and in the Psalter) and not where the portions of scripture are merely specified (as in the Tables of Lessons). It thus leaves open the question what version or versions of the Bible may be used for the lessons at Morning and Evening Prayer. Any exclusive claim for the Authorised Version of 1611 could be supported by nothing more than long usage and the presence of the words 'Appointed to be read in churches' on its title page. In practice the use of versions of the Bible in modern English (not limited to those mentioned in note 5 infra) is undoubtedly widespread, and it is unlikely that this could be restrained by legal proceedings, although in some cases the bishop might be justified in exercising his discretion for the purpose of appeasing diversity and resolving doubts: see the Book of Common Prayer, Concerning the Service of the Church.

5 Prayer Book (Versions of the Bible) Measure 1965, s 1 (1); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 3 (4). The Revised Version, the Revised Standard Version, the New English Bible and the Jerusalem Bible have been so authorised, and the Revised Psalter of 1963 is deemed to be so authorised: Prayer Book (Versions of the Bible) Measure 1965, s 1 (3). For special requirements applicable to the granting of authorisation by the General Synod, see the Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 3 (4), (7), Sch. 2, art. 7, and PARA 403 ante. The authorisation may be for a limited period or subject to such other limitations as the synod may determine, and may at any time be amended or revoked: Prayer Book (Versions of the Bible) Measure 1965, s 1 (2); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 3 (4). As to who may read the lesson, see PARA 989 post.

6 As to the occasional offices, see PARA 936 note 6 ante.

7 Prayer Book (Versions of the Bible) Measure 1965, s 1 (1) proviso.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(i) In general/946. Sermons.

946. Sermons.

In every parish church a sermon must be preached at least once each Sunday, except for some reasonable cause approved by the bishop of the diocese¹, and provision is generally made in cathedral statutes for sermons. The Book of Common Prayer provides by rubric for the delivery of a sermon or homily² after the Creed in the order for Holy Communion, but there is no corresponding rubric in respect of Morning or Evening Prayer, although a sermon is customarily preached on Sundays at those services. The preacher must endeavour himself with care and sincerity to minister the word of truth to the glory of God and to the edification of the people³. Before the sermon the preacher may move the people to join with him in a bidding prayer, concluding with the Lord's Prayer⁴.

The sermon may be preached by the incumbent or any other person licensed to do so by the bishop, for example a clerk in holy orders⁵ or a reader⁶ or, if authorised to do so by the bishop, a deaconess⁷. It would appear that, strictly speaking, other lay persons reading Morning or Evening Prayer are not authorised to preach.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B18 para 1. It is the duty of the priest having the cure of souls to preach the sermon or cause it to be preached in his church: Canon C24 para 3. The bishop may, in his discretion, order that there be two full services on every Sunday in the church or chapel of every or any benefice in his diocese, and can direct that each service include a sermon: Benefices Act 1838, s 80.

2 The publication of books of homilies in English for the use of preachers goes back to mediaeval times: Scudamore, Notitia Eucharistica (2nd Edn 1876) 290 et seq. A collection of twelve homilies (one of which was required to be read in church every Sunday: see Injunctions of August 1547) was published in 1547, followed in 1571 by a second collection of twenty-one homilies (which are listed in the Articles of Religion 35). They were extensively used as model sermons and were regarded as authoritative statements of doctrine.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B18 para 2.

4 See ibid Canon B19 (amended by Amending Canon No. 1) which contains a lengthy form of bidding prayer to be used 'in this form or to this effect, as briefly as is convenient'. In practice it is seldom used in parish churches.

947. Hymns, anthems and music.

The law as to conformity of worship does not preclude the addition or interpolation of hymns or the minister's discretion as to what portions of the service shall be sung¹. In all churches and chapels (other than cathedral or collegiate churches or chapels where the matter is governed by or dependent upon special statutes or customs) it belongs to the minister to direct when the organ is to be played and to decide what parts of the service are to be sung². In the choosing of chants, hymns, anthems, and other settings and in the ordering of the music of the Church the final responsibility and decision rests at all times with the minister, although he must pay due heed to the advice and assistance of any organist or choirmaster³.

948. Notices.

The minister must give notice every Sunday publicly during the time of divine service, and by notice affixed at the church door or otherwise, of, and of the times of the services on, the feast days and fast days which are to be observed in the week following¹. Where the forms of service prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer are used he must give notice of the Communion if there is occasion for it²; he may also make announcements on certain matters of an ecclesiastical nature including, it seems, banns of matrimony; but nothing is to be proclaimed or published in church during divine service but by the minister, nor anything by him but what is prescribed in the rules of the Book of Common Prayer or enjoined by the Queen or by the Ordinary³. In practice this provision is not likely to be construed so strictly as to exclude notices which concern the congregation and ordinary church business and which are not contrary to the spirit of the Prayer Book⁴; but, in general, the making of proclamations or giving of public notices concerning non-ecclesiastical matters on the occasion of divine service is unlawful⁵.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B7; Book of Common Prayer, rubric following the Creed in the Order for the Administration of The Lord's Supper or Holy Communion. It is to be noted that this rubric occurs in the part of the order which is commonly called the 'ante-communion' and which is prescribed for use on every Sunday and holy day, even if there be no celebration: see the rubric at the end of that order. It has been held that, the rubric being imperative, an omission to give the required notice is an ecclesiastical offence (Elphinstone v Purchas (1870) LR 3 A & E 66 at III), from which decision it appears also that notice cannot lawfully be given of any holy days which are not included in the Table of Feasts in the Book of Common Prayer or approved by the General Synod or the Ordinary under Canon B6 para 5 (amended by Amending Canon No. 1). (ii) Matters of Ritual and Ceremonial

A. IN GENERAL

953. The question of legality.

The requirements of the law as to conformity in the conduct of divine service extend to the observance of correct procedure in matters of ritual and ceremonial¹. Failure on the part of the clergy to keep within the bounds of legality in these matters may entail liability to prosecution for offences against the laws ecclesiastical².

Questions touching ritual and ceremonial may arise also in civil proceedings in the ecclesiastical courts, for example where a faculty is sought for the authorisation of a particular ornament or decoration³.

1 There is a legal distinction between a rite and a ceremony: a rite consists in services expressed in words; a ceremony in gestures or acts preceding, accompanying or following the utterance of those words: Martin v Mackonochie (1868) LR 2 A & E 116 at 130, 134-136; on appeal LR 2 PC 365.

2 As to offences involving matters of doctrine, ritual and ceremonial, see PARA 1354 et seq post.

3 Such questions are likely to arise eg in regard to aumbries, tabernacles, candlesticks and Stations of the Cross. For these and other examples, see PARA 960 et seq post. The Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 makes special provision for the conduct of proceedings, both criminal and civil, which involve matters of doctrine, ritual and ceremonial: see PARA 1295 et seq post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(ii) Matters of Ritual and Ceremonial/A. IN GENERAL/954. Tests of legality.

954. Tests of legality.

In testing the legality or illegality of ecclesiastical practices certain rules have been laid down as well founded in principle, reason and law, namely that what is expressly prohibited is prohibited altogether, and may not be evaded by any contrivance which, under a different name or appearance, attains the same end¹; what is expressly ordered may not be evaded by an illusory or partial compliance; whatever is subsidiary to what is ordered and whatever is in itself decent and proper and in accordance with primitive and catholic use is, generally speaking, lawful. There are, in other words, three categories of these things: (1) things lawful and ordered; (2) things unlawful and prohibited; (3) things neither ordered nor prohibited expressly or by implication, but the doing of which must be governed by the living discretion of some person in authority².

1 Thus a bishop cannot by a sentence of consecration legalise the retention in the church of an ornament which is forbidden by law to be there: Davey v Hinde [1901] P 95; see also Markham v Shirebrook Overseers [1906] P 239. However, as to the effect of the bishop's authorisation of reservation of the sacrament, see PARA 986 text to note 4 post.

2 Martin v Mackonochie (1868) LR 2 A & E 116 at 191, per Sir Robert Phillimore; affd. LR 2 PC 365 at 385. The person to whom such matters should be submitted is the bishop of the diocese: Book of Common Prayer, Preface, as applied in Martin v Mackonochie supra at 191. The function of the bishop to whom the parties in doubt resort is not to pronounce a legal judgment but to resolve, if possible, the doubt, and if he is unable to do so he may refer it to the archbishop. This course was adopted in the cases of incense and processional lights and the reservation of the sacrament, upon which the archbishops pronounced their Opinions at Lambeth on 31st July 1899 and 1st May 1900 (Macmillan & Co.'s Official Reports), respectively. These opinions, hereafter referred to, were expressly stated not to be judgments in any sense of the term.

955. Observance of the rubrics.

Courts have held in the past that the directions contained in the rubrics¹ of the Book of Common Prayer have the full force of statutory provisions and must be strictly observed, without any addition, omission or alteration, and without any distinction being made between what is important and what appears to be trivial². In recent times, however, courts have sometimes given indications, in cases relating to ritual and ceremonial, of a readiness to modify their insistence on a strict application of the rubrics³. This tendency is likely to be reinforced by the provisions concerning rubrics which are contained in the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974⁴. It seems that, as a further effect of that enactment, the rubrics in all authorised forms of service are to be regarded as having equal force⁵.

Such pronouncements are, however, of doubtful relevance today, since the provisions of the Act of Uniformity 1662 from which they derived their force have been repealed by the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 6 (3), Sch. 2. 5 An opinion to this effect had already been expressed in Re St Peter and St Paul, Leckhampton [1968] P 495, [1967] 3 All ER 1057. See PARA 958 post, and PARA 986 note 3 post.

956. Judicial precedent.

Whilst in the nineteenth century the doctrine of the binding force of precedent had already found a place in the ecclesiastical legal system¹, it was recognised that in its application to matters of ritual and ceremonial some measure of flexibility was justified. Decisions, even of the highest court, are liable to be overruled where there is fresh light on facts which were not considered by the tribunal on the previous occasion, and even where there is no such fresh light the tribunal is at liberty to examine the reasons upon which the decisions rest and to give effect to its own view of the law².

The law does not exclude historical investigation in determining questions of ritual and ecclesiastical practice. Contemporaneous usage is of great value in determining such subjects, and where it is important to ascertain facts of a public nature the law permits historical works to be referred to³.

957. Divergence between law and practice.

Attention has been drawn in successive editions of this work to the wide divergence existing between the law and the practice of the Church of England in regard to matters of ritual and ceremonial¹. In 1954, shortly before the publication of the last edition, the situation resulting from this divergence had been described in the report of the Ecclesiastical Courts Commission, in which the hope was expressed that early action would be taken to repeal those parts of the ritual and ceremonial law which were no longer observed and over which recourse to a court of law would not now be thought proper; the report also stated that for the successful working of a court for the correction of ritual and ceremonial offences, not only must the law of public worship be related to present day practice, but it must be formed in such a way that the full width of church tradition will find a place in its framework and full allowance be made for variation in ceremonial necessitated by local circumstances².

1 The Second Edition of Halsbury's Laws of England (1933) stated that many of the matters which arise in ritual and ceremonial cases and which have been pronounced unlawful by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council have become of general usage. In explanation of this development it cited the Report of the Royal Commission on Ecclesiastical Discipline 1906 (Cd. 3040) PARA 363: a court dealing with matters of conscience and religion must, above all others, rest on moral authority if its judgments are to be effective; as thousands of clergy with strong lay support refuse to recognise the jurisdiction of the Judicial Committee, its judgments cannot practically be enforced. 958. Recent developments.

During the period since 1954, while there has been no comprehensive reform of the law relating to ritual and ceremonial, there has been much piecemeal legislation, concerned largely with matters of ritual¹, but also in a few instances with the physical accompaniments of worship². Among the most important developments has been the experimental introduction, under enabling provisions³, of alternative forms of service, involving deviation from the Book of Common Prayer in respect not only of liturgical texts but also of the accompanying rubrical directions⁴, followed by the delegation to the General Synod of power to legislate by canon in respect of worship and doctrine⁵. Another major development has been the recognition, for purposes of ecclesiastical jurisdiction, of a distinct category of cases involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial, and the establishment of a new hierarchy of courts for adjudication in such cases⁶. Of special significance in this connection is the statutory provision that the appellate courts dealing with such matters are not to be bound by decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council⁷.

Apart from changes which are the direct result of new legislation, a number of other factors may be regarded as contributing to the evolution of the law in regard to matters of ritual and ceremonial. In recent years there has been a growing disinclination to pursue legal remedies in this sphere, as is evident from the fact that neither the Court for Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved nor a Commission of Review has yet been called upon to exercise the jurisdiction conferred on them in 1963⁸. There are indications also of a greater readiness on the part of consistory courts to grant faculties in unopposed cases where the petitions would formerly have been rejected on the ground of illegality; in such cases the courts have, it seems, been influenced by the need for a fuller recognition of established local usage and a less rigorous interpretation of the rubrics of the Book of Common Prayer⁹.

959. Ceremonial use of lights, processions and incense.

In the examples which follow in this paragraph the law has been stated in substantially the same terms as in the previous edition of this work, but it should be borne in mind that for the reasons already given there is some uncertainty as to whether, in the future, courts would be prepared to apply the law strictly in those terms¹.

The ceremonial use of lights has been held to be illegal². Candlesticks with lighted candles may, however, lawfully be kept on or behind the holy table during the celebration of Holy Communion, even though they are not needed for giving light, provided the lighting does not take place during the celebration and provided the lights are not used for ceremonial purposes³. To cause lighted candles to be held one on each side of the priest when reading the Gospel, where they are not required for giving light, has been held to be illegal as an addition to the ceremonies prescribed by the law⁴. There is no authority to warrant the carrying of lights in procession⁵; it has indeed been held that processions of a ceremonial nature are themselves illegal⁶.

There is no authority for the use of incense in the public worship of the Church of England and as a part of that worship; on the contrary, the ceremonial use of it has been declared illegal. However, there is no contravention of the law if incense is used simply to sweeten the church and outside the worship altogether; nor is it a necessary inference that the liturgical use of incense is by law permanently excluded from the church's ritual⁷.

On appeal in Read v Bishop of Lincoln [1892] AC 644 at 666-668, the Privy Council rested its opinion on the fact that the bishop had not been responsible for introducing the lights, and that any failure on his part to object to them could not be an ecclesiastical offence, but it thought it a matter for grave consideration now, for Archbishop Benson's exposition of the history of the subject had afforded new matter for consideration since Martin v Mackonochie supra. In subsequent cases the archbishop's decision in Read v Bishop of Lincoln [1891] P 9 has been accepted as without doubt correct: see eg Re St Paul, Camden Square (1897) 14 TLR 85; Vicar and Churchwardens of Wimbledon v Eden, Re St Mark's, Wimbledon [1908] P 167 at 173; Rector and Churchwardens of Chapel St Mary, Suffolk v Packard [1927] P 289 at 294, 304; Re St Saviour's Hampstead [1932] P 134 at 140; Re St Saviour's Church, Walthamstow [1951] P 147 at 150, [1950] 2 All ER 812 at 814. In Sumner v Wix (1870) LR 3 A & E 58 it was held that the ceremonial use of incense immediately before the celebration of Holy Communion, so as to be preparatory or subsidiary to the celebration of Holy Communion, is unlawful, and in Rector and Churchwardens of Chapel St Mary, Suffolk v Packard [1927] P 289, at 305 the decision of the Court of Arches was to the same effect. B. ORNAMENTS, DECORATIONS AND FURNISHINGS

960. Requirements of rubrics and canons.

The category of things lawful and ordered¹ is governed primarily by the so-called 'Ornaments Rubric'² and by a number of canons appearing under the head of 'Things appertaining to Churches'. The Ornaments Rubric is in these words: 'And here is to be noted, that such Ornaments of the Church, and of the Ministers thereof at all times of their Ministration, shall be retained, and be in use, as were in this Church of England by the Authority of Parliament, in the Second Year of the Reign of King Edward the Sixth'³. The rubric deals with two kinds of ornaments, the ornaments of the church and the ornaments of the minister⁴.

The canons contain detailed provisions which may be regarded as supplementary to those of the Ornaments Rubric⁵.

The lawfulness of things not covered by the relevant enactments is to be determined in accordance with the general principles established by decisions of the courts⁶.

1 See PARA 954 ante.

2 It is set out in the Book of Common Prayer preceding the Order for Morning Prayer.

3 The precise meaning and effect of the Ornaments Rubric has been much disputed, both in historical studies of the liturgy and in judicial proceedings of the last century. The rubric first appeared in the Prayer Book of 1559, but it had not been in the draft of that book when it was approved by Parliament, although the words appeared in the Act of Uniformity 1558, s 13 (repealed). It was indicative of a reaction against the austerity of the Second Prayer Book of Edward VI (1552), which had required that a minister 'at the tyme of the Comunion and all other tymes in his ministration, shall use neither albe, vestment, nor cope, but ... being a preest or deacon, he shall have and wear a surplice onely' (Order for Morning Prayer). The Ornaments Rubric represented a return to the standards of the early part of the reign of Edward VI. There has been much controversy as to whether its mention of the second year of Edward VI was intended to refer to the period before the introduction of the First Prayer Book of Edward VI (1549), which was in the third year of his reign, or to the provisions contained in that book, by which the celebrant at Holy Communion was directed to wear 'a white Albe plain, with a vestment or Cope' and his assistants to wear 'Albes with tunacles'. The controversy is, however, no longer of practical importance: see PARA 970 post.

4 As to ornaments of the minister, see PARAS 970, 971 post.

5 See the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canons F1-F12, and PARA 951 ante.

6 Cf. para 953 et seq ante.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(ii) Matters of Ritual and Ceremonial/B. ORNAMENTS, DECORATIONS AND FURNISHINGS/961. Distinction between ornaments and other articles.

961. Distinction between ornaments and other articles.

A distinction must be drawn between those articles which are ornaments of the church in the strict sense of the term and those which are merely decorations, furnishings or fittings. In ecclesiastical law 'ornaments' is not confined, as by modern usage, to articles of decoration or embellishment, but it is used in the larger sense of the word 'ornamentum'; all the several articles used in the performance of the service and rites of the church, including organs and bells, are 'ornaments'¹.

The term 'ornaments of the church' in the rubric is confined to those articles the use of which in the services and ministrations of the church is prescribed by the First Prayer Book of Edward VI². Thus, the rubric provides for the use, inter alia, of an English Bible, the new prayer book, a poor man's box, a chalice, a corporas, a paten and a bell³.

The canons require the provision, inter alia, of a font (with cover), a holy table, articles of communion plate and line, a reading desk and pulpit, seats for the use of parishioners and others, at least one church bell, a Bible, a Book of Common Prayer and a service book for use at the communion table, an alms box, and the necessary register books⁴.

Articles not expressly provided for by the rubric or canons may be permitted, subject in the case of ornaments to the condition that their use must be consistent with and subsidiary to the services of the church⁵; in the case of other articles such as decorations, the test of legality is whether or not they are in danger of being used for purposes of veneration or adoration⁶.

6 Vincent v Rector and Churchwardens of St Magnus the Martyr etc [1925] P 1 at 11, 12. In exercising their discretion in such matters the courts have been concerned to distinguish between objects which are legitimate aids to devotion and those which are likely to attract or encourage superstitious reverence. There have been diverse interpretations of 'superstitious reverence' as used in this context. According to Lord Penzance in Clifton v Ridsdale (1876) 1 PD 316 it should not be regarded as limited to cases of actual worshipping or adoration of images contrary to the Articles of Religion 22, but in recent times the courts have usually been less astute to find possibilities of superstitious reverence: cf. Re St Peter, St Helier, Morden, Re St Olave, Mitcham [1951] P 303, [1951] 2 All ER 53.

In the absence of danger of superstitious reverence, painted windows, paintings and other pictures for the decoration of the church are free from objection: if there is such danger they are exposed to the charge of illegality¹. Though the question of superstitious reverence being paid to a window might conceivably arise, the question is not nearly so likely to arise as in the case of a rood².

963. Stations of the Cross.

On the question of the legality of the set of representations commonly called the Stations of the Cross there have in recent years been conflicting decisions of consistory courts¹. The divergence of judicial opinion is principally concerned with the interpretation to be placed on certain judgments of the Court of Arches² which have sometimes been thought to constitute an unqualified denial of the legality of Stations of the Cross³. In the absence of an unequivocal determination of the question by an appellate court it is not possible to state the law on this matter with certainty, but on the balance of authority the following propositions would appear to be justified. Considered as decorations, Stations of the Cross are not intrinsically unlawful. It is a question for the discretion of the court whether the granting of a faculty is warranted in a particular case. The court will have regard to the purposes for which the stations are intended or likely to be used and will grant a faculty only if there appears to be no danger of their becoming objects of superstitious reverence. This is a question of fact which ought to be determined upon a broad consideration of the circumstances and with due regard to the change of outlook in such matters which has occurred in the Church since the nineteenth century. Stations of the Cross have sometimes been treated as sui generis, but in judging of their legality it is probably right to apply the same principles as in the case of other images, such as crucifixes. Where, in the exercise of its discretion a court grants a faculty for Stations of the Cross, it may often think it appropriate, in order to meet the possibility of abuse in the future, to direct that the authorisation is to be effective only until further order⁴.

1 In Re St Peter, St Helier, Morden, Re St Olave, Mitcham [1951] P 303, [1951] 2 All ER 53; in Re St Mary, Tyne Dock [1954] P 369, [1954] 2 All ER 339; and in Re St Augustine's, Brinksway [1963] P 364, [1963] 3 All ER 389, it was that Stations of the Cross are not intrinsically unlawful. In Re St Mary the Virgin, West Moors [1963] P 390, [1962] 3 All ER 722, it was held, on the contrary, that they are illegal ornaments. In each of these cases the decision covered all fourteen stations, including four for which no scriptural authority could be shown. In view of the decision in Re St Mary, Tyne Dock supra, the statement in Markham v Shirebrook Overseers [1906] P 239 that the general desire of the parishioners to retain church ornaments not illegal in themselves must be proved on an application for a confirmatory faculty would appear to be too wide.

963 Stations of the Cross

NOTE 1--Re St Peter, cited, applied in Re Christ Church, Waltham Cross [2001] 3 WLR 1481.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(ii) Matters of Ritual and Ceremonial/B. ORNAMENTS, DECORATIONS AND FURNISHINGS/964. Crosses, crucifixes and images.

964. Crosses, crucifixes and images.

Crosses, as emblems of the Christian faith, may lawfully be used as architectural decorations in the absence of superstitious reverence and, it seems, provided that they are not fixed to the communion table¹.

Crucifixes and sculptured images, whether erected above the chancel or elsewhere, are lawful provided that they are not likely in the circumstances of the particular case to be abused by superstitious reverence².

1 Westerton v Liddell, Horne etc (1855) Moore's Special Report, where a cross affixed to the chancel screen was held to be mere architectural decoration, whilst crosses affixed to holy tables were ordered to be removed as inconsistent with the idea of a table; Liddell v Beal (1860) 14 Moo PCC 1, where a cross on a window sill above the communion table was held to be legal, as was a wooden ledge on the communion table; Durst v Masters (1876) 1 PD 373, PC, where a movable wooden cross placed on a retable or ledge above the communion table with the intention that it should remain there permanently was held to be unlawful; but see Vicar and Churchwardens of Wimbledon v Eden, Re St Mark's, Wimbledon [1908] P 167, where Durst v Masters supra, was said to be apparently irreconcilable with Liddell v Beale supra, and not to be intended to lay down any principle other than that declared in Westerton v Liddell, Horne etc supra. As to the extent to which Privy Council decisions bind the ecclesiastical courts, see PARA 953 ante, 1271 post.

2 Phillpotts v Boyd (1875) LR 6 PC 435 (sculptured representations in high relief of the Ascension, the Transfiguration, and the Descent of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost), where the Privy Council held that the reredos erected for the purpose of decoration in Exeter Cathedral was not illegal, since it was not suggested that any superstitious reverence had been or was likely to be paid to any figures forming part of it. In Ridsdale v Clifton (1877) 2 PD 276, PC (metal crucifix in full relief on top of chancel screen with a row of candles on either side, which were lighted at evening service), it was held that in the absence of a proper faculty the crucifix was unlawfully set up and retained and that no such faculty ought to be granted, and the crucifix was ordered to be removed on the ground that there was a likelihood and danger of superstitious reverence, which the Privy Council in Phillpotts v Boyd supra, pronounced to be fatal to the lawfulness of all images and figures set up in a church. What is legal or illegal with respect to images, crosses, crucifixes and other things of the sort in churches depends on whether they do or do not, or may or may not, encourage or lead to idolatrous or superstitious worship in the place where they are to be put: R v Bishop of London (1889) 24 QBD 213 at 237, CA, per Lindley LJ; see also Vincent v Rector and Churchwardens of St Magnus the Martyr etc [1925] P 1 at 11, 12. Crucifixes and sculptured images have been allowed in the following cases: Rector etc of Barsham, Suffolk v Parishioners of Barsham, Suffolk [1896] P 256; Vicar and Churchwardens of All Saints, Westbury (1914) 30 TLR 389; Hendon Parish Church (1912) 28 TLR 438 (figures of our Lord on the Cross, the virgin Mary and St John on the chancel screen); Re St Anselm, Pinner [1901] P 202; Vicar of Great Bardfield v All having Interest [1897] P 185; Hughes v Edwards (1877) 2 PD 361 at 368 (sculptured representation of the crucifixion immediately over the holy table); Re St Saviour's Church, Walthamstow [1951] P 147, [1950] 2 All ER 812 (crucifix on the holy table or on a retable). A faculty has been granted for the erection of a group representing the crucifixion (Grosvenor Chapel, South Audley Street (1913) 29 TLR 286) and for a crucifix on a wall above a stool used for confession (Rector and Churchwardens of Capl St Mary, Suffolk v Packard [1927] P 289; Re St Saviour's, Hampstead [1932] P 134); for the erection of a figure of Our saviour in the act of blessing (Re Christ Church, Ealing [1906] P 289; for the retention of crucifixes surmounting a tabernacle, on a confessional table, above the pulpit, and on holy table (Re St Mary, Tyne Dock [1954] 2 All ER 339).

In the following cases faculties were refused, generally because there was thought to be danger of superstitious reverence: Re St Lawrence, Pitlington (1880) 5 PD 131 (decoration of reredos); Kensit v Rector of St Ethelburga, Bishopsgate Within [1900] P 80 (crucifixes); Vicar of Paignton v All having Interest [1905] P 111 (restoration of pre-Reformation screen and rood); Vicar and Churchwardens of St John the Evangelist, Clevedon v All having Interest [1909] P 6 (crucifix and figures on rood beam); Markham v Shirebrook Overseers [1906] P 239 (crucifixes over pulpits); Davey v Hinde [1903] P 221 (crucifixes); Hudson v Fulford (1913) 30 TLR 32; Re Tenbury Parish Church (1919) 36 TLR 188; Field v Ommannay (1920) 36 TLR 695; Re St Luke's, Southport (1920) 26 TLR 733 (all of which related to crucifixes outside churches); Re St Mary, Tyne Dock [1954] P 369, [1954] 2 All ER 339 (crucifix attached to processional cross declared illegal; faculty refused for statue of the Virgin Mary and Child Jesus). See also Vicar and Churchwardens of St Paul, Bow Common v St Paul, Bow Common Inhabitants [1909] P 245 (rood beam).

The case of Vicar of Richmond and Chapelwardens of St Matthias, Richmond v All Persons having Interest etc [1897] P 70, where it was said that a crucifix on a chancel screen could not not, on account of its position be regarded as a mere decoration, was disapproved in Vincent v Rector and Churchwardens of St Magnus the Martyr etc. supra, where it was held that the law is the same for every kind of image, including a crucifix or rood, and the question is whether there is danger of the image being used for worship or adoration.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(1) REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORSHIP/(ii) Matters of Ritual and Ceremonial/B. ORNAMENTS, DECORATIONS AND FURNISHINGS/965. Receptacles for reserved sacrament.

965. Receptacles for reserved sacrament.

In determining the lawfulness of a receptacle for the reserved sacrament, such as an aumbry, tabernacle or pyx, the court may be expected to have regard to the existence of episcopal sanction for the practice of reservation and to the conditions on which it is granted¹. There is now ample authority for the issue of a faculty for an aumbry in a church where the sacrament is reserved with the bishop's approval². In such cases it is normally stipulated that the aumbry is to be set in a wall of the church in a position not immediately behind or above a holy table³. So far from being an illegal ornament, an aumbry is properly to be regarded as being not an ornament at all, but simply a cupboard and part of the furnishings of the church⁴.

It has been held, on the other hand, that a tabernacle is an illegal ornament, and that its illegality is unaffected by the terms in which the bishop may have authorised reservation of the sacrament⁵. The question of the legality of a hanging pyx would seem to be governed by the same principles as that of a tabernacle, but in view of conflicting judicial opinions it is left in some uncertainty⁶.

The Dean of the Arches (Sir Philip Baker-Wilbraham) in Re Lapford (Devon) Parish Church [1955] P 205, [1955] 3 All ER 484, suggested that a hanging pyx was an illegal ornament, but in Re St Nicholas, Plumstead (Rector and Churchwardens) [1961] 1 All ER 298, [1961] 1 WLR 916, it was held by the Southwark Consistory Court that a pyx, although was not unlawful if its use was subsidiary to the lawful services of the church, and a faculty was granted for a pyx hanging from a baldachino which was around and over an altar in a chapel, for the purpose (approved by the bishop) of reserving the sacrament in it.

966. Holy tables and their appurtenances.

A convenient and decent table of wood, stone or other suitable material¹ must be provided in every church and chapel for the celebration of the Holy Communion, and must stand in the main body of the church or in the chancel where Morning and Evening Prayer are appointed to be said². As becomes the table of the Lord the table must be kept in a sufficient and seemly manner, and from time to time repaired³. In the time of divine service it must be covered with a covering of silk or other decent stuff, and at the time Holy Communion is celebrated it must be covered with a fair white linen cloth⁴. An additional holy table may be sanctioned on the ground of convenience and economy⁵. Where necessary, a credence table may lawfully be placed in a church as subsidiary to the administration of the Holy Communion⁶.

The provisions of certain articles of communion plate is obligatory. Thus, in every church and chapel there must be provided a chalice for the wine and a paten or other vessel for the bread, of gold, silver or other suitable metal; a bason for the reception of alms; and a cruet or flagon for bringing the wine to the communion table⁷.

It is lawful to place vases of flowers on the holy table and to keep them there during the performance of divine service, provided they are used as decorations only⁸. The placing of candlesticks on or behind the holy table is not unlawful, and, although the use of two single candlesticks is the traditional and recognised use in the Church of England, it is within the discretion of a diocesan chancellor to allow the use of more than two in a proper case⁹. The placing of a sanctuary lamp on the altar of a memorial chapel in a church has been authorised by faculty¹⁰. The ceremonial use of lights has, however, been held to be illegal¹¹.

A sanctuary gong and sanctuary bells have been held to be illegal ornaments¹², and the court has refused to sanction by faculty alterations to enable one of the bells of a church to be used from the interior of the church as a sanctus bell¹³.

1 Until the passing of the Holy Table Measure 1964 (repealed) the law had required that the principal holy table in a parish church should be movable and not made of stone.

The court may issue a faculty for the erection of chancel screen gates on being satisfied in its discretion that the erection would be of utility¹. A reredos is lawful unless it is likely to be the object of superstitious reverence². As to the legality of a baldachino there are conflicting decisions of consistory courts; according to the most recent authority it may be regarded as being not an ornament but an architectural feature for which a faculty may properly be granted³.

The question whether a chancel screen with gates is of practical utility in modern times would usually be answered in the affirmative.

2 See PARA 964 ante, where the cases concerning the legality of crucifixes and images have been considered. In R v Bishop of London (1889) 24 QBD 213, CA, it was held that where a representation to the bishop to allow proceedings to have the reredos in St Paul's Cathedral removed as being unlawful was refused because in his view such litigation entailed mischievous results, the bishop's answer was sufficient. In R v Bishop of London, Leighton's Case [1891] 2 QB 48, where a similar representation had been made, except that it alleged that the reredos had in fact encouraged idolatrous practices, and the bishop, relying on his former consideration of the question, had refused the petition, Hawkins J held that the answer was sufficient. These decisions were affirmed in the House of Lords, which held in both cases that, whether the bishop's reasons were good or bad, he had acted within his jurisdiction and honestly exercised his discretion and judgment: Allcroft v Lord Bishop of London, Lighton v Lord Bishop of London [1891] AC 666, HL. 968. Memorial tablets and inscriptions.

The granting of a faculty for a memorial tablet in a church is a matter not of right but of privilege¹. In modern practice the tendency has been for chancellors, influenced largely, it seems, by aesthetic considerations, to restrict the privilege to exceptional cases, for example where the person commemorated has rendered outstanding service to the church. Control is exercised not only over the design of a memorial but also over the wording of the commemorative inscription. Reported decisions have been concerned mainly with the legality of prayers for the dead².

A holy water stoup has been held to be an illegal ornament¹, but it appears that a cruet of holy oil is not illegal². Incense vessels can be regarded as susceptible of lawful use, and where the diocesan bishop had sanctioned some use of incense the court declined to issue a faculty for the removal of a thurible and an incense boat³. A confession table and chair may be sanctioned where they are intended for use in the hearing of voluntary confessions⁴ as, it seems, may a confessional box⁵.

C. ORNAMENTS OF MINISTERS AND OTHERS

970. Ministers' vestures.

The law on the subject of minister's vestures¹ is based on the provisions of the Ornaments Rubric in the Book of Common Prayer², as confirmed, with modifications, by modern canons³. The rubric, following the Act of Uniformity 1558⁴, prescribes that such ornaments of the ministers at all times of their ministration shall be retained and be in use as were in the Church of England by the authority of Parliament in the second year of Edward VI. The legal effect of that provision was formerly much disputed⁵, but the question has ceased to have serious practical importance since the enactment of the Vestures of Ministers Measure 1964⁶ and the modern canons which, while retaining the provisions of the Ornaments Rubric and of the Act of Uniformity 1558, allow considerable latitude in their application at the present day⁷.

Thus at Morning and Evening Prayer the minister is required to wear a cassock, a surplice and a scarf, and for the occasional offices⁸ he must wear a cassock and a surplice with scarf or stole⁹. At the Holy Communion the celebrant, as also the gospeller and the epistoler, if any, must wear with the cassock either a surplice with scarf or stole, or a surplice or alb with stole and cope, or and alb with customary vestments¹⁰. A minister may at his discretion wear a cope on any appropriate occasion¹¹, and when he wears a scarf he may, if so entitled, also wear the hood of his degree¹². The use of a black gown for preaching, though no longer of common occurrence, is still, it seems, permissible¹³.

The freedom thus accorded to the minister is limited, however, by the provision that he must not change the form of vesture in use in the church or chapel in which he officiates unless he has ascertained by consultation with the parochial church council of the parish that such a change will be acceptable¹⁴. Any case of disagreement on this matter may be referred to the diocesan bishop, whose direction must be obeyed¹⁵.

The fact that a form of vesture is not specifically authorised by these provisions is not in itself a ground for regarding it as unlawful. It has been held that a biretta may lawfully be used by the minister during divine service as a protection to the head when needed; if, however, it is used as a vestment in the services of the church there is room for doubt concerning its legality¹⁶. A humeral veil has been held to be outside the scope of the faculty jurisdiction¹⁷.

1 As to mitres and other vestures of bishops, see PARA 477 ante.

2 See PARA 960 ante.

3 See Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B8, which largely follows the wording of the Vestures of Ministers Measure 1964 (repealed).

4 The Act of Uniformity 1558, s 13 (repealed), contained words (not adopted in the Ornaments Rubric) which allowed for the possibility of future amendment by order of the Queen, and in 1566 advertisements were issued limiting the vestures which might be worn. In consequence it came to be held that the surplice (and not the vestures authorised by the First Prayer Book of Edward VI, namely the alb, vestment, and tunicle: see PARA 960 note 3 ante) must be used by parish ministers at all times of their public ministrations, and that a cope was not to be worn except at the ministration of the Holy Communion in cathedral and collegiate churches: Ridsdale v Clifton (1877) 2 PD 276, PC. The correctness of this decision was, however, challenged in the light of subsequent historical research: cf. the Report of the Royal commission on Ecclesiastical Discipline 1906 (Cd. 3040) PARA 41.

6 The Measure has since been repealed, but see note 2 supra.

7 Vestures of Minister Measure 1964, s 1 (repealed); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B8. While recognising, in effect, the diversity of existing practice, Canon B8 para 5 (following the preamble to the Measure) declares that the Church of England does not attach any particular doctrinal significance to the diversities of permitted vesture and that a vesture worn by a minister in accordance with the provisions of the canon is not to be understood as implying any doctrines other than those now contained in the formularies of the Church of England.

However, that case might well be distinguished on the ground that the relevant statutory provision did not require it to be established that the proposed change would be acceptable to the council (as did the Vestures of Ministers Measure 1964, s 2 (1) (repealed)), but this is implied, See also PARA 987 note 5 post.

972. The nature of the sacrament.

The Holy Communion is one of the two sacraments (the other being baptism¹) which are declared to have been ordained by Christ in the Gospel². It is also called the Lord's Supper³, and in current usage it is often referred to as the Eucharist. The celebration of the Holy Communion, including consecration of the elements of bread and wine and their reception by the communicants⁴, constitutes in theological terms the sacrament of the body and blood of Christ⁵.

No person is permitted to consecrate and administer the sacrament of Holy Communion unless he has been ordained priest by episcopal ordination¹. Hence a deacon may not officiate as celebrant; his functions include, however, assisting the priest when he ministers the Holy Communion, helping him in its distribution and reading the holy scriptures². Moreover, a lay person specially authorised by the bishop under regulations made by the General Synod³ may distribute the sacrament to the people⁴; and, subject to the bishop's general directions, the epistle and the Gospel may at the invitation of the minister be read by a lay person⁵.

974. Obligatory celebration on certain days.

Celebration of the Holy Communion is obligatory on certain days, but the minimum requirements stated below may be subject, it seems, to the presence of a sufficient number of communicants¹. In every cathedral church the Holy Communion must be celebrated at least on all Sundays and other feast days, on Ash Wednesday, and on other days as often as may be convenient, according to the statutes² and customs of each church³. In every parish church, except for some reasonable cause approved by the diocesan bishop, Holy Communion must be celebrated at least on all Sundays and principal feast days and on Ash Wednesday⁴. In churches and chapels dependent on a parish church it is to be celebrated as regularly and frequently as may be convenient, subject to the direction of the Ordinary⁵.

1 See PARA 976 post.

2 As to cathedral statutes, see PARA 610 ante.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B13 para 1. In every cathedral church the canons residentiary and the other ordained ministers, and in collegiate churches and colleges all the ordained ministers, are to receive the Holy Communion every Sunday at the least, unless they have a reasonable cause to the contrary: Canon B 13 para 2; Book of Common Prayer, rubric at the end of the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion.

975. Place of celebration.

The general rule is that no minister may celebrate the Holy Communion elsewhere than in a consecrated building within his cure or other building licensed for the purpose, unless he has permission so to do from the diocesan bishop¹. At all times he may celebrate the Holy Communion in any private house in which there is any person desirous of receiving the sacrament who is sick or dying or so importent that he cannot go to church². Where in any house there is a chapel dedicated and allowed by the ecclesiastical laws of the realm, no chaplain ministering in that house may celebrate the Holy Communion in any other part of it except in that chapel³.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(2) HOLY COMMUNION/976. Number of communicants.

976. Number of communicants.

The Holy Communion is not to be celebrated unless there is a convenient number to communicate with the priest according to his discretion; but the priest's discretion appears to be limited by a further provision to the effect that even if there are not more than twenty qualified communicants in the parish there is to be no Communion unless four, or at least three, communicate with him¹. It seems that, in recent times at any rate, there has been much latitude in the observance of these requirements. The minister is required to give due notice of the celebration of the Holy Communion², and persons intending to partake of it are required to signify their names to him at least some time the day before³. This latter requirement has largely, if not entirely, fallen into disuse⁴.

1 Book of Common Prayer, rubrics at the end of the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion. It has been held to be an ecclesiastical offence for a priest to celebrate Communion without at least three other communicants (Parnell v Roughton (1874) LR 6 PC 46; Clifton v Ridsdale (1876) 1 PD 316), except when administering to a sick person (see PARA 1046 post). Subject to certain exceptions¹, the following persons are entitled to be admitted to the Holy Communion: (1) members of the Church of England² who have been confirmed in accordance with the rites of that Church or are ready and desirous to be so confirmed or who have been otherwise episcopally confirmed with unction or with the laying on of hands³; (2) baptised persons who are communicant members of other Churches which subscribe to the doctrine of the Holy Trinity and who are in good standing in their own church⁴; (3) any other baptised persons authorised to be admitted under regulations of the General Synod⁵; and (4) any baptised person in immediate danger of death⁶. Where any minister is in doubt as to the admission of a person to the Holy Communion he must refer the matter to the diocesan bishop or other Ordinary⁷ and follow his guidance on the matter⁸.

978. Exclusion of notorious offenders.

A minister must not without lawful cause¹ deny the sacrament to any person who devoutly and humbly desires it². If he is persuaded that a person who presents himself to be a partaker of the Holy Communion ought not to be admitted to it by reason of malicious and open contention with his neighbours, or other grave and open sin without repentance, the minister must give an account of it to the diocesan bishop or other Ordinary³ and obey his order and direction in the matter; but until this procedure has been followed, and until in accordance with such order and direction he has warned the person concerned not to come to the Lord's table, the minister is not to refuse him the sacrament⁴, unless it be a case of grave and immediate scandal to the congregation; in which case the minister is not to admit him, but must give an account to the Ordinary within seven days and obey the Ordinary's order and direction. Before issuing his order and direction in relation to any such person the Ordinary must afford to him an opportunity for interview⁴.

1 The question may be raised whether 'lawful cause' is limited to the matters specified in the rubric referred to in note 4 infra, and in particular whether it could include a breach of church discipline in relation to a marriage which was valid according to the general law. As regards the modern statutory exceptions to the prohibited degrees of relationship, it has been held that the sacrament could not be refused to parties whose marriage was valid as a civil contract under the Deceased Wife's Sister's Marriage Act 1907: Banister v Thompson [1908] P 362; R v Dibdin [1910] P 57, CA; affd. sub nom. Thompson v Dibdin [1912] AC 533, HL. There seems to be no reported decision on the question whether the sacrament may be withheld from a divorced person who has remarried within the lifetime of a former spouse, although in practice bishops have assumed the right to exercise a discretion in this matter. As to the statutory provision enabling a clergyman to refuse to solemnise, or permit the solemnisation of, such a remarriage in church, see PARA 1005 post.

2 Sacrament Act 1547, s 8.

3 For the meaning of 'Ordinary', see PARA 458 note 3 ante. In the present context it includes, in the case of the Ordinary being the diocesan bishop and the see being vacant, the archbishop of the province, or, in the case of the archbishopric being vacant or the vacant see being Canterbury or York the archbishop of the other province: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B16 para 2.

979. Obligations attached to communicant status.

A duty is imposed by canon on all who have been confirmed to receive the Holy Communion regularly, and especially at the festivals of Christmas, Easter and Whitsun¹. An older provision, contained in the Book of Common Prayer, is to the effect that every parishioner shall communicate at least three times in the year, of which Easter is to be one². While these obligations are primarily of a religious nature, the extent to which they are fulfilled may be a factor in determining a person's legal right to participate in synodical government³, or his qualifications for appointment to certain offices, for example those of churchwarden⁴ or diocesan chancellor⁵.

980. The ante-Communion.

The order for Holy Communion as set forth in the Book of Common Prayer comprises two main parts: (1) the ante-Communion, as it is commonly called¹, which concludes with the prayer for the church militant; and (2) the Communion proper. It is directed by rubric² that the ante-Communion be said on Sundays and other holy days³, even though there be no Communion following⁴; but this requirement is now, it seems, rarely observed. Directions for the conduct of this part of the service include provision for the giving of appropriate notices⁵ and for the delivery of a sermon or homily⁶, after which the priest is to return to the holy table and begin the offertory by reading one or more of the prescribed sentences⁷. At this stage a collection is to be taken⁸; and if there be a Communion following the bread and wine are then to be placed upon the table⁹.

1 It is so designated eg in the alternative service of Holy Communion, Series 2, published in 1967.

2 See the Book of Common Prayer, rubric at the end of the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion. As to the rubrics, see PARA 955 ante.

3 As to holy days, see PARA 950 ante.

6 See the Book of Common Prayer, rubric following the creed in the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion. See also PARA 946 ante. While the offertory sentences are being read the deacons, churchwardens or other fit person appointed in that behalf¹ are to receive the alms for the poor and other devotions of the people in a decent bason provided for the purpose by the parish, and reverently bring it to the priest, who humbly presents it and places it upon the holy table². After the service the money given at the offertory is to be disposed of to such pious and charitable uses as the minister and churchwardens think fit, and if they disagree it is to be disposed of as the Ordinary appoints³. An announcement of the objects of the collection beforehand is not obligatory, but is not unlawful; and when Holy Communion is combined with another service it is not an offence to take two collections from the same gathering⁴.

1 The appointment of another fit person may be made by the priest: Cope v Barber (1872) LR 7 CP 393 at 403, per Willes J. The 'other fit person' refers to a layman and, although a priest or bishop may make the collection, in doing so he performs a lay function, and is not ministering or celebrating any sacrament, divine service, rite or office within the meaning of the Ecclesiastical Courts Jurisdiction Act 1860, s 2; Cope v Barber supra. TEXT AND NOTE 3--The power of a parochial church council to determine, jointly with minister, the objects for which moneys collected in church are to be given, is no longer subject to directions contained in the Book of Common Prayer: 1956 Measure s 7(iv); Church of England (Legal Aid and Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1988 s 13.

982. Provision for Communion.

The churchwardens of every parish, with the advice and direction of the minister, must provide a sufficient quantity of bread and of wine for the communicants¹. The bread may be leavened or unleavened², but must be of the best and purest wheat flour that can conveniently be got; and the wine must be the fermented juice of the grape, good and wholesome³. The bread is to be brought to the communion table in a paten or convenient box, and the wine in a convenient cruet or flagon⁴. The table is to be covered at the Communion time with a fair white linen cloth⁵.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B17 para 1. As to the obligation upon the parochial church council to provide and pay for these and other requisites, see Canon F14 (which does not specifically relate to the bread and wine), and the Book of Common Prayer, rubric at the end of the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion.

2 This provision, introduced by the Prayer Book (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1965, s 3 (3) (repealed), seems clearly to establish the legality of wafer bread, notwithstanding any past decision to the contrary: see eg Hebbert v Purchas (1871) LR 3 PC 605. It suffices that the bread be 'such as is usual to be eaten': Book of Common Prayer, rubric at the end of the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion. This is similar to the rubric in the Second Prayer Book of Edward VI; the First Prayer Book of Edward VI required unleavened bread to be used. Series 2 and Series 3 Holy Communion refer simply to 'the bread'.

The rubric in the Book of Common Prayer directs that the priest shall say the opening prayers standing at the north side of the table¹. The intended effect of this rubric, even when considered in relation to the circumstances of 1662², has long been a matter of dispute. The principal questions argued have been (1) whether, when the table is placed altarwise, the priest is required to stand at the north end or at the west side of the table; and (2) whether he is at liberty to adopt one position during the opening prayers and another position during the prayer of consecration.

Decisions of the courts have been such as to allow in practice a considerable latitude of interpretation. In particular it is not to be regarded as an ecclesiastical offence for the priest to stand, at any stage of the service, on the west side of the table³. There is no specific warrant in the Book of Common Prayer for the practice adopted in many churches whereby the priest stands behind the table (namely on the east side) and celebrates facing westwards⁴.

The Holy Communion must be celebrated distinctly, reverently and in an audible voice⁵.

1 Book of Common Prayer, rubric at the beginning of the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion, following the Second Prayer Book of Edward VI. The rubrics in the First Prayer Book of Edward VI directed the priest to stand 'humbly afore the middes of the Altar'.

2 At the period when the rubric was framed the table was, at the time of the Holy Communion, placed in almost all parish churches lengthwise in the body of the church or chancel, with the smaller ends at the east and west and the longer sides at the north and south. The rubric was framed with reference to this position of the table. When at a later period the holy table came to be placed altarwise, a controversy as to the position of the priest arose, which was still being carried on when the present Prayer Book came into force, but the rubric was left unaltered and no attempt was made to resolve the controversy.

In the same proceedings consideration was given to a related question arising under the rubric immediately preceding the prayer of consecration, where reference is made to the breaking of the bread 'before the people'; and it was held that all the manual acts (of which the breaking of the bread is one) must be so performed as to be visible to the communicants properly placed. In Ridsdale v Clifton (1877) 2 PD 276 at 343, the Privy Council had held that the priest must not interpose his body so as intentionally to prevent that result.

4 There is probably, however, little likelihood of such issues being made the subject of litigation in the future, for the reasons advanced in PARA 958 ante. See also PARAS 941, 955 ante.

984. Ceremonies connected with consecration.

The legality of certain ceremonial practices connected with the consecration of the elements has been pronounced upon by the courts on numerous occasions in the past, and in particular by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council during the period of the so-called 'ritual prosecutions' in the nineteenth century¹. Among the practices which have been held to be unlawful are the mixing of the wine with water in and as part of the communion service²; a change of posture by the priest (for example by kneeling or prostrating himself) during the prayer of consecration³; the elevation of the elements after consecration⁴; and performance of the ceremony of ablution (cleansing of the vessels) as a distinct and integral part of the service still in progress⁵.

2 Read v Bishop of Lincoln [1892] AC 644 at 658, PC; see also Martin v Mackonochie (1868) LR 2 A & E 116; on appeal, but not on this point, LR 2 PC 365. In the Opinions of Lambeth (31st July 1899) (see PARA 954 note 2 ante) the archbishops said that although our Lord had used the wine of the Passover, which was a mixed cup, there is no record of his having mixed it afresh for the purpose of his sacrament, nor is there any reason to believe that he did so; the mixing of the chalice as part of the ceremonial was therefore omitted, though nothing was said to prevent it being mixed beforehand.

3 It was held that such a change of posture would be a violation of the rubric immediately preceding the prayer of consecration, which must be interpreted as requiring the priest to remain standing throughout the reciting of that prayer: see Martin v Mackonochie (1868) LR 2 PC 365. 5 Read v Bishop of Lincoln [1891] P 9; affd. [1892] AC 644, PC. The Book of Common Prayer, rubric at the end of the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion requires that anything which remains of the consecrated elements be reverently consumed immediately after the blessing. If at this stage the minister cleanses the vessels of all such remains, without ceremony or prayers, before finally leaving the holy table, he does not contravene the rubric: Read v Bishop of Lincoln supra. As to the corresponding rubrics in Series 2 and Series 3 Holy Communion, see PARA 986 note 3 post.

985. Reception of the sacrament.

Every minister, whenever he celebrates the Holy Communion, must receive the sacrament himself¹, and then administer it to the other communicants, delivering it into their hands while they kneel². The sacrament must be administered to the people in both kinds, both bread and wine, unless necessity otherwise requires³.

2 Book of Common Prayer, rubric following the prayer of consecration in the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion. The so-called 'black rubric' at the end of that Order, introduced in the Second Prayer Book of Edward VI (1552) to secure the support of some reformers, omitted from subsequent prayer books, but reintroduced in modified form in 1662, emphasises that the act of kneeling does not imply that any adoration is intended or ought to be done either to the sacramental bread or wine or to any corporal presence of Christ's natural flesh and blood, and declares that the bread and wine remain in their natural substances and that Christ's natural body and blood are in Heaven.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(2) HOLY COMMUNION/986. Reservation of the sacrament.

986. Reservation of the sacrament.

The practice known as reservation consists in setting apart a portion of the consecrated elements for subsequent administration to persons other than those present at the service in which consecration has taken place¹. Reservation has in the past been held to be illegal as contravening the rubric in the Book of Common Prayer of the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion². More recently, however, in the light of liturgical developments³, courts have recognised that it may be practised blamelessly and rightly provided certain conditions are observed; thus where the bishop has sanctioned reservation in a particular church the diocesan chancellor may be justified in granting a faculty for an aumbry⁴.

1 The practice takes several distinct forms. It is sometimes customary to treat sick persons who are not in the church, but are living close by, as if they were part of the congregation, and at the time of the administration to the communicants generally to take the elements out of the church to them as well as to those who are actually present. It has been claimed that this is not reservation at all, because the administration goes on without interruption, and it cannot be said that what is sent in this way is part of what remains after the service is over. Another practice is, instead of consuming all that remains after the service is over. Another practice is, instead of consuming all that remains of the consecrated elements as the rubric directs, to keep a portion back and subsequently to administer this portion to people known to be sick. Again, the elements after consecration may be reserved, not only to be used for those who are known to be sick at the time, but to be used for any case of sudden emergency which may occasion a demand for the sacrament in the course of the week. In addition, reservation is sometimes used for the benefit of persons who for reasons other than incapacity (eg conditions of work) are unable to attend a service in church.

As to the rubric referred to, see PARA 984 note 5 ante.

3 If the Church Assembly's Prayer Book Measure of 1928 had been accepted by Parliament a prayer book would have been authorised which in a rubric to an alternative Order for the Communion of the Sick made provision for reservation in an aumbry set in the north or south wall of the sanctuary of the church or of any chapel thereof or, if need be, in the wall of some other part of the church approved by the bishop, provided it was not immediately behind or above a holy table.

Series 2 Holy Communion makes provision by rubric 40 for the consumption after administration or after the end of the service of what remains of the consecrated bread and wine 'which is not required for the purposes of communion'. It has been held that the effect of this wording is to make reservation lawful: Re St Peter and St Paul, Leckhampton [1968] P 495, [1967] 3 All ER 1057. (3) MORNING AND EVENING PRAYER AND THE LITANY

987. Obligation to read services.

In every parish church¹ Morning and Evening Prayer must be said or sung distinctly, reverently and in an audible voice each Sunday, on other principal feast days², and on Ash Wednesday and Good Friday³. The diocesan bishop may, however, if satisfied that there is good reason to do so, authorise the minister of any parish church or parish centre of worship⁴ within his diocese to dispense with the reading of either or both those services on any such day, but before authorising the minister to dispense with the reading of either service on Sunday for a period of more than three months the bishop must consult with the parochial church council or with two council members nominated for the purpose by the council⁵. The bishop's powers under this provision are not to be used so as to cause any church to cease altogether to be used for public worship⁶. On all other days the minister of the parish, together with all other ministers licensed to serve in the parish, being at home and not otherwise reasonably hindered, must resort to the church morning and evening and, warning being given to the people by the tolling of a bell, say or sing the Common Prayers⁷ and on the appointed days⁸ the Litany⁹.

In every cathedral church the Common Prayer must be said or sung distinctly, reverently and in an audible voice every morning and evening, and the Litany on the appointed days, the officiating ministers and others of the clergy present in choir being duly habited¹⁰.

The diocesan bishop may direct what services are to be held or are not required to be held in any church in the diocese which is not a parish church or in any building or part of a building in the diocese which is licensed¹¹ for public worship but is not designated as a parish centre of worship¹².

2 As to feast days, see PARA 950 ante.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B11 para 1 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3). The Book of Common Prayer exhibits the intention that the services shall be used daily throughout the year: rubric preceding Order for Morning Prayer. The Act of Uniformity 1662, to which the Book of Common Prayer was annexed, provided that the services were to be read on every Lord's Day and on all other days and occasions therein appointed, and at the times therein prescribed, by all ministers or curates in every place of public worship of the Church of England: s 1 (repealed). The strictness of these requirements has, however, been modified in certain respects both in law and practice. Thus where, under a trust deed, the income of a fund was payable to an incumbent for conducting services in strict and literal accordance with the Book of Common Prayer, Sir John Romilly declined to hold that this required daily services: Re Hartshill Endowment (1861) 30 Beav 130.

It seems that the reading of lessons by any lay person whom the minister considers suitable, though not authorised by any specific provision, is not to be regarded as unlawful⁴. There is no provision for the preaching of sermons by lay persons other than deaconesses and readers⁵.

Deaconesses (as to whom see PARA 759 et seq ante) may be so authorised: Canon D1 para 3 (a) (added by Canon promulgated 20th February 1973).

4 Although the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B12 para 4, permits a lay person to read the epistle and Gospel at Holy Communion nothing in the canons specifically permits a lay person to read the lessons at Morning and Evening Prayer, but the practice is of long standing. The Prayer Book (Further Provisions) Measure 1968, s 1 (5), provided that nothing in the Book of Common Prayer was to be taken as preventing the reading of any lesson by a lay person, but this provision has been repealed and not replaced: Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 6 (3), Sch. 2. The rubrics in the Book of Common Prayer do not say who is to read the lessons, but require the minister to announce them at Morning Prayer.

(4) BAPTISM

990. Administration of the sacrament.

Baptism is the sacrament by which a person is admitted into the Church of Christ¹. Its essential parts are the use of water and the invocation of the Trinity². It is because it is a sacrament that it ought properly to be administered by persons in priests' orders³. The duties of a deacon, however, include the baptising of infants in the absence of the priest⁴, and the bishop may authorise a deaconess to baptise in the absence of the minister⁵. Baptism by a dissenting minister or by any lay person in the name of the Trinity is good and effectual⁶. Provision is made in the rubrics for administering the sacrament by immersion in water, but the affusion or sprinkling of water is sufficient and usual⁷. It should from time to time be administered upon Sundays or other holy days at or immediately after public worship, so that a large number of people may witness the reception of the baptised person into the church and be reminded of their own profession in baptism, but children may, if necessary, be baptised on any other day⁸. The act of baptism is immediately followed by the signing of the Cross on the baptised person's forehead⁹. The Book of Common Prayer provides a brief form of private baptism which can be used of necessity when a child has to be baptised at home or in hospital¹⁰. The ministration of private baptism should, if the child lives, be followed in due course by a service in church at which the child is publicly received and signed with the sign of the Cross; if, however, the validity of the former baptism is not verified, the child is conditionally rebaptised¹¹.

1 Articles of Religion 25, 27; Gib Cod 359-372; Ayl Par 102-106. It is clearly intended that public baptism of infants in accordance with the office provided for this purpose in the Book of Common Prayer should be the normal practice, the other baptismal offices (private baptism of children and baptism of persons of riper years) being regarded as supplementary. See Articles of Religion 27, which states that the baptism of young children is in any wise to be retained in the Church, as most agreeable with the institution of Christ. 991. Baptism of persons of riper years.

The Book of Common Prayer provides a separate office for the baptism of such as are of riper years and able to answer for themselves¹. It is the minister's duty to see that the candidate is properly instructed in the principles of the Christian religion and to exhort him to prepare himself with prayers and fasting to receive the sacrament with repentance and faith²; and to give notice of it, at least a week before the baptism, to the diocesan bishop or whomsoever he appoints for the purpose³. At the baptism the candidate is to have sponsors in lieu of godparents⁴. Confirmation is expected to follow the baptism as soon as conveniently possible⁵.

992. Godparents and sponsors.

For every child to be baptised there must, unless he is of sufficient age to answer for himself, be not fewer than three godparents, of whom at least two must be of the same sex as the child and of whom at least one must be of the opposite sex, although when three cannot conveniently be had, one godfather and one godmother will suffice¹. Parents may be godparents for their own children provided that the child has at least one other godparent¹.

The godparents are to be persons who will faithfully fulfil their responsibilities both by their care for the children committed to their charge and by the example of their own godly living². The minister must instruct the infant's parents or guardians that the same responsibilities rest on them as are required of the godparents³. At the ministration of baptism the godparents are required to make the appropriate answers on behalf of the child⁴. When a person who is of riper years and able to answer for himself is to be baptised⁵, he must choose three, or at least two, persons to be his sponsors; their functions are to present him at the font and afterwards put him in mind of his Christian profession and duties⁶. No person may be admitted to be a godparent or sponsor who has not been baptised and confirmed, although the minister may dispense with the requirement of confirmation in any case in which in his judgment need so requires⁷.

If the minister refuses or unduly delays to baptise any such infant the parents or guardians may apply to the diocesan bishop who must, after consultation with the minister, give such directions as he thinks fit⁴. A minister who is informed of the weakness or danger of death of any infant within his cure and is therefore desired to go to baptise him must not either refuse or delay to do so⁵.

995. Register of baptisms.

A register of public and private baptisms must be kept by the minister of every parish and by the minister of any chapelry where the ceremonies of baptism have been usually and may according to law be performed¹.

The prescribed particulars of every baptism² must be entered in the register book by the minister as soon as possible after its solemnisation, and in no case later than seven days thereafter unless he is unavoidably prevented from so doing³.

1 Parochial Registers Act 1812, s 1; Births and Deaths Registration Act 1836, s 1. The provisions of the Parochial Registers Act 1812 apply also so far as circumstances permit to cathedrals, collegiate churches and chapels of colleges or hospitals: s 20. On a church becoming a guild church its baptismal registers are delivered to the guild church vicar and are deemed to be the register books of the guild church; in other respects the law relating to baptismal registers applies to guild churches: City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 23. As to guild churches, see PARA 597 et seq ante. Every minister must observe the law relating to the registration of baptisms: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B39 para 1. The parochial church council must provide baptismal register books in every parish church and chapel where baptism is to be administered (Canon F11 para 1), and these books must be provided, maintained and kept in accordance with the Acts and Measures relating to them and rules and regulations made thereunder (Canon F11 para 2).

2 Ie the date of the baptism, the child's Christian names, the parents' Christian names and surname, abode and quality, trade or occupation, and the name of the person performing the ceremony: Parochial Registers Act 1812, Sch. (A). Further particulars must be given in the case of adoption or legitimation: see the Adoption Act 1958, s 25; Baptismal Register Measure 1961, s 1; and PARA 1112 note 2 post. 996. Baptism elsewhere than in the parish church.

When the ceremony of baptism is performed elsewhere than in the parish church or a chapel having its own register¹, and by a person who is not the minister or curate of the parish or chapelry concerned, the minister who performs the ceremony must, on the same or the next day, transmit a prescribed certificate of the baptism to the minister of that parish or his curate, who must make an entry of the baptism in the register, noting that the entry is made according to the certificate².

If the baptism is solemnised in an extra-parochial place where there is no church or chapel the officiating minister may within one month thereafter deliver to the minister of such adjoining parish as the Ordinary directs a memorandum of the baptism signed by a parent of the child and containing the prescribed particulars, and the memorandum must be entered by the minister to whom it is delivered in the register of his parish and is to form part of that register³.

A minister who intends to baptise any infant whose parents are residing outside the boundaries of his cure, unless the names of those persons or of one of them is on the church electoral roll of the same, must not proceed to the baptism without having sought the good will of the minister of the parish in which the parents reside⁴; and a minister baptising a child in a hospital or nursing home when the parents do not reside in his cure and their names are not on the electoral roll of the same must send their names and address to the minister of the parish in which they reside⁵.

998. Teaching the young.

Every minister must take care that the children and young people within his cure are instructed in the doctrine, sacraments and discipline of Christ as set forth in the Bible, the Book of Common Prayer and especially in the Catechism, and to this end he or some godly and competent persons appointed by him must on Sundays or if need be at other convenient times diligently instruct and teach the children accordingly¹. Parents and guardians must take care that their children receive this instruction².

(5) CONFIRMATION

999. Administration of confirmation.

Confirmation is the laying on of hands by the bishop¹ upon persons who are baptised and instructed in the Christian faith and are come to years of discretion². The godparents of baptised infants are to take care that they are brought to the bishop to be confirmed as soon as they can say the Apostles' Creed, the Lord's Prayer and the ten commandments, and are further instructed in the Church Catechism³. Persons baptised when of riper years should be confirmed by the bishop as soon as conveniently may be after their baptism⁴. A minister having a cure of souls must diligently seek out children and others whom he thinks meet to be confirmed, and instruct them in the Christian faith and life as set forth in the Bible, the Book of Common Prayer and the Catechism⁵. He must satisfy himself that the candidates have been validly baptised⁶; in the case of doubt a candidate is to be conditionally baptised⁷. The minister presenting a candidate for confirmation must record and enter the confirmation, with any change of name⁸, in the register book of confirmations⁹ which must be provided in every church and chapel¹⁰.

Any person desiring to be received into the Church of England who has not been baptised or the validity of whose baptism can be held in question must be instructed and baptised or conditionally baptised¹, and this constitutes his reception into the Church². If he has been baptised but not episcopally confirmed and he desires to be formally admitted into the Church he must, after appropriate instruction, be received by the rite of confirmation³. If he has been episcopally confirmed with unction or the laying on of hands he must be instructed and, with the bishop's permission, received into the Church according to the form of reception approved by the General Synod or with other appropriate prayers, and if he is a priest he must be received only by the diocesan bishop or by that bishop's commissary⁴.

(7) BURIAL OF THE DEAD

1041. Burial in consecrated ground.

Save in the excepted cases mentioned below, where a person is buried in consecrated ground¹ the office for the burial of the dead according to the rites of the Church of England² is to be said by a minister in holy orders³. The exceptions fall into two categories: (1) cases excluded by the rubric in the Book of Common Prayer⁴, namely where a person has died unbaptised⁵ or excommunicate⁶ or has laid violent hands upon himself⁷; (2) cases in which any relative, friend or legal representative having the charge of or being responsible for the burial of the deceased person gives the prescribed written notice that it is intended that the burial shall take place without the performance of the burial service according to the rites of the Church of England⁸. In a case in which the burial office according to the rites of the Church of England may not lawfully be used⁹, and in any other case at the request of the relative, friend or legal representative having the charge of or being responsible for the burial, the minister is to use such service as may be prescribed or approved by the Ordinary¹⁰, or, where appropriate, any form of service available for the burial of suicides and approved by the General Synod¹¹.

Except in the above-mentioned cases, in which the rubric forbids the use of the burial office according to the rites of the Church of England, a minister may not refuse to bury according to those rites the corpse or ashes¹² of any person deceased within his cure or of any parishioner whether deceased within his cure or elsewhere that is brought to a church or burial ground or cemetery under his control in which the burial may lawfully be effected, due notice being given¹³.

A minister must, as soon as possible after a burial, register it in the prescribed manner¹⁴.

1041 Burial in consecrated ground

TEXT--A person who would otherwise have no right of burial in the churchyard or other burial ground of a parish has a right of burial there if at his death his name was on the church electoral roll of the parish: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1976 s 6(1). No person not having a right of burial in that place may be buried there without the consent of the minister (defined in ibid s 6(3)), but in deciding whether to give consent the minister must have regard to any general guidance given by the parochial church council with respect to the matter; ibid s 6(2). Burial includes disposal of cremated remains: 1976 Measure s 6(2); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 Sch 3 para 12.

Section 6(2) does not provide for a review by a consistory court of an incumbent's refusal to give consent for burial: Re St Nicholas's, Baddesley Ensor [1983] Fam 1, [1982] 2 All ER 351.

The minister of a parish may perform a funeral service in any crematorium or cemetery situated in another parish without the consent of the minister of that parish if (i) the deceased person died in that parish; or (ii) the deceased person was resident in that parish immediately before his death; or (iii) the name of the deceased person was on the church electoral roll of that parish immediately before his death: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 s 2(1), (2). As to the powers of chaplains at institutions to perform funeral services, see PARA 731.

The minister of a parish situated wholly or partly in an area which is chargeable with the expenses of a cemetery or for the use of which a crematorium or cemetery has been designated by the bishop of the diocese must, with respect to persons who are his own parishioners or who die in his parish or whose names are entered on the church electoral roll of his parish, where he is requested to do so, be under the same obligation to perform or arrange the performance of funeral services in the crematorium or cemetery as he has to perform or arrange the performance of funeral services in any churchyard of his parish: 1992 Measure s 2(4).

'Minister', in relation to a parish, means (i) the incumbent; (ii) where the benefice to which the parish belongs is vacant (and no suspension period applies), the rural dean; (iii) where a suspension period applies to the benefice to which the parish belongs, the priest-in-charge (if any); and (iv) where a special cure of souls in respect of the parish has been assigned to a vicar in a team ministry by a scheme under the Pastoral Measure 1983 or by his licence from the bishop, that vicar: 1992 Measure s 2(6).

The relative, friend or legal representative having the charge of or being responsible for the burial of a deceased person who had a right of interment in any unconsecrated ground provided under an Act relating to burial is entitled, if he thinks fit, to have the burial performed in it according to the rites of the Church of England by any minister in holy orders of the Church of England who is willing to perform it, and no minister in holy orders is liable to any censure or penalty for using the burial office of the Church of England in any unconsecrated burial ground or cemetery or part of it, or in any building on it, in any case in which, if it had been consecrated, he might have lawfully used that office¹. When a body is to be buried according to the rites of the Church of England in any unconsecrated ground, the officiating minister, on coming to the grave, must first bless it².

Cremation¹ of a dead body is lawful in connection with Christian burial². When a body is to be cremated, the burial service may precede, accompany or follow the cremation, and may be held either in the church or at the crematorium³. While an incumbent is not under any obligation to perform a funeral service within the grounds of any burial authority, in the event of his refusal any clerk in holy orders, not being prohibited under ecclesiastical censure, may, with the permission of the bishop and at the request of the person having charge of the cremation or interment of the cremated remains, perform such a service within such grounds⁴. 1043 Cremation

TEXT AND NOTES--A person who has a right of burial in the churchyard or other burial ground of a parish has a right of burial therein of his cremated remains, but if the churchyard or burial ground has been closed by Order in Council, the burial must be authorised by a faculty or be in an area set aside by a faculty for the burial of cremated remains generally: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 s 3(1). 1044. Prayers for the dead.

The practice of praying for the dead is of much earlier date than the doctrine of purgatory¹. Prayers for the dead do not fall under the same condemnation as the Roman doctrine of purgatory², and unless they necessarily involve that doctrine are not illegal³. The use of prayers for the dead has become more general⁴, as also have inscriptions on memorial tablets, windows and tombstones containing words of supplication for peace and light for the departed⁵.

4 This is especially so since the publication of the revised prayer book of 1928, which, though rejected by the House of Commons, had received the approval of both convocations, and which contained (eg in the alternative order for Holy Communion and in the burial office) prayers for the departed.

5 Most of the reported decisions on this subject have been given in faculty proceedings, and the courts, in exercising their discretion to grant or withhold a faculty, have often been influenced by other considerations besides that of strict legality: see PARA 1310 post. Notices inviting prayers for the dead are in themselves (ie apart from any erroneous teaching) not illegal: Rector and Churchwardens of Chapel St Mary, Suffolk v Packard [1927] P 289. (8) OTHER OCCASIONAL OFFICES AND MINISTRATIONS

1045. Churching of women.

The Book of Common Prayer provides a service entitled the Thanksgiving of Women after Childbirth, commonly called the Churching of Women¹. The rubrics direct that at the usual time after her delivery the woman is to come into the church decently apparelled² and there kneel down in some convenient place determined by custom and or direction of the Ordinary; it is declared to be convenient that she should receive the Holy Communion, if there be a celebration of it; and she is enjoined to offer the accustomed offerings³.

1 This service has largely (but not, it seems, entirely) fallen into disuse. The rubrics indicate that it is to be conducted by a priest, but the bishop may authorise a deaconess to conduct it: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon D1 para 4 (b) (substituted by Canon promulgated 20th February 1973).

2 In Shipden v Redman Chancellor of Norwich (1622) Palm 296, a diocesan order that a woman should come in a white veil to be churched was held to be enforceable as being in accordance with ancient ecclesiastical custom.

3 See Naylor v Scott (1729) 2 Ld Raym 1559. A custom that a fee shall be paid at the usual time of churching, whether the woman is actually churched or not, is void: Naylor v Scott supra. The offering is voluntary in cases where the standard table of fees prescribed by the Church Commissioners under the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 2, is applicable; cf. para 1198 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/6. CHURCH SERVICES/(8) OTHER OCCASIONAL OFFICES AND MINISTRATIONS/1046. Ministry to the sick.

1046. Ministry to the sick.

The minister, upon being informed that any person in the parish is sick or in danger of death, must resort to him as soon as possible to exhort, instruct and comfort him in such manner as he shall think most needful and convenient¹. A form of service for the purpose is provided in the Book of Common Prayer². A minister knowing that any person who is sick or in danger of death or so impotent that he cannot go to church is desirous of receiving the Holy Communion, must visit him as soon as may be, and unless there be any grave reason to the contrary, must minister that sacrament to him at such place and time as may be convenient³. If any such person so desires, the priest may lay hands upon him and may anoint him with oil on the forehead with the sign of the Cross, using an authorised form of service⁴.

The Book of Common Prayer contains no provision for exorcism⁵. The Archbishop of Canterbury has indicated that exorcism should be performed only by an experienced person, authorised by the diocesan bishop, in collaboration with medical treatment and in the context of prayer and sacrament, and should be followed by continuing pastoral care⁶.

1 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B37 para 1. The minister is required to use his best endeavours to ensure that he be speedily informed when any person is sick or in danger of death in the parish: Canon B37 para 1.

2 Book of Common Prayer, Order for the Visitation of the Sick.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B37 para 2. See also the provision contained in the Book of Common Prayer for Communion of the Sick, including rubrics which require the sick person to give timely notice to the minister, signifying how many there are to communicate with him (who must be three or at least two, except that, on special request, the minister may communicate with him alone in the time of plague, sweat or other contagious disease, when no parishioners or neighbours may be got to communicate with him for fear of infection). As to the use of the reserved sacrament for communion of the sick, see PARA 986 ante.

4 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B37 para 3 (amended by Amending Canon No. 3). The form must be one authorised by Canon B 1 (substituted by Amending Canon No. 3) (see PARA 937 ante), and the minister must use pure olive oil consecrated by the diocesan bishop or otherwise by the minister himself in accordance with that form of service: Canon B37 para 3 (amended by Amending Canon No. 3).

5 Recognition was given to exorcism in the Canons Ecclesiastical (1603), 72 (repealed), where it was provided that ministers were not to attempt the practice of exorcism without first obtaining the licence and direction of the bishop of the diocese. No corresponding provision appears in the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical.

1047. Ministry of absolution.

The exercise by a priest of the ministry of absolution is recognised as lawful in the Church of England¹. In addition to the general confessions of the congregation and the absolutions pronounced by the priest in the service of the Church² at Morning and Evening Prayer and in the Holy Communion, provision is made for private confession and absolution in appropriate circumstances, for example where intending communicants or sick persons are troubled in conscience³. However, while the making of confessions in such cases is encouraged and opportunities should be given to those who wish to make them, there is no legal justification for imposing the duty of confession as a compulsory requirement⁴. Normally a priest must not exercise the ministry of absolution in any place without the permission of the minister having the cure of souls there unless he is by law authorised to exercise his ministry there without being subject to such control⁵; but a priest may exercise the ministry of absolution anywhere in respect of any person who is in danger of death or if there is some urgent or weighty cause⁶. The obligation of a priest to observe strict secrecy concerning what is communicated to him in the course of a private confession is enjoined by ecclesiastical authority⁷; but whether the courts would recognise such a communication as belonging to the category of privileged communications remains uncertain⁸.

(9) PROTECTION AGAINST DISTURBANCE

1048. Riotous or indecent behaviour.

Any person who is guilty of riotous, violent or indecent¹ behaviour in any cathedral, church or chapel of the Church of England or in any chapel of any religious denomination² or in any certified place of religious worship³, whether during the celebration of divine service or at any other time, or in any churchyard or burial ground⁴, or who molests, lets, disturbs, vexes or troubles, or by any other unlawful means disquiets or misuses any preacher duly authorised to preach therein or any clergyman in holy orders ministering or celebrating any sacrament or any divine service, rite or office⁵, is liable on summary conviction to a fine of £20 or imprisonment without fine for any time not exceeding two months⁶. An appeal lies from conviction to the Crown Court⁷. Upon commission of such an offence the offender may immediately and forthwith be apprehended by any constable or churchwarden of the parish or place where the offence has been committed and taken before a justice of the peace to be dealt with according to law⁸.

1 What amounts to indecent behaviour depends on circumstances of time and place. An act done in a church during divine service may be highly indecent and improper although it would not be so at another time: Worth v Terrington (1845) 13 M & W 781 at 795, per Parke B. 'Indecent' does not here signify what tends to deprave or corrupt nor does it have any sexual connotation; it is used within the context of creating a disturbance in a sacred place: Abrahams v Cavey [1968] 1 QB 479, [1967] 3 All ER 179, DC. See also Palmer v Roffey (1824) 2 Add 141; Girt v Fillingham [1901] P 176; Jones v Catterall (1902) 18 TLR 367.

5 The Ecclesiastical Courts Jurisdiction Act 1860, s 2, draws a distinction between a person 'duly authorised to preach' in the church and 'a clergyman in holy orders ministering or celebrating any sacrament or any divine service, rite, or office' in any church. The express provision for the case of a preacher who is not strictly ministering or celebrating any sacrament or any divine service, rite or office shows that the legislature, in dealing with the case of a clergyman in holy orders, meant the latter words to apply to something in the course of being done which in its character could only then be done by such a clergyman: Cope v Barber (1872) LR 7 CP 393 at 401, per Willes J. 'Sacrament' here refers to celebration outside a church, and 'any divine service... in any cathedral, church or chapel' include all the services of the Church of England, including the celebration of the sacraments: Matthews v King [1934] 1 KB 505. The protection is given to the clergyman independently of any question of irregularities in the service: Matthews v King supra.

6 Ecclesiastical Courts Jurisdiction Act 1860, s 2; Criminal Justice Act 1967, s 92 (1), Sch. 3, Part I. The fact that the behaviour was in assertion of a bona fide claim of right is no defence: Asher v Calcraft (1887) 18 QBD 607; and see Kensit v Dean and Chapter of St Paul's [1905] 2 KB 249 at 257; A-G v St Cross Hospital (1854) 18 Beav 601. The offence can be committed by a clergyman who acts in a violent or indecent way in his own church or churchyard: Vallancey v Fletcher [1897] 1 QB 265. 8 Ecclesiastical Courts Jurisdiction Act 1860, s 3. As to the powers and duties of churchwardens in such circumstances, see also PARA 554 ante. A person may, it seems, be removed from a church for disturbing the congregation at the time of divine service even though no part of a service is actually proceeding at the time: see Williams v Glenister (1824) 2 B & C 699, where it was held on the facts that the constable had no right to detain but that if the disturber had been found as a fact to have acted with the purpose of molesting the person celebrating divine service the detention would have been justified under the Brawling Act 1553 (repealed) and the Toleration Act 1688, s 18 (repealed).

References to the demolition of a building in the Pastoral Measure 1983, dealt with in the following paragraphs, include the demolition of part thereof: ibid s 87(5); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1995 s 11(d).

(1) TYPES AND CHARACTERISTICS OF ECCLESIASTICAL PROPERTY

1051. Ecclesiastical property.

The existence of property capable of recognition by a court generally presupposes the existence of a person recognised by the law and of some legal right vested in that person, either of a corporeal or of an incorporeal nature¹.

Where the relations existing between such a recognised person and such a legal right arise out of or have relations to a church (ecclesia) regarded as an organism distinct from the individual members composing it², the property is regarded as ecclesiastical property.

Accordingly, where property is appropriated for use only in connection with or for the benefit of a church, or is appropriated for use only by or for the benefit of officers or members of a church as such³, or is held for a spiritual purpose in connection with a church, or is owned by any person in the capacity of a representative of a church⁴, it is called ecclesiastical property⁵.

Generally speaking, all churches and chapels of the Church of England are exempt from rates⁶.

Church property formerly received special protection from the criminal law, but is now protected from theft and damage by the general provisions of the criminal law⁷.

1 Property may denote the thing to which a person stands in a certain relation, and also the relation in which the person stands to the thing: Re Earnshaw-Wall [1894] 3 Ch 156.

2 These distinctions are illustrated by Rector and Churchwardens of St George's Hanover Square v Westminster Corpn [1910] AC 225, HL; revsg. sub nom. Westminster Corpn v Rector and Churchwardens of St George's, Hanover Square [1909] 1 Ch 592, CA, and approving the dissentient judgment of Buckley LJ at 611.

3 Even though the benefit to the members of a church is of a temporal nature, the property is ecclesiastical property if they derive the benefit as members of the church: Re Perry Almshouses, Re Ross's Charity [1899] 1 Ch 21, CA.

4 Where land is owned by a person in his ecclesiastical capacity it is ecclesiastical property even if it need not necessarily be applied to an ecclesiastical purpose: Rector and Churchwardens of St George's, Hanover Square v Westminster Corpn [1910] AC 225, HL. Where, however, land bought with money representing part of the endowment of a rectory is conveyed to the rector, but not in his capacity as rector, it may cease to be ecclesiastical property: Power v Banks [1901] 2 Ch 487.

5 These characteristics of ecclesiastical property are based on those set out in the Local Government Act 1894, s 75 (2), by which 'ecclesiastical charity' includes a charity the endowment of which is held for some one or more of the following purposes: (1) for any spiritual purpose which is a legal purpose; (2) for the benefit of any spiritual person or ecclesiastical officer as such; (3) for use, if a building, as a church, chapel, mission-room or Sunday school, or otherwise by any particular church or denomination; (4) for the maintenance, repair or improvement of any such building, or for the maintenance of divine service in it; or (5) otherwise for the benefit of any particular church or denomination, or of any of its members as such; provided that where any endowment of a charity other than a building held for any of these purposes is held in part only for some of these purposes, the charity so far as that endowment is concerned is to be an ecclesiastical charity within the meaning of that Act. This definition is applied by the Charities Act 1960, s 45 (1).

6 See the General Rate Act 1967, s 39. The official residence of a minister of religion receives partial relief from rates: see s 40.

7 See the Theft Act 1968, ss 1, 9; Criminal Damage Act 1971, s 1; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. For this purpose property of a corporation sole is to be treated as belonging to the corporation sole notwithstanding a vacancy in the corporation: Theft Act 1968, s 5 (5); Criminal Damage Act 1971, s 10 (4). The property of an incumbent can therefore be laid in him notwithstanding a vacancy in the benefice.

Recognition of representative owners of parochial property.

1052. Recognition of representative owners of parochial property.

The recognition by the law and the legal characteristics of the persons who own property on behalf of the Church of England, and the ecclesiastical characteristics of the property which is owned for use by or for the benefit of officers or members of that church as such, have to a great extent arisen out of and now depend on the parochial system¹.

Before the division into parishes the bishop² or abbot was recognised in his representative capacity as the owner of the property of the whole parochia or of the monastery, and as the division into parishes³ proceeded a need arose for some person who might be similarly recognised in a representative capacity as the owner of the property allotted to each parish. Accordingly the law recognised that not only was the bishop in his spiritual capacity a corporation having perpetual succession, but that in respect of every parish a person might be recognised as the parochianus or person who should, in his representative capacity, be a corporation capable of preserving the original endowment for his successors in perpetuity⁴.

The determination of who is the person thus recognised as person in each particular parish depends on the question whether the benefice has been appropriated or impropriated, and on the nature of the appropriation or impropriation⁵. In the case of an impropriate rectory, that portion of the endowment which is owned by the lay rector for other than spiritual purposes is not ecclesiastical property, but where a benefice is appropriate the endowment as a whole, and where impropriate that part of the endowment which forms the vicar's emoluments or is otherwise owned for spiritual purposes, is ecclesiastical property. Where impropriate, if the owner entitled in fee simple to the rectory or tithes is willing to restore the property representing the tithes, glebe and other rectorial rights, the vicarage may be converted into a rectory⁶, and the tithes and glebe restored will thereupon be ecclesiastical property again. The ecclesiastical property owned in connection with a parish thus usually includes (1) the church and churchyard⁷; (2) the property representing the tithes, rectorial or vicarial, as the case may be; and (3) the parsonage house and glebe⁸.

1 As to the development of the parochial system, see PARAS 534, et seq, ante.

2 In the early days, in effect, no new church with the rights of christening and burying could be erected without the bishop's sanction for, although by the common law any subject might, so far as the mere building went, erect a church or chapel (Gib Cod 188), yet by the ordinances of the Church no church or chapel could be erected without the leave of the bishop of the diocese, it could not be consecrated as a church until a competent endowment was made for the priest and until consecration the building could not be used without the bishop's licence for the celebration of the sacraments: see 1 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 322.

3 A parish is that circuit of ground which is committed to the charge of one person or vicar or other minister having cure of souls therein: 1 B 1 Com (14th Edn) 110.

4 As to the word 'parson', see PARA 689 note 3 ante.

The Church Commissioners may direct the conversion to be made either for a parish or a separate division of a parish where a proportion of the tithe and glebe satisfactory to them is restored: Church Building Act 1822, s 13 (as amended); Church Commissioners Measure 1947, s 18 (2).

7 The freehold of the church and churchyard is in the rector, where there is one, whether spiritual or lay: Jones v Ellis (1828) 2 Y & J 265 at 273.

8 Every bishop within his diocese must procure, so far as he is able, that a full note and terrier of all land, goods and other possessions of the parochial churches and chapels be compiled and kept by the minister and churchwardens in accordance with instructions and forms prescribed by the General Synod (Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon F17 para 1 (amended by Amending Canon No. 1)), and every archdeacon must at least once in three years, in person or by the rural dean, satisfy himself that this has been done (Canon F17 para 2). A combined form of terrier and inventory may be obtained from the Church House Bookshop.

In addition to property vested in persons in a representative capacity for spiritual or other purposes in connection with a parish, various descriptions of property are held by corporations or other legally constituted bodies as trustees for the benefit of the Church of England as a whole, or of particular officers or territorial divisions of it other than a parish¹. For example large estates and funds are held by the Church Commissioners², the Central Board of Finance³ and other bodies on behalf of the Church of England, but not necessarily in connection with a particular parish, although the trusts affecting much of such property admit of the allocation of the property or of the income from it for parochial purposes.

(2) CONSECRATED CHURCHES AND CHURCHYARDS

(i) Introduction

1054. Foundation and consecration of churches.

A building intended for use as a church or chapel may be erected by anyone¹ and may, with the bishop's consent, be used for divine service and the administration of sacraments but, subject to certain exceptions, the law does not take notice of such a building as a church or chapel of the Church of England until it has been consecrated by the bishop². The bishop's right to give or withhold his sanction to the foundation of a church, and to consecrate or to refuse to consecrate a building erected for that purpose, is absolute³.

Where the building is consecrated as a church the church so founded⁴ includes the cure of souls and the rights attached within the district assigned to it. It continues to exist in the eye of the law as a church, and the body corporate which has been endowed in respect of it remains in possession of the endowment, even though the material building is destroyed⁵.

Before consecrating a church the bishop is bound to ascertain that a competent endowment, including a manse and glebe, has been provided, and accordingly it is necessary before commencing to build a church to obtain the bishop's approval of the site, plans and endowment so as to secure that, when the church is finished, the bishop will be willing to consecrate it⁶.

Where a parish has no parish church the bishop must make provision for public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England by licensing one or more buildings or parts of buildings for such worship⁷.

1 3 Co Inst 201.

2 By a constitution of Otho it was provided that all cathedral, conventual and parochial churches then built and their walls perfected were to be consecrated within two years, and that it was to be so done within the same time in all churches afterwards to be built under penalty that they should be interdicted from the solemnities of the mass until consecrated, unless they be excused for some reasonable cause (Lyndwood, Constitutiones Legatine D. Othonis, etc. 5), and on the principle that omnia praesumuntur rite esse acta it may therefore fairly be inferred that all ancient parochial churches have been duly consecrated. The fact that the sacraments have not been administered in a chapel thus affords strong ground for thinking that it is a chapel of ease and not a parochial chapelry: Carr v Mostyn (1850) 5 Exch 69.

3 See Sedgwick v Bourne [1920] 2 KB 267 at 275. Even if the incumbent of the existing church of the parish objects to the consecration of another building the bishop may overrule his objection: Bishop of Winchester v Rugg (1868) LR 2 A & E 247; affd. sub nom. Rugg v Bishop of Winchester LR 2 PC 223.

4 A chapel erected for the private use of a lord of a manor and his employees and tenants, even though consecrated and used on exceptional occasions for baptisms and other offices excepting burial, is not necessarily to be regarded as a parochial chapel: Nevill v Studdy (1906) 94 LT 391.

5 It was formerly thought that the material building would, if it were polluted or absolutely destroyed, require reconsecration (Battiscombe v Eve (1863) 7 LT 679; Turner v Rector of Hanwell (1842) 1 Notes of Cases 368), but these cases have been doubted, and it has been said that even the material building will not require reconsecration if it is rebuilt on the same foundations; or at least this will be so when the offices of the church have continuously been performed and the rebuilding has been done under a faculty so that what remained of the building has remained subject to the jurisdiction of the Ordinary (Parker v Leach (1866) LR 1 PC 312).

6 See PARA 1052 note 2 ante.

7 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 29 (1). This may occur after a declaration of redundancy in respect of the parish church: see s 28; and PARA 1129 et seq post. The bishop may designate the building so licensed as the parish centre of worship: s 29 (2).

1055. Modern foundations.

After the end of the thirteenth century, the realm having become divided into parishes and extra-parochial places, the foundation of churches according to the ancient manner ceased and churches and chapels were thenceforth acquired and consecrated either (1) for the purpose of replacing existing churches¹ or of making better provision for the cure of souls in existing parishes or extra-parochial places; or (2) in connection with some alteration in the boundaries of existing parishes or extra-parochial places for the purpose of providing for the cure of souls in some newly formed parish or district.

The mode of forming new parishes today has already been considered² and it is here intended only to deal with the acquisition and consecration of churches and churchyards and the provision of endowments where such formation has taken place, and with certain general provisions now applicable to all ecclesiastical districts in relation to these matters³.

1 Where a church had been consecrated and used for twelve years for divine worship in place of an ancient chapel which had fallen into decay it was held that, although christenings and burials were still performed in the chapel, it had de facto ceased to be a church or chapel of the parish or place within the meaning of the Parish Notices Act 1837, s 2: Ormerod v Chadwick (1847) 16 LJMC 143.

2 See PARA 537 et seq ante. As to the provision of a parish church by a pastoral scheme in connection with the creation of a new parish by union or otherwise, see the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 27, and PARA 538 ante.

3 'Ecclesiastical district' is used here in the sense in which it is defined in the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 29 (1), ie any parish whether ancient or new, and any district formed under the Church Building Acts 1818 to 1884, or the New Parishes Acts 1843 to 1884, or the New Parishes Measure 1943, and any other ecclesiastical parish or district the minister of which has a separate cure of souls. The Church Building Acts and the New Parishes Acts have been mainly repealed by the New Parishes Measure 1943, Schedule (repealed).

1056. Closure and disposal of churches.

There were formerly several statutory provisions, now repealed, whereby a church could be closed, demolished or appropriated to other uses and the site disposed of¹. The only procedure now available for closing a consecrated church² of the Church of England on the ground that it is no longer required for use as a church is under the provisions of the Pastoral Measure 1968³. Moreover, no consecrated church or part of such church or its site or part of its site may be sold, let or otherwise disposed of except in pursuance of the powers contained in that Measure⁴. These restrictions on the closure or disposal of churches do not prevent the grant of a faculty authorising a suitable use of part of a church or the grant of a faculty in respect of any land annexed or belonging to a church⁵; nor do they affect any powers under any Act of Parliament⁶.

There are provisions for the acquisition by the Secretary of State of places of public religious worship held by or in trust for a charity, not being subject to the provisions of the Pastoral Measure 1968, which are no longer required as places of public religious worship⁷.

1062. Grants to the Church Commissioners under the New Parishes Measure 1943.

Buildings or land may be granted to the Church Commissioners¹ for inter alia any of the purposes mentioned in the last paragraph by any corporation, lay, ecclesiastical or collegiate, and whether sole or aggregate², or by any trustees for charitable purposes³ even though the latter have no authority to convey charity land required for the purposes of the charity⁴. Provision is made for granting for the same purposes buildings or land belonging to Her Majesty in right of the Crown, the Duchy of Lancaster or the Duchy of Cornwall or belonging to a government department or held in trust for Her Majesty for the purposes of such a department⁵. Any such grant may be made by way of gift or for less than the full consideration⁶. Special provisions apply where the land to be acquired is waste of a manor or is subject to rights of common⁷ or to rents or other periodical charges⁸.

Where the diocesan board of finance⁹ or any other body constituted for the holding on trust of diocesan property holds any buildings or land for the general purposes of the board or for any ecclesiastical purposes of the Church of England the board or other body may, without the sanction of the Charity Commissioners or the court, grant the buildings or land to the Church Commissioners for the foregoing purposes, being purposes falling within the purposes for which the land is held prior to the grant¹⁰.

Where the grantor is the incumbent of a benefice in his capacity as such, if the purchase money exceeds £20 it must be paid to the Church Commissioners¹¹ and appropriated by them for the benefit of the benefice or, if it does not exceed £20, it may be paid to the incumbent for his own use and benefit¹¹. The commissioners may hold any property, real or personal, for the purposes above mentioned or as an endowment of any benefice¹².

Conveyances to the commissioners under these powers are not valid unless and until their assent is testified by the affixing of their seal¹³ and where such seal is required no instrument directed to be registered in a diocesan registry can be so registered unless and until the seal is so affixed¹⁴.

These powers of disposing of land and buildings to the Church Commissioners apply also to church buildings which under a sharing agreement are to be owned or continue to be owned by the Church of England only, and to land required as sites for such buildings or for purposes connected with them¹⁵. The powers also apply to church buildings which under a sharing agreement are to be jointly owned by the Church of England and any other church and to land required as sites for or otherwise in connection with such church buildings, save that the grant is made to the trustee or custodian trustee in whom the building or land is to be vested¹⁶.

1064. Provision of church buildings in new housing areas.

In addition to their powers under other enactments the Church Commissioners have power to make grants or loans out of their general fund¹ to such person or persons and on such terms and conditions as they think proper for or towards the provision of church buildings² in any area where they are of opinion that, having regard to recent housing development³, that area is not sufficiently provided with suitable church buildings of any description⁴. These powers are not exercisable except at the written request of the pastoral committee of the diocese made with the concurrence of the bishop⁵.

1 As to the commissioners' general fund, see PARA 1234 post. The payment is to be made on such terms and conditions as the commissioners may think proper (New Housing Areas (Church Buildings) Measure 1954, s 1 (3)), and if by way of a loan may be repayable by instalments or otherwise and either free of interest or with interest at such rate as the commissioners think proper: s 1 (4)). This additional power of the commissioners does not derogate from any other powers of theirs: s 1 (7).

2 The reference to the provision of church buildings is to be construed as a reference to all or any of the following, ie the acquisition of sites for church buildings, the erection of church buildings, the acquisition of church buildings or of any interest in them, the enlargement or improvement of church buildings and the conversion or adaptation of any building to make it suitable for a church building: ibid s 1 (5).

'Building' includes a structure of any kind, and 'church building' means any building used or to be used wholly or mainly for purposes connected with the Church of England: s 1 (6). As to shared buildings, see note 4 infra.

3 Ie the provision of new dwellings after 1st April 1945 on such a scale as, in the commissioners' opinion, to have 'resulted in a substantial increase since that day in the resident population of the area': ibid s 1 (6).

Where new dwellings were provided in an area in the period of three years ending 3rd September 1939 on a similar scale, and the commissioners are satisfied that the insufficiency of church buildings is attributable wholly or mainly to circumstances arising out of the 1939-45 war, they may treat that provision of new dwellings as constituting recent housing development: s 1 (6) proviso.

4 Ibid s 1 (1), (3). Grants or loans might be made eg to a diocesan board of finance, as to which see PARA 517 ante. The power to make grants or loans may be exercised in respect of any church buildings shared or to be shared by the Church of England under a sharing agreement, being buildings which under the agreement are or will be owned by the Church of England only, or jointly owned by that Church and any other Church: Sharing of Church Buildings Measure 1970, s 2 (1). See PARA 1061 note 13 ante, 1186 et seq post.

UPDATE

1064 Provision of church buildings in new housing areas

TEXT AND NOTES--Where it appears to the Church Commissioners that, owing to social or economic changes other than recent housing development, any area is not sufficiently provided with suitable church buildings of any description, the Commissioners may, if it is expedient, make payments, whether by way of grant or loan, towards the provision in that area of one or more church buildings of the description in question: Church Commissioners (Assistance for Priority Areas) Measure 1988 s 2(1). The provisions of 1954 Measure s 1(2)-(7) apply in relation to powers exercisable by the Commissioners under 1988 Measure s 2(1) as they apply in relation to powers exercisable under 1954 Measure: 1988 Measure s 2(2).

As to power of Church Commissioners to make payments by grant or loan from their general fund to the Church Urban Fund see PARA 371.

TEXT AND NOTE 3--'Recent housing development' now means the provision in any area, during the 25 years immediately preceding the date of the receipt by the Commissioners of a request under 1954 Measure s 1(2) with respect to that area, of new dwellings on such a scale as, in the opinion of the Commissioners, to have resulted in a substantial increase during that period of the resident population of the area: 1954 Measure s 1(6); 1988 Measure s 1(1). The proviso in the case of dwellings provided in the period of 3 years ending on 3 September 1939 has been abolished: 1988 Measure s 1(2).

NOTE 4--The power to make payments under 1988 Act s 2(1) is also exercisable in respect of shared church buildings to which 1970 Measure applies: 1970 Measure s 2(1); 1988 Measure s 2(3).

1065. Conveyances under the Places of Worship Sites Acts 1873 and 1882.

Any persons having the beneficial interest¹ in freehold land in fee simple or for an entailed interest or for life or lives and being in possession of it and any corporation, officers, justices of the peace, trustees or commissioners holding land for public or charitable purposes², may give, sell or exchange any number of sites³ not exceeding one acre each in fee simple or for a term of years for a church, chapel, meeting house or other place of worship⁴, or for the residence of a minister officiating in a place of worship within one mile of the site, or for a burial place⁵, but such a conveyance by a tenant for life or lives is invalid unless the person next entitled in remainder⁶ or, if he is under disability, his guardian⁷ or committee joins in or concurs⁸. There are provisions as to the payment and application of the purchase money or money received for equality of exchange⁹ and for the apportionment of rent to which the land is subject, and savings for encumbrances¹⁰.

Any such person may make similar grants for the purposes of the New Parishes Measure 1943¹¹ to the Church Commissioners or as the commissioners may direct and the commissioners may also act as trustees for the purpose of making and holding sites; all conveyances made under the enactment are deemed to be made under the New Parishes Measure 1943 and the land conveyed is to vest in conformity with the conveyance and that Measure¹².

If any part of the land so conveyed is used for any purpose other than as a site for such place of worship, residence or burial place, or if such place of worship or residence ceases for a year at a time to be used as such, it reverts to the land from which it was severed¹³. Conveyances for these purposes may be made in a statutory form¹⁴.

1066. Statutory provision for enlargement of leaseholds.

Where premises are held under a lease¹ for a life or lives or a term, as originally created, of not less than twenty-one years, and are held upon trust to be used as a church, chapel or other building used for a place of worship, or as a burial ground, Sunday or Sabbath school or caretaker's house used in connection with and held upon the same trusts as a place of worship², or are held upon trust to be used, in connection with a place of worship, as a minister's house, and the premises are being used in accordance with the terms of the trust, the trustees³, notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary⁴, may enlarge up to two acres⁵, of the leasehold into a fee simple, and for that purpose may acquire⁶ the freehold and intermediate reversions⁷. The person entitled to the freehold or intermediate reversion may require that minerals be excepted if proper provision is made for the support of the premises⁸. Upon acquisition the freehold is held upon the same trusts, and subject to the same covenants and obligations, other than the payment of rent, as the original leasehold⁹; but covenants to insure against fire and to reinstate the premises after fire, and other covenants to do any act beneficial to the demised premises alone, continue in force only where the consideration is a rentcharge, and so long as the rentcharge is payable¹⁰.

The foregoing provisions apply, with modifications, to the residence house of a benefice¹¹.

1 'Lease' includes an underlease and an agreement for a lease or underlease: Places of Worship (Enfranchisement) Act 1920, s 1 (2).

2 See ibid s 5; Leasehold Reform Act 1967, s 40 (1) (a); and see Stradling v Higgins [1932] 1 Ch 143.

4 However, an agreement against the enlargement of the leasehold into a freehold contained in a lease granted or made before 3rd December 1920 is not included: Places of Worship (Enfranchisement) Act 1920, s 1 (1). 3rd December 1920 was the date the Act received the royal assent.

5 See ibid s 1 (1) proviso (a).

6 The procedure for compulsory acquisition laid down in the Compulsory Purchase Act 1965, Part I (ss. 1-32), applies to the acquisition of reversionary interests, subject to modifications: see the Places of Worship (Enfranchisement) Act 1920, s 2; Leasehold Reform Act 1967, s 40 (4), (8).

7 Places of Worship (Enfranchisement) Act 1920, s 1; Leasehold Reform Act 1967, s 40 (1) (a). The power to acquire reversions does not apply where the premises are used as a place of worship in contravention of a covenant in the lease under which they are held or of a superior lease (Places of Worship (Enfranchisement) Act 1920, s 1 (1) proviso (b)); nor where the premises form part of land acquired and held for the purposes of a railway, dock, canal or navigation (s. 1 (1) proviso (c)).

A parochial church council¹ may accept and hold any contributions which may be given to it for the ecclesiastical purposes of a parish², and may acquire any property, real or personal, for any ecclesiastical purpose affecting the parish, with power to manage and administer such property³. A parochial church council may not acquire any interest in land, other than a short lease⁴, or in any personal property to be held on permanent trusts, without the consent of the diocesan board of finance⁵. The legal estate of such property vests in the diocesan board of finance⁶.

(iii) Consecration of Churches and Churchyards

1068. Necessity for consecration.

As a building does not become a church in the eye of the law until it is consecrated¹, a church must be set aside for ever to sacred uses before it can become the church of a separate parish. There is no corresponding necessity for the consecration of a churchyard, but the practice of consecrating a churchyard in connection with a parish church has become so general that a consecrated church and, in a rural district, a churchyard have come to be regarded as requisite for the complete performance of the offices of the church in a parish, and as the natural centre and basis of the parochial organisation².

1 3 Co Inst 203. Cf. the definition of 'church' in the Interpretation Measure 1925, s 3 (see PARA 302 note 3 ante), and in the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 90 (1) (see PARA 865 note 1 ante). In recent practice, however, the process of consecration has sometimes been omitted, and places of worship which would normally have been consecrated in the past have been simply dedicated: see PARA 1308 note 6 post.

2 As to the relevance of consecration for the purposes of the faculty jurisdiction, see PARA 1306 et seq post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(2) CONSECRATED CHURCHES AND CHURCHYARDS/(iii) Consecration of Churches and Churchyards/1069. Act of consecration.

1069. Act of consecration.

By the act of consecration property is dedicated to God or to His service, and when real estate has thus been legally consecrated it will retain the ecclesiastical character thus bestowed upon it whoever may be the actual owner and whatever may be the nature of his tenure¹.

Consecration is effected by the decree of a competent ecclesiastical court. The act or sentence of consecration signed by the bishop setting aside land or buildings in sacros usus is what constitutes the legal act of consecration, and the effect of this is that the property consecrated is separated for ever from the common uses of mankind² and is set apart solely for sacred purposes for all time or until the decree has been set aside by the like authority or the legal effects of consecration extinguished by virtue of statutory³ provisions⁴.

The act of consecration is effective notwithstanding that a statutory provision requiring the sanction of a Secretary of State to the allocation of the land to be consecrated has not been complied with: Williams v Briton Ferry Burial Board [1905] 2 KB 565. Upon the question whether a further act of consecration is required where the church is rebuilt on the same foundations, see Parker v Leach (1866) LR 1 PC 312; but where an extension of the chancel is built on unconsecrated ground, it must be consecrated: St Barnabas, Kensington (1909) 25 TLR 571. For a form of sentence on consecration, see Forms and Precedents.

1070. Preliminaries to consecration.

A church or chapel may be erected before consecration of the ground, and may with the bishop's consent be used for divine service and the administration of sacraments, but it does not thereby become a church in the eye of the law¹. For this, consecration is essential, and in order that the dedication may be certain it is always required that the freehold of the ground on which the church is to be erected shall have been secured². This having been done, and the conveyance of the land having been effectively executed in the form appropriate in the particular circumstances so as to vest the land in the incumbent, in the Church Commissioners or in some corporation or persons as trustees, as the case may be³, a petition is presented to the bishop⁴ reciting the conveyance and requesting him to separate the land or land and buildings from all profane and common uses and to dedicate the same to God and divine worship, and to consecrate it for the celebration of divine offices or for such other ecclesiastical purposes as are desired, according to the doctrine and discipline of the Church of England⁵.

1 See PARA 1068 ante.

2 Whether or not Canon 16 of the Council of London (1102), 'ne ecclesia sacratur donec providiantur necessaria et presbytero et ecclesiae', ever became part of the canon law of the Church of England, it provided a rule which has in the main been adhered to: St Mary, Bishopstoke (1909) 26 TLR 86; see Sedgwick v Bourne [1920] 2 KB 267. For an exception authorised by Act of Parliament, see 30 Geo. 3 c. 69 (St James Church, Clerkenwell) (1790) where trustees were authorised to purchase land held under a perpetually renewable lease and a chapel of ease erected on it and to cause it to be consecrated.

3 For the forms of conveyance appropriate for the purpose, see Forms and Precedents where, however, no example of a conveyance to the commissioners under the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 13, is included as the conveyance has to be in such form as the commissioners prescribe (s. 13 (3)), and they will prepare the draft. See also the Church Commissioners Measure 1947, s 18 (2).

4 For a form of petition, see Forms and Precedents.

5 The fees payable for consecration of a church and burial ground, or a church without a burial ground, are £21, and for consecration of a burial ground or cemetery alone £15.75: Legal Officers Fees Order 1964, S.I. 1964 No. 1033, Schedule, Table III, made under the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 1.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(2) CONSECRATED CHURCHES AND CHURCHYARDS/(iii) Consecration of Churches and Churchyards/1071. Consecration ceremony.

1071. Consecration ceremony.

When the preliminaries¹ are complete the bishop, with such religious ceremonial as he thinks fit, proceeds to consecrate the land or land and buildings, and to declare by sentence² that he thereby separates and sets them apart from all profane and common uses whatsoever, and dedicates them to the service of Almighty God for the performance of divine offices according to the liturgy and usages of the Church of England as by law established. He consecrates them for the use intended and openly and publicly pronounces, decrees and declares them to be so separated, dedicated and consecrated, and that they ought to remain so for ever, saving, in the case of a chapel of ease, any rights which are reserved in favour of the mother church³.

1 See PARA 1070 ante.

2 For the form of sentence on consecration, see Forms and Precedents. According to the customary form of service of consecration, which has been in general use, with some variations, for several centuries, the sentence of consecration is to be read by the chancellor: see Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 1390 et seq. In practice it is sometimes read by the diocesan registrar, whose presence in any case seems to be necessary.

3 As to churches subject to a sharing agreement, see PARA 1191 post.

1072. Consecration of additional ground.

Where any ground adjoining¹ an existing² churchyard has been or is added to it the bishop of the diocese may, if he thinks fit, at the churchyard or in the church to which it belongs, by his own hand or by the hand of any bishop of the Church of England lawfully appointed as his commissary, sign an instrument declaring or recording the consecration of the ground, without the presence of the chancellor or registrar of the diocese being necessary³. The bishop's signature to the instrument is to be attested by the chancellor, by a surrogate or by any two clergymen of the diocese⁴. On being so signed and attested, and deposited in the diocesan registry, the instrument has the same effect as a sentence of consecration⁵.

1 Land may 'adjoin' an existing churchyard within this provision even if it is separated from it by a highway: Re Baroness Bateman and Parker's Contract [1899] 1 Ch 599.

2 This probably means existing for the time being.

4 Ibid s 1. The instrument, indorsed on a plan of the ground so added, reads 'I, A.B., Bishop of ..., do hereby declare and record the ground added to the churchyard of ..., as on the within plan, to be consecrated ground and part of the said churchyard'. Where land to be conveyed for an addition to a churchyard is to be consecrated in this way the statutory form of conveyance set out in s 5 may be used, although such use is optional. A gift for the purpose of the Act is exempt from stamp duty: s 6. As to fees, see s 2; Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, ss 1, 8 (1), Schedule, Part I; and see PARA 1204 post.

1073. Use of consecrated ground for secular purposes.

When consecrated a church or churchyard ceases to be the property of the donor, who, by dedicating his property to God, voluntarily sacrifices it for the attainment of sacred objects¹. Thereafter, in strictness only the authority of an Act of Parliament or Measure of the Church Assembly or General Synod can divest it of its sacred character, and a faculty should not be granted for applying it to secular purposes². Deviations from the strict rule are, however, frequently allowed, and faculties may be granted for various purposes consonant with modern requirements³. Thus, while there are limits upon the grant of faculties for the secular use of consecrated land⁴, it may be possible to authorise by faculty the use of a portion of the consecrated ground for purposes which are advantageous to persons using the church⁵, to the parishioners⁶, or to the public⁷.

In proper cases, a faculty will be granted for appropriating a portion of a churchyard for widening a public highway, at any rate where the churchyard is closed for burials⁸, or for making and fencing a pathway across a churchyard as a private way to adjoining premises⁹.

The performance of a play in a church may require a licence¹⁰.

4 It has been held that there is no jurisdiction to grant a faculty for the secular use of consecrated land, except for the purpose of throwing part of a churchyard into a highway or for other rights of user over a churchyard in the nature of wayleaves, unless the original purpose of consecration can no longer be carried out: Re St John's, Chelsea [1962] 2 All ER 850, [1962] 1 WLR 706, where a faculty for the use of the site of a demolished church as a car park was refused; and see Morley Borough Council v Vicar and Churchwardens of St Mary The Virgin, Woodkirk [1969] 3 All ER 952, [1969] 1 WLR 1867; Re St Peter's, Bushey Heath [1971] 2 All ER 704 at 706, [1971] 1 WLR 357 at 360. The consistory court's jurisdiction to grant a faculty for the secular use of unconsecrated land within the curtilage of a church may be wider, but it must be sparingly exercised: Re St Peter's, Bushey Heath supra (where a faculty for an access 'splay' was granted); and see Re St John's Church, Bishop's Hatfield [1967] P 113, [1966] 2 All ER 403 (faculty for a youth centre granted); Re Christ Church, Chislehurst [1974] 1 All ER 146, [1973] 1 WLR 1317 (faculty granted for land to be used for private access); and see PARA 1308 post.

6 Thus faculties have been granted, in the case of closed churchyards, for the construction of chambers under a churchyard for the storing and transformation of electricity (Re St Nicholas Cole Abbey, Re St Benet Fink Churchyard [1893] P 58), and for flights of steps and entrances to give access to chambers for storing electricity constructed under a street adjoining the churchyard (Re St Benet, Sherhog [1893] P 66 n); but the former decision was disapproved on the ground that the faculty was in contravention of the Disused Burial Grounds Act 1884, s 3, in Rector and Churchwardens of St Nicholas Acons v LCC [1928] AC 469, PC; and see Re St Peter the Great, Chichester [1961] 2 All ER 513, [1961] 1 WLR 907 (faculty for erection of electricity sub-station in a disused burial ground granted). There is no jurisdiction to grant a faculty allowing a cover to be suspended over a footpath in a disused churchyard, since it involves the erection of a 'building' within the meaning of the Disused Burial Grounds Act 1884 and is therefore prohibited: Re St Mark's Church, Lincoln [1956] P 166, [1955] 3 All ER 699; affd. 1074. Alienation of consecrated ground for secular uses.

It is not possible to alienate consecrated land or buildings completely from sacred uses and to appropriate them permanently to secular uses without the authority of an Act of Parliament¹ or a Measure of the Church Assembly or General Synod².

Certain provisions enabling such alienation to be authorised are contained in the Pastoral Measure 1968. A pastoral scheme³ may provide for the appropriation of the whole or part of a churchyard or other land annexed or belonging to a church (other than a redundant church⁴) or any burial ground vested in the incumbent of a benefice to such use or uses as may be specified, and may provide for the disposal of such property for such use or uses or without limitation of use⁵. Similarly, a redundancy scheme⁶ may provide for the appropriation of a redundant church and any land annexed or belonging to it for such use or uses as may be specified, and where a redundant church is to be demolished the scheme may provide for the disposal of the site of the church and any land annexed or belonging to it and for specifying how the land so disposed of is to be used or allowing it to be used without limitation⁷. Where a redundant church or land annexed or belonging to it is vested in the Church Commissioners pursuant to a pastoral scheme or redundancy scheme⁸, or is appropriated to a use or uses specified in the scheme, then, unless the scheme otherwise provides, the legal effects of consecration cease to apply to the building and land and, in particular, the jurisdiction to grant faculties ceases to extend to the building and land⁹.

Except in the pursuance of powers under the above provisions or of any powers exercisable under any Act of Parliament¹⁰, it is not lawful to sell, lease or otherwise dispose of any church (or part of it) or the site (or part of it) of any church or any consecrated land belonging or annexed to a church¹¹; however, this does not prevent the grant of a faculty authorising a suitable use of part of a church or the grant of any faculty in respect of any such land¹².

Another important instance of the possibility of such alienation is found in the provisions whereby consecrated land may be compulsorily acquired by a purchasing authority¹³. Such land can, subject to compliance with certain conditions, be used in conformity with planning control or for the purposes for which it was acquired notwithstanding any obligation or restriction imposed under ecclesiastical law or otherwise with respect to the land¹⁴.

Land granted for burials and consecrated for that purpose does not, unless under the provisions of a special Act of Parliament, revert to the grantor upon the discontinuance of burials in it¹⁵.

2 It has repeatedly been held that it is impossible to alienate or create any legal estate in consecrated land without the authority of an Act or Measure: Rector and Churchwardens of St Gabriel, Fenchurch Street v City of London Real Property Co Ltd [1896] P 95; Re St Peter's, Bushey Heath [1971] 2 All ER 704 at 706, [1971] 1 WLR 357 at 360; citing Vicar and Churchwardens of St Mary Abbots, Kensington v St Mary Abbots, Kensington Inhabitants (1873) Trist 17; and see Re St Swithin's, Norwich [1960] P 77, [1959] 3 All ER 301, where it was held that the court had no jurisdiction to grant a faculty to allow a rector, in whom the freehold of consecrated land was vested, to grant an option to take a lease of it.

1074 Alienation of consecrated ground for secular uses

TEXT AND NOTES 3-5--1968 Measure consolidated in Pastoral Measure 1983. Now a pastoral scheme may provide for the appropriation of the whole or any part of (a) a churchyard or other land annexed or belonging to a church or to a parish church cathedral within the meaning of Cathedrals Measure 1963, or (b) any burial ground vested in the incumbent of the benefice but not annexed or belonging to a church, or (c) any other burial ground which is subject to the jurisdiction of the bishop of any diocese, to such use or uses as may be specified or generally described in the scheme, and the scheme may provide for the disposal of any such property for such use or uses or without limitation of use: 1983 Measure s 30(1).

The above provisions do not apply to a churchyard or other land annexed or belonging to a church to which a declaration of redundancy relates unless the scheme by which provision was made for the use, the care and maintenance, the vesting in the Diocesan Board of Finance or the demolition of the church contained no provision for dealing with the land which is to be the subject of the proposed scheme: ibid s 30(2).

In the case of a churchyard or other land annexed or belonging to a church or a burial ground adjacent to a church, the pastoral scheme must make such provision as appears to the bishop and the commissioners to be desirable for safeguarding the use and amenities of the church or to be necessary for preserving a right of access to any grave in that land or burial ground: ibid s 30(3).

Without prejudice to s 56(3)(a), on an application by the incumbent of the benefice comprising or including the parish in which the church is situated or, where the benefice is vacant, the bishop in the name and on behalf of the incumbent in the corporate capacity of the incumbent, the court may grant a faculty for a lease to be granted by the incumbent or, as the case may be, the bishop, of part of a church, provided that the court ensures that the premises remaining unlet, together with the premises let, under any lease or leases granted under s 56(2A) (s 56(2A)-(2L) added by the 2006 Measure s 1(b)), are, taken as a whole, used primarily as a place of worship: 1983 Measure s 56(2A). On an application by any person referred to in s 56(2A) the court may, whether it grants a faculty under s 56(2A), grant a faculty for the lease of any land belonging to or annexed to a church: s 56(2B). The parochial church council for the parish in which the church or land is situated is a party to any lease granted under s 56(2A) or (2B) and, without prejudice to the rights and obligations of the lessor, has the same rights as the lessor to enforce any term of the lease which may be binding on the lessee, including any rights to forfeit the lease or to distrain on the property of the lessee: s 56(2C). Subject to any directions of the court, any rent or other payment payable under any lease granted under s 56(2A) or s 56(2B) must be paid to the parochial church council: s 56(2D). Subject to s 56(2D), (2F) (infra), any such lease is to be for such period, and may contain such terms, as the court may determine and the lease or any terms contained therein may be varied at any time by the court on application by any party to the lease or otherwise as authorised by the court: s 56(2E). Any such lease is deemed to contain the following terms: (1) in the case of a lease of part of a church granted under s 56(2A), the premises which are the subject of the lease must not be used for purposes which are, or in a way which is, inconsistent with the use specified in s 56(2A); and (2) in the case of a lease granted under s 56(2A) or s 56(2B), no use is permitted for residential purposes except by a person who, as an employee of the lessor or otherwise, is required, as a condition of the employment or contract, to reside in the premises or part thereof, and the lease is deemed to contain a covenant on the part of the lessee to perform the said terms: s 56(2F). Where any lease is granted under s 56(2A) or s 56(2B) (a) in the case of a lease of premises to trustees to be held on trust to be used for the purposes of a place of worship, the trustees are not entitled to exercise the right conferred by the Places of Worship (Enfranchisement) Act 1920 (see PARA 1066) to enlarge the leasehold interest by acquiring the freehold; (b) in the case of a lease consisting of a tenancy of premises occupied or to be occupied wholly or partly for the purposes of a business, the tenancy is not to be subject to any provision of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (see LANDLORD AND TENANT vol 27(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 706 et seq) under which the lease is continued until determined, or under which the tenant is entitled to apply to the court for the grant of a new tenancy, in accordance with the provisions of Pt II; and (c) in the case of a lease of land consisting of a tenancy which would, but for the 1983 Measure s 56(2G), be a farm business tenancy to which the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see LANDLORD AND TENANT) applied, the 1995 Act does not apply to the tenancy and, accordingly, the tenant is not entitled to exercise any of the rights conferred by Pts I-III: 1983 Measure s 56(2G). Without prejudice to s 84, where at any time, there is no parochial church council, the foregoing provisions of s 56 are to have effect and any lease granted under s 56(2A) or s 56(2B) is to be construed as if, for any reference therein to the council, there were substituted a reference to the churchwardens: s 56(2H). Where a lease has been granted under s 56(2A) or s 56(2B) and, at any times, the benefice is vacant, the bishop in the name and on behalf of the incumbent in the incumbent's corporate capacity may exercise the power conferred on the lessor by s 56(2E) to apply to the court for a variation of the lease or any terms therein and the lease is to be construed as if any reference therein to the incumbent were a reference to the bishop acting in the name and on behalf of the incumbent as aforesaid: s 56(2I). Any question relating to the interpretation or enforcement of any term of any lease granted under s 56(2A) or s 56(2B) is to be determined by the court and the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964 s 11 (see PARA 1328) applies in relation to proceedings under the 1983 Measure s 56(2E) and s 56(2J) as it applies to the proceedings mentioned in the 1964 Measure s 11: 1983 Measure s 56(2J). The Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 16(2), so far only as it applies to the archdeacon, s 16(3), (4), apply to proceedings under the 1983 Measure s 56(2A), (2B), (2E), (2J) as they apply to other proceedings for a faculty: s 56(2K). In s 56, except head (b), 'the court' means the consistory court of the diocese in which the building is situated or, in the case of the diocese of Canterbury, the commissary court thereof and the 1991 Measure (see PARAS 1306, 1321, 1331-1333) does not apply to the jurisdiction of the court conferred by the foregoing provisions of the 1983 Measure s 56: s 56(2L). The power of the bishop of a diocese under the 1991 Measure s 22 to make an order directing that a building or land is not subject to the legal effects of consecration (see PARA 1076A) is also excluded from the restriction: 1983 Measure s 56(3)(c); 1991 Measure Sch 7.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(2) CONSECRATED CHURCHES AND CHURCHYARDS/(iii) Consecration of Churches and Churchyards/1075. Subjection to the Ordinary.

1075. Subjection to the Ordinary.

The effect of consecration is to subject the land consecrated to the Ordinary¹, who thenceforth has jurisdiction to see that in the consecrated ground the laws of the church are observed, and in particular to see that in consecrated places of burial all conditions which those laws require in relation to the bodies of persons buried there are observed. This jurisdiction is not confined to occasions when it is necessary to remove a body but extends to all such acts as are necessary in the interests of justice or of the decent and respectful treatment of the dead. Except where a body is removed from one place of burial consecrated according to the rites of the Church of England² to another and subject also to certain statutory exceptions³, a licence from a Secretary of State is a condition precedent to the removal⁴, but not to the granting of the faculty⁵, which will be granted subject to the provision that the Secretary of State's licence be obtained, except in cases where there is a doubt whether such licence is necessary⁵. A faculty may be granted subject to a similar licence to remove a body from consecrated to unconsecrated ground or to ground consecrated in accordance with the rites of the Roman Catholic Church⁶.

The Ordinary's permission is generally necessary before any alteration can be lawfully effected to the place consecrated or its contents⁷. In general all parish churches and their churchyards and most consecrated burial grounds are within the jurisdiction of the bishop as Ordinary and the episcopal sanction is required and is sought by petitioning for a faculty⁸ in the consistory court where the chancellor by delegation is for this purpose the Ordinary⁹. In certain circumstances permission may instead be obtained by means of the archdeacon's certificate¹⁰.

Where unconsecrated land forms, or is part of, the curtilage¹¹ of a church within the jurisdiction of an ecclesiastical court, that court has the same jurisdiction over that land as it has over the church¹².

Where the bishop has licensed a building for public worship he may order that it be subject to the faculty jurisdiction of the court of the diocese during the period specified in the order as though it were a consecrated church¹³.

1076A. Removal of legal effects of consecration.

Where the bishop of a diocese, on the application of the archdeacon in respect of any building or land which is subject to the legal effects of consecration, is satisfied that (a) the building or land is not held or controlled by any ecclesiastical corporation or by any diocesan board of finance, and (b) no purpose will be served by its remaining subject to the legal effects of consecration, he may by order direct that it will not, in whole or in part, be subject to the legal effects of consecration¹. The order may impose such conditions and requirements as the bishop thinks fit as to (i) the preservation or disposal of any human remains believed to be buried in or beneath any building or in any land and of any tombstones, monuments or memorials commemorating the deceased persons, and (ii) the maintenance of orderly behaviour in or on the building or land². Where an order is made, the building or land ceases to be subject to the legal effects of consecration and, in particular, the jurisdiction of any court or person with respect to the granting of faculties ceases to extend to it³. Any conditions or requirements are enforceable as if the archdeacon was the owner of adjacent land and the conditions or requirements were negative covenants expressed to be entered into for the benefit of the adjacent land⁴. The enforcement of a condition or requirement is deemed to be for the benefit of the archdeacon⁵. A condition or requirement is a local land charge and the bishop by whom the order was made is treated as the originating authority as respects the charge constituted by the condition or requirement⁶.

These provisions apply in relation to Crown land and to buildings situated on Crown land as they apply to other land and buildings⁷. A condition or requirement as to matter falling within head (ii) above must not be imposed by an order except with the consent of the appropriate authority⁸. Any land which is used for the purposes of the Church of England and which will become Crown land on ceasing to be so used or on the exercise of a right of re-entry is to be treated as Crown land⁹.

² Ibid s 22(2). For the purposes of head (i), an order may apply specified provisions of the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 65, Sch 6 (disposal of human remains) to the building or land: 1991 Measure s 22(2). A condition or requirement as to matter in head (i) cannot be imposed without the consent of the Secretary of State: ibid s 22(3). Law of Property Act 1925 s 84 (except s 84(2)) (discharge or modification of restrictions affecting land) does not apply in relation to conditions and requirements: 1991 Measure s 22(7).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(2) CONSECRATED CHURCHES AND CHURCHYARDS/(iii) Consecration of Churches and Churchyards/1077. Ornaments not included in consecration.

1077. Ornaments not included in consecration.

By the act of consecrating a church the bishop does not necessarily consecrate or approve all the ornaments and fittings in it¹. He is assured by the petition presented to him that all things have been rightly done and is entitled to act on that assumption, and if there are any ornaments in the church which are not in accordance with ordinary usage it is the duty of those who apply for consecration to call the bishop's attention to them so that he may exercise his discretion². Where this has not been done, or where ornaments have been retained in spite of his objection, and the decree of consecration does not refer to them, the act of consecration of the church does not stamp them with his approval and they may, if adjudged to be improper, be removed by a decree of the ecclesiastical court³.

There are provisions for the disposal of the contents of a redundant church without the need for a faculty⁴.

A faculty is in general necessary to sanction an alteration in a consecrated building or land and also in unconsecrated land which forms, or is part of, the curtilage of a church. The circumstances in which a faculty is required¹ and the mode of application for one² are dealt with subsequently.

(iv) Ownership; Restrictions on Disposal and Use

1079. Vesting of freehold of church and churchyard.

Where a parish has no rector or the rector is himself the incumbent the freehold of the church and of the churchyard is, normally at least, in the incumbent¹. Where, however, there are both a rector and a vicar, in the case of an ancient church and churchyard, the freehold is in the rector², but in the case of a church or churchyard consecrated in modern times, by virtue of various statutory provisions, the freehold is normally in the incumbent as distinguished from the rector³. Where the rector is a layman the enjoyment of the property so far as it can be exercised by a layman belongs to him as owner of the freehold, but the incumbent has such possession as is necessary for the performance of his sacred duties⁴.

Where any church or churchyard in a parish was, on 1st April 1969⁵, vested in the incumbent of another parish as such, it thereupon vested in the incumbent of the parish in which the church or churchyard was situated⁶. Where fittings and decorations have been placed in and devoted to the use of the church of a parish they are under the control of the incumbent⁷, and the keys of the church belong to him⁸.

By virtue of his rights as freeholder the rector or incumbent in whom the freehold is vested may maintain an action for trespass, in case of an unauthorised interference with the churchyard⁹.

Whether the freehold is vested in the rector or in the incumbent it is held for the use of the parishioners¹⁰ for the purposes of their attending church services and of their burial in the churchyard¹¹, the management being vested on their behalf in the incumbent, the churchwardens and the parochial church council¹².

Where the freehold is vested in the incumbent he has only a life interest, the fee simple being in abeyance¹³; and during a vacancy in the benefice the fee simple remains in abeyance¹⁴. The parochial church council may, during a vacancy, take proceedings for the protection of the church and churchyard¹⁵.

A right of way for parishioners to reach a church is vested together with the church and churchyard¹⁵.

1 See Jones v Ellis (1828) 2 Y & J 265 at 273, and PARA 581 ante.

2 It is clear that, apart from statutory provisions, the freehold is prima facie in the 'parson': Com Dig, Esglise (G1); Degge, Parson's Counsellor (7th Edn) 230. The better opinion seems to be that, where there is a rector distinct from the incumbent, the freehold, in the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary, is in the former (see Greenslade v Darby (1868) LR 3 QB 421; Walter v Mountague and Lamprell (1836) 1 Curt 253 at 260, per Dr Lushington; Griffin v Dighton (1864) 5 B & S 93 at 103, Ex Ch, per Cockburn CJ); but there is some authority for the view that the freehold is in the incumbent, at least in the case of a vicar, and not in the rector (see Com Dig, Cemetery (A 2); Vicar and One Churchwarden of St Botolph without Aldgate v Parishioners of St Botolph without Aldgate [1892] P 161 at 167, per Dr Tristram). See also Stewart v West Derby Burial Board (1886) 34 ChD 314 at 333 (where Kay J referred to Champneys v Arrowsmith (1867) LT 3 CP 107 as an authority for the same view). Although in Champneys v Arrowsmith supra, the freehold was taken to be in the vicar, it did not appear whether there was a rector or not, and the point was not discussed, nor was the churchyard in fact an ancient churchyard; and later in Batten v Gedy (1889) 41 ChD 507, Kay J seems to have considered that the freehold of an ancient churchyard was or might be in the lay rector. It seems that when, by the sentence of consecration, the landowner renounces all right and title to the land, the freehold may thereupon become by operation of law vested in the parson (see Campbell v Liverpool Corp (1870) LR 9 Eq 579), but it is clear that the freehold of consecrated ground can be in others eg in trustees (see the Burial Ground Act 1816, s 4). The incumbent cannot convey or create a legal estate or interest in a consecrated church or churchyard, as it is impossible to create a legal estate or interest in consecrated land without the authority of an Act or Measure¹. Only under the powers contained in the Pastoral Measure 1968² can a church or its site or consecrated land belonging to it be sold, let or otherwise disposed of³. This restriction on disposal does not prevent the grant of a faculty authorising a suitable use of part of a Church or the grant of a faculty in respect of any such land or affect any powers under any Act of Parliament⁴.

1081. Vesting of freeholds under modern enactments.

The freehold of the site of any church or burial ground, when consecrated, and of any house, garden, appurtenances or land for the residence or glebe of the person serving any church, conveyed to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners¹ under the Church Building Acts² vested in the incumbent of the church for the time being or, in the case of a burial ground, in the incumbent of the church to which the burial ground belonged³.

Where land was vested in the Church Commissioners on 13th April 1960⁴ for any of certain purposes mentioned in the New Parishes Measure 1943⁵, it vests on the consecration of the church or burial ground in the incumbent of the parish in which it is situated⁶. Special provisions apply where any land or building acquired after that date under the provisions of the New Parishes Measure 1943 enabling the commissioners to acquire land and certain bodies to give or grant land to the commissioners⁷ is (1) a church or part of a church or a building fit to be used as or to be converted into a church⁸; (2) land acquired as a site for a new church or for a church to be substituted for an existing church, or for enlarging the site of the existing church⁹; (3) land for providing a new or extending an existing churchyard or burial ground¹⁰; or (4) land required for providing access to or improving the amenities of any church, churchyard or burial ground¹¹. In these circumstances the land or building vests in the incumbent of the parish in which it is situated¹². If, however, the area in which it is situated is subsequently constituted a new parish under that Measure¹³ it thereupon vests in the incumbent of that new parish, unless the scheme constituting the parish otherwise provides¹⁴. Where any land or building so acquired is (a) land or a building for a house of residence¹⁵ for an incumbent or other ecclesiastical person, (b) land for an extension of such a house of residence, or (c) land required for providing access to or improving the amenities of any such house of residence, it vests in the incumbent of the parish in which it is situated¹⁶.

Where any land or building acquired for use as a church hall or as a church or other place of worship and a church hall¹⁷, or any part of any such land or building, is, with the consent of the diocesan authority¹⁸, designated in the conveyance as vesting in that authority, it vests in that authority accordingly¹⁹.

Similar provisions were made as to new parishes created under the New Parishes Acts by the New Parishes Act 1856, s 10 (repealed by the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 32, Schedule), but the Measure applies to any new parish or district constituted before the Act was passed (ie before 4th February 1943) under the New Parishes Acts 1843 to 1884 as if it had been constituted under the corresponding provisions of the Measure: New Parishes Measure 1943, s 29 (4). 1 If unconsecrated, the freehold of the church or chapel remains in the commissioners until consecration, and thereafter ipso facto becomes subject to the same laws as to all rights and property in it as the pews and sittings of ancient parish churches: New Parishes Acts and Church Building Acts Amendment Act 1869, s 6. 1083. Herbage and timber in churchyards.

The right to the herbage¹ and, subject to what is said subsequently, to the trees in the churchyard² is in the incumbent if the freehold is vested in him; and in the case of a vicarage the presumption from general practice and usage is that this right forms part of the vicar's endowment, even if the freehold is in the rector³.

Timber growing in any churchyard of a benefice⁴ must not be felled without the consent of the parsonages board⁵, unless the felling is necessary to avoid immediate danger⁶. If it appears to the board that timber growing in such a churchyard ought, as a matter of good management, to be felled, it may require the incumbent to fell it and, if he fails to do so, may itself do so and sell the timber⁷. The incumbent may make representations before the board exercises its power to fell the timber⁸. The consent of the patron⁹ or Ordinary is not necessary for any felling under these provisions¹⁰. The net proceeds of any such felling and any money recovered by the board in respect of wrongful felling¹¹ may be applied for the purpose of planting new trees and, subject thereto, must be paid to the parochial church council and applied for the maintenance of the fabric of any church maintainable by the council¹². Where the expense to the incumbent of felling trees exceeds the proceeds of it, the board may defray the amount of the excess¹³.

In any such proceedings the defendant may show that the timber had no net value or that the amount required is excessive: s 20 (2) proviso.

Where a tree in a churchyard which a parochial church council is liable to maintain is felled, lopped or topped the council may sell or otherwise dispose of the timber and the net proceeds of any sale must be paid to the council and applied for the maintenance of any church or churchyard which the council is liable to maintain: 1991 Measure s 6(2); 1995 Measure s 13. The chancellor of a diocese must, after consultation with the advisory committee, give written guidance to all parochial church councils in the diocese as to the planting, felling, lopping and topping of trees in churchyards: 1991 Measure s 6(3).

1084. Parson as owner or occupier of churchyard.

The parson appears not to be 'owner' of the churchyard within the meaning of statutory definitions of 'owner', such as those applicable to the interpretation of the Public Health Acts to the effect that 'owner' means the person receiving the rackrent of the premises, or who would receive the rackrent if the premises were let at a rackrent¹.

An incumbent in whom the freehold is vested is the 'occupier' of the churchyard; and, if the occupation is of value by reason of his receiving a net income from fees in respect of exclusive rights of burial or rights of erecting monuments in the churchyard, and similar charges, he is rateable accordingly².

1085. Property in monuments.

A monument set up in a church or churchyard¹ remains the property of the person by whom it is set up during his life, and that person may accordingly sustain an action for trespass against anyone removing or defacing it²; in former times it has been said on high authority that after the death of the person setting it up, the monument became the property of the heir of the deceased in whose honour it was erected, and descended to the heirs of the latter, as being in the nature of an heirloom, and at any rate that such heirs might sustain an action if the monument be interfered with³; and, despite some conflict of opinion in modern times, it is thought that the legal position remains unchanged⁴.

4 It has been suggested that under modern law rights in a monument may pass to the persons entitled under the will or intestacy of the person who had set it up, but it is significant that the older view is adopted in the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 3 (4), where 'owner' is defined: see PARA 1316 note 13 post. Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(2) CONSECRATED CHURCHES AND CHURCHYARDS/(v) Pews/1086. Right to a pew.

(v) Pews

1086. Right to a pew.

A pew signifies an enclosed seat in a church¹. At common law there is no property in nor any right to sell or let a pew or seat in the body of a parochial church or chapel², but a right to use particular seats may have been acquired, as appurtenant to a particular messuage³, by faculty⁴ or prescription founded on a presumed faculty⁵, and where the seats in respect of which such a right has been acquired are enclosed they are called a pew.

The right thus established in a pew⁶ is essentially a right to use it during divine service and other religious observances at times when the church is open for use, subject to the regulations of the church, and there is no right of access to the pew or to use it for other purposes in any other manner⁷. Although the seats are permanently enclosed and affixed to the freehold the freehold of the land remains vested in the parson, and the ownership of the pew carries with it no more than an easement in the nature of an exclusive right to occupy during divine service and the times of other religious observances⁸. Where a rent is paid for a pew⁹ it is a profit arising from the use of the freehold and gives to the person paying it a right to have the use and occupation of a certain portion of the freehold for the purpose above defined¹⁰.

The right to a pew by prescription may be established whenever there is evidence of exclusive possession of the pew inconsistent with mere possession by permission¹¹ and so long continued that the grant of a faculty ought to be presumed, and, even where the first possession arose in a form which gave no legal title, a faculty may be presumed when it is consistent with the later long-continued user¹².

2 By the general law and of common right all pews belong to the parishioners at large for their use and accommodation: Pettman v Bridger (1811) 1 Phillim 316 at 323.

3 Rogers v Brooks (1783) 1 Term Rep 431n. If the messuage is divided the right to use the pew may be apportioned: Harris v Drewe (1831) 2 B & Ad 164. The messuage need not necessarily be within the parish (Lousley v Hayward (1827) 1 Y & J 583) but the pew must be appurtenant to a messuage (Mainwaring v Giles (1822) 5 B & Ald 356).

4 The grant by faculty of a seat in the body of a church to a person residing outside the parish is bad: Fuller v Lane (1825) 2 Add 419; Byerley v Windus (1826) 5 B & C 1. A faculty to a man and his heirs is bad: Stocks v Booth (1786) 1 Term Rep 428.

5 Where a question of prescription is raised it must be dealt with by the temporal courts (Byerley v Windus (1826) 5 B & C 1; Knapp v Parishioners of St Mary, Willesden (1851) 15 Jur 473), and where the house to which a pew was alleged to be appurtenant was being replaced by a new mansion house and the owner had applied for a faculty to annex the pew to the new house or alternatively that he might be allotted a pew, and the rector denied that any pew was appurtenant by prescription to the old house, a prohibition was granted to prevent the question of prescription being tried in the consistory court: R v Tristram (1909) Times, 24th April, 17th June. See Hallack v Cambridge University (1841) 1 Gal & Dav 100. A prescriptive right to a pew ceases when the person enjoying it ceases to be a parishioner: Fuller v Lane (1825) 2 Add 419 at 427. The claimant must show some act of user or assertion of proprietary right inconsistent with mere possession by permission of churchwardens: Stileman-Gibbard v Wilkinson [1896] 1 QB 749.

6 A pew in an aisle or chancel which legally may belong to a person, whether a parishioner or not (Fuller v Lane (1825) 2 Add 419 at 427), in respect of the ownership of a house, or may belong to a lay rector, differs from a pew in the body of the church, which can only be acquired by virtue of a faculty or by prescription founded on a presumed faculty (Parker v Leach (1866) LR 1 PC 312 at 327; Mainwaring v Giles (1822) 5 B & Ald 356). A grant of a portion of the chancel by a rector to a man and his heirs is bad: Clifford v Wicks (1818) 1 B & Ald 498.

A right to a pew involves the burden of repairing it¹; and the carrying out of repairs by a claimant or by his predecessors in title without leave from the churchwardens, which would be illegal in the absence of any title, affords strong grounds for presuming the grant of a faculty², but it is not essential to prove acts of repair where evidence is given of other acts of user which are inconsistent with possession by mere permission³.

Where there is no prescription the churchwardens on behalf of the Ordinary¹, and subject to his direction, may order the placing of parishioners in any public consecrated church or chapel², including a cathedral which is also a parish church³, and neither the minister nor the parochial church council⁴ has any right to interfere with them in so doing, although they may reasonably defer to the minister's advice and the council's wishes. Their duty is to provide, in such manner as the service of God may be best celebrated⁵, to the best advantage for the accommodation of all parishioners⁶, so that as far as practicable everyone may have a seat, and the allotment must be in general terms giving the allottees the right to occupy the seats allotted at all ordinary services if they are claimed before the commencement of the service⁷. The allotment gives a possessory right against a disturber⁸ though not against the Ordinary or churchwardens⁹, but if they find it necessary to dispossess anyone of a seat which he has enjoyed for a time they must give him notice before doing so¹⁰.

1089. Re-allotment of seats.

Where under a faculty churches are enlarged, restored or repaired, it has been usual to re-allot seats in the church where there has been a large number of faculty seats in the church or seats allotted by the churchwardens to houses in the parish, or where the funds for the alterations have been mainly subscribed by parishioners who desire to have faculty pews annexed to their houses, and this re-allotment has usually been confirmed by faculty¹; but in view of the increase in the population to be accommodated, such faculties will only be granted with the greatest prudence². Where the allocation is made by the churchwardens and not confirmed by faculty, it gives no legal right to the allottees to claim the seats allotted as faculty seats or pews³ unless there is evidence from which the Ordinary's consent may be inferred⁴.

1090. Allotment of seats under former enactments.

The Ecclesiastical Commissioners¹ had power under the Church Building Acts 1818 to 1884, in connection with the formation of new ecclesiastical districts, to allot one seat or pew for the use of the minister and his family, and one for the use of his servants, and after setting apart not less than one-fifth of the whole of the seating as free seats² could provide that the rest of the seats should be chargeable with specified rents³.

² Church Building Act 1818, s 75 (repealed).

³ Ibid s 77 (repealed). Most of the provisions of the Church Building Acts, including all provisions of the Church Building Act 1818, were repealed by the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 32, Schedule (repealed), and after the passing of that Measure it was not possible to constitute any district under the old enactments. When a new parish was constituted pursuant to a scheme under the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 1, a claim to seating in the church of the new parish operated as a surrender of former rights: s 4 (6). These provisions have been repealed by the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 95, Sch. 9, and schemes for new parishes under the New Parishes Act 1943 can no longer be made. Under the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 22, the Church Commissioners were empowered to substitute a new church for a parish church and, inter alia, to secure rights to seating in the new church corresponding with those in the old church: s 22 (2) (f). The provisions of s 22 have also been repealed by the Pastoral Measure 1968, Sch. 9.

Any pews or seats in any church or chapel, consecrated or unconsecrated, which are in the disposal of or are the property of any persons by virtue of any Act of Parliament, deed or instrument, whether subject to any trust or not, may be surrendered to the bishop of the diocese or the Church Commissioners, with or without consideration for such surrender, by the persons having the disposal of or the property in them¹, by deed executed by them, by the bishop of the diocese and by the patrons of the church or chapel, and registered in the diocesan registry².

After the surrender, the pews or seats are subject to the same laws as to their rights and property as the pews and seats of ancient parish churches³.

1092. Pew rents.

There is no right at common law to let or sell any seat or pew in a church¹, but express power was in many cases given by statute to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners (now the Church Commissioners)² or other bodies or persons to fix a scale of payment to be received for seats or pews in certain churches and chapels in order to provide funds for repaying the expense of building or for maintaining the ministrations of the church in that connection. The commissioners could fix a scale of pew rents to be charged in any church or chapel in aid of the building of which they had made a grant either in a district parish³ or in a consolidated⁴ or district chapelry, or with the bishop's consent if sufficient funds could not be provided from other sources in parochial districts or new parishes formed after July 1856⁵.

In cases where there were pew rents in districts and parishes formed under the Church Building Act 1818 to 1884 and the New Parishes Acts 1843 to 1884 the existing rights to charge or recover rents for seats in churches or any scale fixing those rents are not affected by the repeal of the bulk of these Acts⁶.

The commissioners, in the exercise of their functions, may accept a church site by a grant or conveyance which declares that the pews or seats in the church erected or to be erected there, or a proportion of them, are not to be let for payment of money; and such pews or seats must not be so let⁷.

By the canon law the rector of a parish was responsible for the repair of the whole church¹, but by the common custom of England, as opposed to the rest of Christendom, the liability was divided, it resting on the parishioners to repair the body of the church², and on the rector, whether spiritual or lay, to repair the chancel³.

It is the duty of the parochial church council¹ to take care that the churches and chapels in the parish are decently kept and are well and sufficiently repaired, and that all things in them are maintained in an orderly and decent fashion²; and that the churchyards are duly fenced³ and kept in an orderly and decent manner⁴.

The parochial church council of any parish may levy a voluntary church rate⁵ for any purpose connected with the affairs of the church⁶, which would include its repair. The council is only liable for the repair of the church to the extent of the funds which it has in its hands⁷, but has a duty to arrange for inspection of the church when called upon so to do by the archdeacon⁸.

1 The parochial church council has the former powers and duties of the churchwardens with respect to the care and maintenance of the fabric of the church, its goods and ornaments and the churchyard: Parochial Church Councils (Powers) Measure 1956, s 4 (1) (ii). The council is the responsible authority to enforce the liability of the rector or lay impropriator to repair the chancel: see PARA 1106 post. The diocesan conference (now the diocesan synod)¹ of every diocese in the provinces of Canterbury and York, except the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man² was required to establish within three years after 29th March 1955³ a scheme to provide for the inspection of every church in the diocese at least once in every five years⁴. The diocesan synod may at any time or times establish a further scheme taking the place of any prior scheme⁵. Every scheme must provide for the establishment of a fund by means of contributions, for the payment out of the fund of the cost of inspection of churches, for the appointment of an architect or architects to inspect and report on the churches in the diocese, and for a copy of each report to be sent to the archdeacon of the archdeaconry and the parochial church council of the parish in which the church to which it relates is situate, and may contain such other provisions as the diocesan synod thinks fit⁶. Any scheme made and passed at a meeting of the diocesan synod must be signed by the chairman of the meeting and comes into operation on the date on which it is signed⁷.

Where the archdeacon of any archdeaconry finds at a survey of the churches of his jurisdiction⁸ or at any other time that a church in his archdeaconry has not been inspected to his satisfaction by an architect for at least five years he may serve on the parochial church council or, if there is no parochial church council, on the churchwardens⁹ concerned, a notice in writing¹⁰ requiring the church to be inspected in accordance with the diocesan scheme¹¹. At any time after the expiration of three months from the date of service of the notice the archdeacon may, with the bishop's consent, himself make arrangements for inspection and report if the church has not been inspected in the meantime¹².

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(2) CONSECRATED CHURCHES AND CHURCHYARDS/(vi) Repairs and Maintenance/1100. Repair of chancel.

1100. Repair of chancel.

At common law¹ the repair of the chancel of an ancient parish church was the obligation of the rector of the parish², whether spiritual or lay, in the absence of custom to the contrary³, and a lay impropiator in receipt of the rents and profits of a rectory was liable for repair even where at the time he purchased the land forming part of the rectory he had no notice of the liability⁴. Where the parson was bound to repair the chancel and there was a rector and a vicar, the vicar and rector contributed in proportion to their respective benefices⁵.

The liability was to keep the chancel in good and substantial repair, restoring and rebuilding where necessary, but did not extend to anything in the nature of ornament or, save for the purpose of preservation, to decoration⁶. It is considered that the liability extended to the chancel screen. When the parson repaired the chancel he was thereby discharged from contributing to the repair of the nave⁷.

This common law liability still remains in the case of a number of parishes, but in many others it has been abolished or seriously affected by statute⁸.

The liability to maintain the chancel passes with the rectorial property on its transfer⁹. A purchaser of land to which the liability attaches cannot recover damages from his vendor under the vendor's covenants for title⁹.

The liability of a lay impropiator to pay the costs of repair is personal and several and not joint, and is not limited to the profits of the rectorial property received by him¹⁰ but, on payment of the cost of the repairs, he is entitled to obtain contributions from persons subject to the same liability to repair¹¹.

1100 Repair of chancel

TEXT AND NOTES--The liability to repair arising from the ownership immediately before 1 April 1978 of glebe land or other property forming part of the endowments and held by or in trust for the incumbent, or arising from the ownership of any tithe rentcharge which was extinguished by the Tithe Act 1936 and immediately before 2 October 1936 was held by Queen Anne's Bounty in trust for the incumbent, has been transferred to the parochial church council: Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 s 39; Order of the Church Commissioners dated 11 August 1977.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(2) CONSECRATED CHURCHES AND CHURCHYARDS/(vi) Repairs and Maintenance/1101. Cesser or composition of liability to repair chancel.

1101. Cesser or composition of liability to repair chancel.

An incumbent who by reason only of his incumbency is rector of a parish, or would otherwise be solely liable for the repair or insurance of the chancel of the parish church, has ceased to be liable, and the chancel is repairable and insurable in the same manner as the rest of the church¹. This rule applies only where the incumbent was solely liable; where the rectorial property was vested as to a part in the spiritual rector and as to the remainder in a lay impropriator the spiritual rector is not relieved of his liability².

Any person other than such an incumbent, who is liable as rector or otherwise for the repair of a chancel, after consultation with the parochial church council and with the approval of the parsonages board³, may compound his liability by payment to the diocesan board of finance of such a sum as, having regard to the condition of the chancel⁴, the board of finance may deem sufficient to provide for the cost of future repairs of the chancel and for a capital sum the income of which will be sufficient to insure the chancel against fire up to the cost of reinstatement⁵. The question of the sum to be paid is referred to the Church Commissioners for decision if the parochial church council or the parsonages board so requires⁶. On payment of the sum determined and all expenses incurred, the person compounding receives a receipt and thereafter his liability ceases, the chancel being henceforth repairable in the same manner as the rest of the church⁷. Any sum contributed by an incumbent who is by reason only of his incumbency a person compounding liability under these provisions may be advanced to him by the commissioners by way of charge on the revenues of the benefice⁸.

The sum received to compound liability must be invested in investments permitted by law for the investment of trust funds and the income applied in insuring the chancel or in payment of charges lawfully incurred in the maintenance and repair of the rest of the church or churchyard, the balance being accumulated to form a fund for the extraordinary repair, improvement or enlargement of the church or churchyard which is, however, available for use as income if required⁹. The board of finance has power, however, at the request of the parochial church council and with the consent of the commissioners, to apply any part of the capital of the sum paid for compounding the liability which in the board's opinion represented at the date of its receipt¹⁰ the cost or part of the cost of immediate repairs to the chancel, in or towards the cost of such repairs, but in no case can the fund be reduced below a sum the income of which will be sufficient to provide for insuring the chancel and, with any other money likely to be available for that purpose, to provide for the cost of future repairs¹¹.

3 The parsonages board exercises the functions previously exercised by the diocesan dilapidations board, which it replaces: see the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, ss 1, 29; and PARA 520 ante.

4 By reason of the reference to the condition of the chancel in the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Measure 1923, s 52 (2), the board of finance requires a sum equal to the cost of doing such repairs as are immediately necessary to be included in the sum required for the compounding of the liability.

1102. Chancel repairs and tithe rentcharge.

During the century before 1936 the most common form of rectorial property was the rentcharge created by statute¹. In some cases the tithe rentcharge had been merged² in the land out of which it issued, and in some cases it had been redeemed³. The better view was that in cases of merger the owner of the land in which the tithe rentcharge had been merged was liable for chancel repairs and that in cases of redemption the owner of the land was not so liable; this division of liability is now statutory⁴. There were also cases where the tithe rentcharge and the land out of which it issued were in common ownership although there had been no formal act of merger: in these cases the owner of the unmerged tithe rentcharge naturally remained liable for chancel repairs.

On 2nd October 1936 all tithe rentcharge created in 1836⁵ was extinguished⁶, and redemption stock was issued for the compensation of those interested in the extinguished tithe rentcharge⁷. Where there had been merger the landowner's liability was unaffected⁸. Where immediately before that date a tithe rentcharge and the land out of which it issued were vested in the same person and had been so vested on 26th February 1936⁹ and during the intervening period, the rentcharge was extinguished but no redemption stock was issued¹⁰, and the landowner became liable for chancel repairs, his liability being the same as it would have been if there had been merger¹¹.

1103. Financial provision for repairs.

Where the owner of a tithe rentcharge which was extinguished had been liable for chancel repairs and was entitled to receive redemption stock in compensation for it, a part of the redemption stock, in effect representing the capital value of his liability, was, save in the excepted cases mentioned later, diverted from him and paid to the diocesan board of finance¹. The diverted part was to be equal in amount to such a sum as might be reasonably sufficient, having regard to the condition of the chancel on 2nd October 1936, to provide for the cost of future repairs and to provide a capital sum the income of which would be sufficient to insure the chancel for a sum adequate to reinstate it in the event of destruction by fire². The stock issued to the diocesan board of finance is held and disposed of for the purposes and in the manner for and in which an investment of a sum paid in compounding a liability for repairs is to be held and disposed of under the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Measures 1923 to 1951³.

The excepted cases referred to above are where the rentcharge giving rise to the liability was vested in Queen Anne's Bounty immediately before 2nd October 1936⁴, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners⁴, a spiritual rector of a rectory with cure of souls, an ecclesiastical corporation⁵, or certain universities or colleges⁶: in these excepted cases there was no diversion of a part of the redemption stock to the diocesan board of finance and the corporation or body remains subject to liability to repair as if the rentcharge had continued in existence and in the ownership of the corporation or body⁷.

Where liability attached to two or more rentcharges, provision is made for the apportionment of the liability⁸.

A liability to repair a chancel of a church or to repair any other ecclesiastical building arising in any way except under contract expressly providing for the execution of war damage repairs or from the holding of property on trusts which authorise its application in the execution of those repairs does not extend to any repairs required for making good war damage¹. Where war damage occurs and the discharge of any liability to execute repairs, other than war damage repairs, is, by reason of the extent of the war damage, either impracticable or only practicable at unreasonable cost, or of no substantial advantage, the liability is suspended until such war damage repairs have been done as to make its discharge practicable at reasonable cost and of substantial advantage², and during any period of suspension all rights and remedies arising out of non-discharge of the liability are modified or suspended accordingly³.

The liability to repair a chancel is enforceable in the county court for the district in which the chancel is situated¹.

If the chancel of any church of or belonging to a benefice² is in need of repair, the responsible authority³ may serve on any person who appears to it to be liable to repair the chancel a notice to repair⁴, stating the grounds of liability alleged and the extent of the disrepair, and calling on him to put the chancel in proper repair⁵. After the expiration of one month from the service of the notice⁶, the authority may bring proceedings in the county court⁷ against the person on whom notice was served to recover the sum necessary to repair the chancel⁸ and the court may give judgment for the authority for the sum which in the court's opinion is necessary to repair the chancel⁹.

1107. Repair of private aisle.

Any person having a house within the parish may be liable for the repair of an aisle of the church as having been built for the proper use of those whose estate he has in the house¹, and where the chancel is in fact a chapel coeval with the church which has been and is held and used exclusively as appendant to some estate, the person entitled to its exclusive use will be liable for its repair notwithstanding that the freehold is not in him².

1108. Remedies for unauthorised interference with churchyard.

An unauthorised interference with the churchyard, whether on the part of the rector or incumbent or others, is an offence against ecclesiastical law¹; and in a proper case a civil court will grant an injunction to restrain an interference with the churchyard that would constitute an offence against ecclesiastical law². Such an injunction will be granted at the instance of the parochial church council³ but, in view of the remedies available in the ecclesiastical court, not at the instance of a parishioner⁴. The parochial church council may sue for the protection of the churchyard and rights appurtenant to it including rights of way⁵.

1109. Maintenance of churchyard.

In a particular parish, by immemorial usage, the incumbent or the owner of particular land might be bound to maintain the churchyard and its fences; such a duty was, it seems, enforceable by action or, if the liability was not denied, by proceedings in the ecclesiastical court¹.

In general, however, it was the duty of the churchwardens to see that the churchyard and its fences were kept in proper repair, a duty which was enforceable at law so long as the payment of church rates, upon which the burden of repair fell, was compulsory². The duty has now been transferred to the parochial church council³. Since the abolition of compulsory church rates the council's duty is limited to effecting repairs out of such funds as may be available for the purpose from voluntary church rates or subscriptions, and has ceased to be a legal obligation⁴.

1 See Claydon v Churchwardens of Duncombe (1638) 2 Roll Abr 287 pl 52, where on a denial of the liability a prohibition went to restrain proceedings in the ecclesiastical court against a landowner alleged to be liable to repair the churchyard; see also R v Reynell (1805) 6 East 315. See also PARA 1197 ante.

2 In 2 Co Inst 489 it is said that the parishioners ought to repair the enclosure of the churchyard, a statement which may be taken to mean that it was their duty to contribute through the church rate to the expense. 4 The abolition of compulsory church rates was effected by the Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act 1868, the effect of which (except in certain cases which were specially provided for) is to make the payment of church rates voluntary. As to the maintenance of closed churchyards, see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1141 et seq. In Re Haigh with Aspull New Parish [1919] P 143 (a case of a new parish) the diocesan chancellor ordered that a portion of the burial fees should be allotted to a fund for the maintenance and extension of the parish churchyard.

(vii) Disposal of Surplus Land

1110. Disposal of surplus land acquired under the New Parishes Measure 1943.

The owner¹ of any land² or building which before or after 13th April 1960 was or is acquired by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, Queen Anne's Bounty, the Church Building Commissioners or the Church Commissioners³, whether for valuable consideration or by way of gift, for any of certain purposes mentioned in the New Parishes Measure 1943⁴ may (1) sell that land or building or any part of it⁵; (2) exchange it or any part of it for any other land or building more suitable for the purpose for which it was acquired and receive or pay money by way of equality of exchange⁶; (3) appropriate it or transfer it or any part of it to or for any ecclesiastical purpose for the benefit of the ecclesiastical district⁷ in which it is situated, or for any educational, charitable or public purpose relating to that district⁸; or (4) where it was acquired by way of gift, reconvey it or any part of it to the grantor or his successors in title without consideration⁹. Where the land or building is vested in the Church Commissioners the consent of the incumbent¹⁰, if any, and the bishop¹¹ is required¹², and where it is vested in an incumbent the consent of the commissioners and the bishop or, during a vacancy in the benefice, that of the commissioners, is required¹³. No person may give his consent unless satisfied that the land or building, or the part concerned, is no longer required for the purpose for which it was acquired¹⁴. The proceeds of sale of any land or building sold under these provisions must be paid to the commissioners and applied to such purposes, being purposes for the benefit of the benefice of the ecclesiastical district in which the land or building is situate or charitable purposes relating to that district, as may be agreed between the commissioners and the bishop after consulting with the owner¹⁵.

Where the land or building was acquired for valuable consideration before 13th April 1960 and has been held for less than twenty years the owner must, before offering it for sale, offer to resell it to the person from whom it was acquired at such price as failing agreement may be determined by arbitration¹⁶. If the person to whom it is offered refuses the offer or does not accept it within six weeks after it is made the right of preemption ceases and a statutory declaration made by any officer of the commissioners authorised by them that the offer has been refused or not accepted within that time is sufficient evidence of the facts stated¹⁷.

Nothing in the foregoing provisions authorises the sale or disposal of any consecrated land or affects the jurisdiction of the consistory court¹⁸. These powers do not restrict or limit the powers of sale or disposal conferred by certain other Measures and Acts¹⁹.

1 'Owner' means (1) the Church Commissioners, if the land or building is vested in them; (2) the incumbent, if it is vested in the incumbent (defined in PARA 1061 note 7 ante) for the time being; or (3) during a vacancy occurring after it has vested in the incumbent, the bishop: New Parishes Measure 1943, s 17 (7); Church Property (miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1960, s 6 (2). In relation to any church, parish, district or other area or place 'bishop' means the bishop of the diocese in which the church etc. is situated, or if the parish etc. is situated partly in one diocese and partly in another, the bishop of each such diocese: New Parishes Measure 1943, s 29 (1).

No such consent is necessary where land is appropriated or transferred for the widening of a highway or where the Church Commissioners are satisfied that it is not reasonably practicable to apply for consent, and a certificate to that effect sealed by the commissioners is sufficient evidence of that fact: New Parishes Measure 1943, s 17 (3) proviso; Church Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1960, s 6 (2).

1112. Keeping of registers.

Registers of public and private baptisms and of burials solemnised in England according to the rites of the Church of England must, from 31st December 1812, be kept in separate books of parchment or durable paper by the rector, vicar, curate or officiating minister of every parish or of any chapelry, cathedral or collegiate church, chapel of a college or hospital or burying ground belonging to it, where the ceremonies have been usually (and may according to law be) performed¹. The books² must be provided initially³ by Her Majesty's printer at the expense of the parish, or in a non-parochial place at the expense of the body having the right to appoint the officiating minister for the purpose⁴.

Marriage register books are to be supplied by the Registrar General⁵ to the rector, vicar or curate in charge of every church or chapel where marriages may be solemnised according to the rites of the Church of England⁶.

This is subject to the provisions of ss 22 (4), (5), 23 (2), (3).

Every rector, vicar or curate must at all reasonable times allow searches to be made of any register book in his keeping and must give a copy certified under his hand of any entry or entries¹. There are prescribed fees for searches and certificates².

When registers have been deposited in a diocesan record office³ or with a diocesan registrar, searches are to be permitted and certified copies given by the chief officer or diocesan registrar on payment of the same fees as are payable to a minister⁴, the minister being entitled to receive half the fees in certain circumstances⁵.

2 The fees are now prescribed by order made by the Church Commissioners; see the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, ss 2, 8 (1), Schedule, Part I. The current fees are as follows: certificate of baptism or burial, 50p; short certificate of baptism (see note 1 supra), 25p; searching register of baptisms or burials for first year, 30p; and for every year after the first year, 15p: Parochial Fees Order 1972, S.I. 1972 No. 177, Schedule, Part I. Penalties are prescribed for unlawfully destroying, defacing or injuring any register or forging or fraudulently altering any entry in it or any certified copy of such entry, or for knowingly and unlawfully inserting any false entry in a register or in any certified copy¹.

A minister, however, incurs no penalty if he discovers an error in the form or substance of the entry in the register of any baptism or burial solemnised by him and within one calendar month after the discovery corrects the erroneous entry according to the truth of the case by entry in the margin, without any alteration or obliteration of the original entry, and signs the marginal entry, adding the date of the correction, in the presence of the parent or parents of the child baptised or of two persons who attended the burial or, in case of their death or absence, in the presence of the churchwardens or chapelwardens, who must attest the correction and signature².

1117. Custody of parochial registers and records.

The bishop of a diocese may give directions for the care and repair of register books of baptisms, marriages and burials in the power and custody of any minister¹ of the diocese². The expense of complying with directions must be met by the parochial church council³ out of money in its hands either specially collected for the purpose or otherwise available⁴. In particular the bishop may require the books to be kept in a safe or chest complying with specified requirements in respect of the materials of which it is constructed, its holding capacity and the security it affords against damage by fire, damp or otherwise and against wrongful interference with the registers⁵. His directions bind all persons concerned, either as owners or custodians of the register books⁶.

The bishop may establish, appoint officers to, and control a diocesan record office⁷, in which any minister may deposit any register books of baptisms, marriages⁸ and burials, which are not in use for the purpose of making entries, or any documents⁹ of value as historical records and evidence of legal rights in his custody or in that of the churchwardens or of the parochial church council or in the joint custody of any of them¹⁰. After the establishment of a diocesan record office, the bishop may cause the register books and documents¹¹ to be inspected and reported on by some person authorised by him¹², and if on report it appears to the bishop that any such register books or documents are in danger, or that any directions as to the care of register books have not been complied with, he may send a copy of the report to the minister concerned, and after fourteen days¹³ may order any such register books as are not in use for the purpose of making entries, or any such documents, to be deposited in the diocesan record office within a specified period¹⁴ unless in the meantime adequate steps have been taken to his satisfaction to remove the danger or comply with the directions¹⁵. Any baptism, marriage or burial registers so deposited are to be kept by and remain in the power and custody of the chief officer of the diocesan record office¹⁶.

If on the application of the person who would be entitled to the custody of any such register or documents had they not been so deposited for their return, the bishop is satisfied that any directions he may give with regard to them will be duly complied with, he must, and in any other case may, order them to be returned to that person's custody¹⁷.

Provision is made for the transfer of registers and documents between different diocesan record offices on the foundation of a new diocese or an alteration of diocesan boundaries¹⁸. Every chief officer of a diocesan record office who under these provisions has marriage registers in his custody must furnish particulars of them to the Registrar General¹⁹ and if such a register is required in order to correct or amend any entry in it he must deliver it to the minister concerned for that purpose²⁰. The bishop has power on the application of any person or body wishing to print or otherwise reproduce, at his or its own cost, any register or document which can be deposited under these provisions and which is in the power and custody of a minister in the diocese to authorise its temporary deposit under these provisions so as to be available for printing or reproduction²¹.

1 'Minister' means every rector, vicar, curate or other officiating minister having any register books of baptisms, marriages or burials in his power, but does not include a chaplain appointed by a body maintaining a cemetery under statutory powers: Parochial Registers and Records Measure 1929, s 13.

1119. Declarations of redundancy.

A pastoral scheme¹ may make a declaration of redundancy in respect of (1) a church² which the Church Commissioners are satisfied is not required as a parish church or chapel of ease or will cease to be so required as a result of any provision of the scheme³; or (2) any part of a church (being a parish church or chapel of ease) which the commissioners are satisfied is no longer required for use as part of the church or will cease to be so required as a result of any provision of the scheme⁴. Such a declaration may be made in respect of a parish church notwithstanding that the parish will have no parish church when the declaration takes effect, and the status of the parish is not thereby affected⁵.

Provision may be made for the use, care and maintenance or the demolition of the church or part of a church to which the declaration relates, and also for dealing with a churchyard or other land annexed or belonging to the church⁶. The church or part of the church to which the declaration relates is referred to as the 'redundant building'⁷.

1 As to pastoral schemes, see PARA 856 et seq ante. As to the procedure necessary where the pastoral scheme is to make a declaration of redundancy, see the Pastoral Measure 1968, ss 3 (4)-(6), 4 (2), 5 (2), 93 proviso, and PARAS 856, 862, 878 ante. 2 For the meaning of 'church', see PARA 865 note 1 ante. The redundancy provisions apply also to a church designated as a guild church under the City of London (Guild Churches) Acts 1952 and 1960 other than the church of St Lawrence Jewry (Pastoral Measure Act 1968, s 92 (1)), and to churches provided under any private or local Act passed before 1st April 1969 (s. 93).

Where the purposes of a charity include the giving of sermons or lectures in the church which is declared redundant, they must be given in the parish church or such other church as the bishop may with the Charity Commissioners' approval by instrument under seal direct: s 63 (3).

1120. Appropriation to uses and demolition.

Where a new church or place of worship¹ is to be provided to take the place of a church or churches², and a pastoral scheme makes a declaration of redundancy in respect of the church or churches to be replaced³, and the Advisory Board for Redundant Churches⁴ certifies that the demolition of the redundant building would not be objectionable on the ground of historic or architectural interest or certifies that features of historic or architectural interest are proposed to be incorporated in the new church or place of worship and that the board is satisfied with the proposals⁵, the pastoral scheme may make further provision for the appropriation or demolition of the redundant building⁶ and for payment to the Church Commissioners of the proceeds of any sale or exchange of the building or its site and the premiums on any lease or licence of the building⁷.

In any other case where a pastoral scheme makes a declaration of redundancy in respect of any church or part of a church, and the commissioners are satisfied that a suitable use or uses will be available for the redundant building, the scheme may provide for its appropriation to such use or uses⁸.

In all other cases, no further provision beyond the declaration of redundancy may be made by a pastoral scheme with respect to the redundant building, but such further provision must be made by a redundancy scheme⁹. This is without prejudice to the provisions relating to restoration of a redundant building to use as a church¹⁰.

1 In this context 'place of worship' means a building licensed by the bishop under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 29, for public worship according to the Church of England, being a building used wholly for such purpose and purposes ancillary to it, or partly for those purposes and partly for other ecclesiastical purposes of the parish or purposes ancillary to it: s 46 (3); and see PARA 1119 note 5 ante.

6 The appropriation must be to such use or uses as appear to the Church Commissioners to be suitable for the building which are specified or generally described in the scheme: ss 46 (1) (i), 51 (1) (a). See also s 51 (8), and PARA 1122 note 1 post. The scheme may also provide for any of the matters applicable to redundancy schemes mentioned in s 51 (2) or (3) (see PARA 1122 post): s 46 (1) (i).

7 Ibid s 46 (1) (ii). The scheme may also provide for the application of the net proceeds and premiums to defray the cost of providing the new church or place of worship, and for the payment of two-thirds of the balance to the diocesan pastoral account and for the application by the commissioners of the remaining one-third in accordance with s 52 (see PARA 1123 post): s 46 (1) (ii). The commissioners may vary the proportions of two-thirds and one-third: s 53 (1) (b), (4); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2). As to the diocesan pastoral account, see the Pastoral Measure 1968, ss 77, 90 (1), and PARA 1123 note 2 post. Where a scheme makes such further provision for appropriation or demolition, the declaration of redundancy cannot take effect until the new church or place of worship is provided, unless the commissioners are satisfied that a suitable building will be available in the interim period for use in place of the church to be disposed of or demolished: s 46 (2). 1120 Appropriation to uses and demolition TEXT AND NOTES 1-7--1968 Measure s 46, as amended, consolidated in Pastoral Measure 1983 s 46.

Where the commissioners are satisfied that a new church or place of worship is to be provided in the area of a benefice to take the place of a church building or church buildings in that area which should thereupon be declared closed for regular public worship and where the commissioners, after consulting the Church Buildings Council, are satisfied with the proposals made for the future of the church building or any of the church buildings to be closed, then a pastoral church buildings scheme may further provide (1) for the appropriation of the redundant building (ie in accordance with s 51(1)(a): see PARA 1122) or for its demolition, and for any of the matters mentioned in s 51(2), (3) or (4) (see PARA 1122) (s 46(1)(a)); (2) for the payment to the commissioners of the proceeds of any sale or exchange of the building or the site of it, or any part of the building or site, with or without any land annexed or belonging to it, and the premiums on any lease or licence of the building or site or any part of the building or site with or without any such land (s 46(1)(b)); and (3) for the application of the net proceeds and net premiums to defray the cost of providing the new church or place of worship and, if the whole amount is not required for that purpose, for the payment of two-thirds of the balance to the diocesan pastoral account and for the application by the commissioners of the remaining one-third in accordance with s 52 (see PARA 1123) (s 46(1)(c); s 46(1) amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 42(a)). 'Place of worship' means a building licensed by the bishop for public worship in accordance with the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England, being a building used wholly for the purposes of such worship and purposes ancillary to it, or partly for those purposes and partly for other ecclesiastical purposes of the parish or purposes ancillary to it, and includes a building which, pursuant to an agreement under the Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, is to be used as a place of worship jointly with another church and is to be owned by the Church of England only or to be jointly owned by that Church and any other Church: 1983 Measure s 46(10). References to the provision of a new place of worship are to be construed as including references to the provision of such a place by adapting, improving or repairing an existing building: s 46(9). Special provision is made in respect of a Church which was the subject of a sharing agreement under the Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969: see 1983 Measure s 46(8).

A pastoral scheme which provides for the demolition of a redundant building may provide for its demolition by the Diocesan Board of Finance: s 46(2) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 42(b)).

Where a pastoral scheme makes such provision as is referred to in the 1983 Measure s 46(1), the declaration of redundancy will not take effect until the new church or place of worship is provided unless the commissioners are satisfied that, if the church or any of the churches to be replaced is disposed of or demolished before such provision, a suitable building will be available in the interim period, not necessarily in the same parish, for use in place of that church: s 46(7).

TEXT AND NOTE 8--1968 Measure s 47 now Pastoral Measure 1983 s 47(1). Where a pastoral scheme makes a declaration of redundancy in respect of any church or part of a church and the commissioners are satisfied that no suitable or appropriate alternative use will be available for the redundant building when the declaration takes effect, then, if it appears to the commissioners (1) after consultation with the Church Buildings Council that the building is of such historic and archaeological interest or architectural quality that it ought to be preserved in the interests of the nation and the Church of England, and (2) that the Churches Conservation Trust (see PARA 1137) will have the resources to meet the cost of repairing and maintaining it, the scheme may provide for its care and maintenance by the trust: s 47(2) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 43(a)); Pastoral (Amendment) Measure 1994 s 3.

Where a pastoral scheme provides for the care and maintenance of a redundant building or any part of it by the trust, the scheme may also provide for the care and maintenance by the trust of the whole or any part of the land annexed or belonging to the building or the church of which the building is part, and may so provide notwithstanding that the land is or has been used for burials: 1983 Measure s 47(3). Where a pastoral church buildings scheme contains a declaration of closure of a church for regular public worship and the church is neither a listed building nor situated in a conservation area, and the commissioners are satisfied with the proposals for the future of the building, the scheme may provide for the demolition of the building closed for regular public worship and for any of the matters for which s 51(4) makes provision and s 51(5) to (11) apply accordingly: s 47(3A) (added by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 43(b)).

NOTE 8--Now it may provide for any of the matters mentioned in the 1983 Measure s 51(2), and s 51(5)-(11) applies: s 47(1). 1968 Measure ss 57, 59 now 1983 Measure ss 57, 59 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 paras 17, 18).

(ii) Redundancy Schemes

1121. Preparation of redundancy schemes.

The Church Commissioners must not prepare a redundancy scheme in respect of the redundant building for at least one year from the date when the declaration of redundancy takes effect¹. In exceptional cases a scheme may be prepared before the one year 'waiting period' expires². When the waiting period has expired, and not later than three years after the declaration of redundancy takes effect, the commissioners must prepare a draft scheme with respect to the redundant building³. The commissioners may in some circumstances postpone the preparation of a draft scheme for a minimum further period⁴.

The commissioners must serve copies of the draft scheme on the diocesan board of finance, the local planning authority⁵ or the authorities concerned, and the Advisory Board for Redundant Churches⁶ and, if the draft scheme provides for the care and maintenance by the Redundant Churches Fund⁷ of the redundant building, on that fund⁸. The commissioners must publish notice of the draft scheme⁹ and representations may be made to them¹⁰. If the commissioners decide to proceed with the draft scheme they must seal a copy, with any amendments, thus making the scheme, which they must then submit to Her Majesty in Council, who may confirm the scheme by Order in Council¹¹. If the commissioners decide not to proceed with the draft scheme, or to withdraw it owing to an unforeseen change of circumstances, they must as soon as possible prepare a new draft scheme¹².

There are provisions for a redundancy scheme, in exceptional circumstances, to be made otherwise than following upon a declaration of redundancy¹³.

A redundancy scheme may, before or after it comes into operation, be amended, and its provisions revoked, substituted or complemented by a subsequent redundancy scheme¹⁴.

1 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 49 (1). As to declaration of redundancy, see PARA 1119 ante. The declaration takes effect when the pastoral scheme is confirmed by Order in Council and notice of it is published, or at some later date as provided in the scheme: see ss 10, 39 (3), and PARA 877 ante. As to the interim vesting of property during the 'waiting period' and its care and maintenance, see s 49 (1), (2), and PARA 1124 post.

2 If the advisory board (see PARA 1135 post) certifies that demolition would not be objectionable on the ground of historic or architectural interest, the commissioners may proceed forthwith with a scheme providing for the demolition of the building and other matters mentioned in s 51 (3) (see PARA 1122 post): s 49 (1) proviso (i). If the commissioners are satisfied that a suitable use or uses will be available before the expiration of the waiting period, they may proceed forthwith with a scheme providing for appropriation of the building to such use or uses and for other matters mentioned in s 51 (2) (see PARA 1122 post): s 49 (1) proviso (ii).

3 Ibid s 50 (1). In cases falling within s 49 provisos (i) or (ii) (see note 2 supra) the scheme must be made not later than three years after the conditions therein are fulfilled: s 50 (1). Before preparing a draft scheme the commissioners must consult the bishop and, if it is proposed to provide for the demolition or care and maintenance by the Redundant Churches Fund (see PARA 1137 post) or for any architectural or structural changes for the purpose of facilitating the use of the redundant building, the advisory board: s 50 (2). The draft scheme must provide for the relevant matters mentioned in s 51 (see PARA 1122 post): s 50 (1).

4 The period may be extended if negotiations concerning the scheme are still in progress or if there is an unforeseen change of circumstances: s 50 (1) proviso.

5 For the meaning of 'local planning authority', see PARA 862 note 2 ante.

- 6 As to the board, see PARA 1135 post.
- 7 As to the Redundant Churches Fund, see PARA 1137 post.
- 8 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 50 (3).
- 9 Ibid s 50 (4). Publication is to be in one or more local newspapers and must state the effect of the draft scheme and name a place for inspection of a copy: s 50 (4).
- 10 Ibid s 50 (4). The notice must give at least twenty-eight days from publication for written representations to be made to the commissioners: s 50 (4). The commissioners must consider representations duly made and any unforeseen change of circumstances affecting the implementation of the draft scheme and must consult the bishop, and may then decide not to proceed with the draft scheme or to amend it or to proceed with it in its original form: s 50 (5).
- 11 Ibid s 50 (6). The scheme will normally take effect upon publication of the Order in Council (s. 50 (8), applying ss 9, 10 (see PARAS 878, 880 ante)), but it may take effect later as provided in the scheme (ss. 10 (2), 39 (3), 50 (8), 51 (9)). After publication the validity of the scheme cannot be questioned: ss 10 (1), 50 (8).
- 12 Ibid s 50 (7). The provisions of s 50 (2)-(6) apply to the new draft scheme: s 50 (7).
- 13 Thus where a bishop certifies that on 1st April 1969 (the date of commencement of the Pastoral Measure 1968) a church in his diocese has not been used for divine service for at least five years and the incumbent, the patron and the parochial church council consent, the commissioners may by order declare the church redundant, whereupon Part III (ss. 42-66) applies: s 54 (1). Where any church or part of a church has been demolished before 1st April 1969 or is subsequently demolished, otherwise than under Part III, a redundancy scheme may be prepared providing for all or any of the matters in s 51 (3), and the procedure in s 50 (2)-(6), (8), applies to the scheme: s 54 (2). The provisions in s 54 do not apply to a consecrated chapel belonging to a charity: s 55 (5).
- 14 Ibid s 57 (1)-(3). The procedure contained in s 50 (2)-(6) applies to the amending scheme: s 57 (1). Provisions in pastoral schemes made under s 46 or s 47 may similarly be amended by subsequent redundancy schemes: s 57 (1). An amending scheme may revoke all or any of the provisions of the previous scheme (or the redundancy provisions of the pastoral scheme) and may substitute or add other provisions providing for the matters mentioned in s 51 (see PARA 1122 post), and may contain any necessary or expedient transitional provisions: s 57 (2).

UPDATE

1121 Preparation of redundancy schemes

NOTES--Pastoral Measure 1968 consolidated in Pastoral Measure 1983: see table para 1435A.

TEXT AND NOTES 1, 2--For 'one year' read 'six months': ibid s 49.

NOTE 1--1968 Measure ss 10, 39(3) now 1983 Measure ss 11, 38(3); reference to confirmation and publication of notice omitted (s 11 amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 6).

NOTE 2--Now the commissioners may proceed provided that they do not prepare a pastoral (church buildings disposal) scheme in respect of a building closed for regular public worship for a period of six months after the declaration takes effect if the scheme provides for the demolition of a building which is either a listed building or situated in a conservation area, unless the commissioners are satisfied, after consulting the Church Buildings Council, that, at that stage, there is no objection to the demolition taking place: 1983 Measure s 49(1) proviso (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 44(b), (c)).

NOTES 3-12--Now Pastoral Measure 1983 s 50 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 14; and renumbered by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 8).

NOTE 3--However, if the Council has advised that the demolition of the redundant building or part of it would not in its opinion be objectionable, the requirement to consult with the board in Pastoral Measure 1983 s 50(2) does not apply in relation to that building or part, as the case may be: s 50(2) proviso (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 45(c)). After preparing the draft scheme and before proceeding under the 1983 Measure s 50 the commissioners must consult the bishop: s 50(2A) (added by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 45(d)).

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Now if before the end of the two-year period it is found to be impracticable to prepare the draft scheme before that period expires, and it seems to the commissioners, after consulting with the Diocesan Board of Finance, reasonable to do so, they may, with the consent of the bishop postpone the preparation of the draft scheme for such minimum further period or periods as they find to be necessary: 1983 Measure s 50(1) proviso (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure s 45(b)).

TEXT AND NOTE 8--A copy must also be served on the Commonwealth War Graves Commission, English Heritage, the Joint Committee of the National Amenity Societies, and the Church Buildings Council: Pastoral Measure 1983 s 50(3) (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 14; Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 45(e)). Where the draft scheme makes or is to make any such provision as is referred to in the 1983 Measure s 51(1)(a) and it is proposed to make any architectural or structural changes in the building closed for regular public worship or any part thereof to facilitate the use or uses referred to in s 51, the commissioners may not make the scheme unless they have first consulted the Church Buildings Council on those proposed changes: s 50(4A) (added by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 45(f)). See further the 1983 Measure s 50(5A)-(5C) (added by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 45(g)).

NOTE 11--Now Pastoral Measure 1983 ss 10, 11 apply, with necessary modifications, to schemes under s 50 as they apply to pastoral church building schemes: s 50(9) (substituted by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 14; and amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 45(h)).

NOTE 13--1968 Measure s 54(1) now 1983 Measure s 54(1) and relates to a church or part of a church. Where by virtue of s 54(2) a redundancy scheme provides for any of the matters mentioned in s 51(4), s 51(5) applies in relation to the proceeds and net proceeds of any sale or exchange, and to the premiums and net premiums on any lease, of the site or part of the site of the church or part of the church to which the scheme applies as it applies where a redundancy scheme which provides for the demolition of a redundant building also provides for any of those matters: s 54(3). Where the commissioners are satisfied that a new church or place of worship is to be provided in the area of the benefice in which a demolished church was situated, to take the place of the demolished church, the net proceeds and the net premiums must be applied in accordance with s 46(1)(c): s 54(3) proviso; Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 Sch 3 para 20. 1968 Measure s 55(5) now 1983 Measure s 55(5).

NOTE 14--Now Pastoral Measure 1983 s 57 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 17; and the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 11). Without prejudice to the provisions of s 57(2), the commissioners may, with the agreement of the Secretary of State, make an amending redundancy scheme which provides (a) for empowering the commissioners to sell, give or exchange any property vested in the Churches Conservation Trust (see PARA 1137), being a redundant building or any part of one or any land annexed or belonging to the building or the church of which it forms part, for any use or uses which appear to the commissioners to be suitable and which are specified or described in the scheme; and (b) for empowering the Diocesan Board of Finance to use or hold that property for such use or uses, or to let or license it for that use or those uses, or partly the one and partly the other; and the scheme may for that purpose provide that immediately before the date on which the property vests in the commissioners under s 59(2) (see PARA 1125) or in the Diocesan Board of Finance under s 59(3) (see PARA 1125), as the circumstances require, it will cease to be vested in the trust: s 57(3). Before preparing a draft of a scheme which provides as above, the commissioners must consult the trust: s 57(3).

The proceeds of any sale or exchange made, and the premiums on any lease or licence granted, by virtue of s 57(3) are to be paid to the commissioners, and out of those proceeds or premiums, as the case may be, the sum expended by the Churches Conservation Trust (see PARA 1137) on the care and maintenance of the property to which the amending redundancy scheme relates, or so much of it as the commissioners may, with the agreement of the Secretary of State, determine, must be repaid to the trust by the commissioners, and subject to any order made under s 53(1) (b), the net proceeds or net premiums, as the case may be, must be paid and applied in accordance with s 51(5): s 57(4) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 11).

Where any property to which the amending redundancy scheme relates is by virtue of the 1983 Measure s 57(3) let or licensed by the Diocesan Board of Finance, the net rent from time to time paid must be paid by the Board to the Churches Conservation Trust (see PARA 1137) until the sum expended by the trust on the care and maintenance of that property, or so much of that sum as the commissioners may, with the agreement of the Secretary of State, determine, has been repaid to the trust out of such rent: s 57(5).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(3) REDUNDANT CHURCHES/(ii) Redundancy Schemes/1122. Contents of redundancy schemes.

1122. Contents of redundancy schemes.

A redundancy scheme must make the following provision for the redundant building: (1) if a use or uses¹ appearing to the Church Commissioners to be suitable have been found for the building or any part of it, the scheme may provide for appropriating the building or part to that use or uses, which must be specified or generally described in the scheme²; (2) if such use or uses cannot be found and it appears to the commissioners, after consulting the Advisory Board for Redundant Churches³, that the building or part is of such historic or architectural interest that it ought to be preserved in the interests of the nation and the Church of England, the scheme may provide for its care and maintenance by the Redundant Churches Fund⁴; (3) failing this, the scheme must provide for the demolition of the building or the part not appropriated or provided for under the foregoing provisions⁵.

Where a redundancy scheme provides for appropriating the redundant building or part of it to a use or uses there specified or described, the scheme may also provide (a) for appropriating the whole or part of the land annexed or belonging to the building or the church⁶ of which it forms part to a use or uses so specified or described⁷; (b) for empowering the diocesan board of finance to use or hold the property concerned for the use or uses so specified or described or to let or license the property for such use or uses⁸; and (c) for empowering the commissioners, subject to any conditions prescribed by the scheme, to sell, give or exchange the property concerned or part of it for such use or uses⁹.

Where a redundancy scheme provides for the demolition of the redundant building or part of it, the scheme may also provide (i) for the disposal¹⁰ by the commissioners of the site or part of the site of the demolished building, with or without the whole or part of the land annexed or belonging to the building or to the church of which it forms part¹¹; (ii) for the disposal of the material arising from the demolition¹²; (iii) for specifying the use or uses for which any such land disposed of by the commissioners is to be used, or allowing it to be used without limitation¹³; and (iv) for appropriating the site of the demolished building or part of it for use as part of the churchyard or burial ground or for other ecclesiastical purposes of the parish¹⁴.

In exercising their foregoing powers to dispose of any building or land, the commissioners or the board may include in the instrument of disposition¹⁵ such covenants as to the use of the building or land as the commissioners or the board think necessary or expedient to give effect to the provisions of the scheme or otherwise to secure the suitable use of the building or land¹⁶.

1 The scheme may appropriate the building to use for such special or occasional religious worship as may be authorised by the bishop or to use as a place of religious worship for a university, college, school or other institution, or to use for religious worship by any church other than the Church of England: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 51 (8). This applies also for the purposes of ss 47 and 48: s 51 (8).

2 Ibid s 51 (1) (a).

3 As to the board, see PARA 1135 post.

4 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 51 (1) (b). As to the fund, see PARA 1137 post. Where the scheme provides for care and maintenance by the fund, the scheme may also provide for the care and maintenance by the fund of land annexed or belonging to the building, notwithstanding that the land has been used for burials: s 51 (7).

5 Ibid s 51 (1) (c). The supplementary provisions contained in s 39 (see PARA 877 ante) apply to redundancy schemes, but without the references to the bishop or bishops: s 51 (9). Where the scheme makes provision for any land which has been used for burials, the provisions in the scheme have effect notwithstanding the Disused

Burial Grounds Act 1884, s 3 (which prohibits the erection of buildings upon a disused burial ground), provided either that no person has been buried there for at least fifty years (Pastoral Measure 1968, s 51 (6) (a)), or that no relative or personal representative of any person buried during that period has objected to the draft scheme or such objections have been withdrawn (s. 51 (6) (b)): see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1146. The provisions of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971, s 55 (which restricts works relating to buildings listed under s 54), do not apply to the execution of works for the demolition of a redundant building pursuant to a pastoral scheme or a redundancy scheme: Redundant Churches and other Religious Buildings Act 1969, s 2; Town and Country Planning Act 1971, s 291 (1), Sch. 23. The provisions of the planning legislation and any restriction or powers imposed by it apply and may be exercised notwithstanding that the development of land is authorised or regulated by or under the Pastoral Measure 1968: s 91; Redundant Churches and other Religious Buildings Act 1969, s 7 (3).

7 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 51 (2) (a).

8 Ibid s 51 (2) (b).

9 Ibid s 51 (2) (c). In regulating the disposal of property under s 51 (2) the commissioners must consult the diocesan board of finance and have regard to their views: s 51 (5). As to the proceeds of a disposal under s 51 (2), see ss 51 (4), 52, 53, and see PARA 1123 post.

10 The disposal may be by sale, gift, exchange or lease: ibid s 51 (3) (a).

11 Ibid s 51 (3) (a). In negotiating the disposal of any property under s 51 (3) the commissioners must consult with the diocesan board of finance: s 51 (5). As to the proceeds of a disposal under s 51 (3), see ss 51 (4), 52, 53, and PARA 1123 post.

15 Ie the conveyance, lease or other instrument: ibid s 62.

16 Ibid s 62. Where the land is sold, given or exchanged any such covenants are enforceable as if the commissioners or the board were the owners of adjacent land and the covenants were expressed to be for the benefit of that adjacent land, and in the case of positive covenants, as if they were negative: s 62. See REAL PROPERTY. This section is expressed to be without prejudice to any restriction or requirement in the scheme itself.

TEXT AND NOTE 5--Head (3) now, if the building or any part of it is not appropriated or provided for under the foregoing provisions, the scheme may, with the consent of the Diocesan Board of Finance, provide for the building or any part of it to remain vested in that board and to be held by it on such terms as may be specified in the scheme: 1983 Measure s 51(1)(c). Add head (4) if the building or any part of it is not provided for under head (3), the scheme must provide for its demolition either by the Commissioners or by the diocesan board of finance: 1983 Measure s 51(1)(d) (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 15).

Where a redundancy scheme provides for the redundant building or any part of it to remain vested in the Diocesan Board of Finance, the scheme may also provide (1) for appropriating the whole or any part of the land annexed or belonging to the redundant building or the church of which it forms part, to a use or uses specified or described in the scheme; (2) for empowering the board itself to use or hold that land or any part of it for the use or uses so specified or described or to let or license it for such use or uses, or partly the one and partly the other; (3) for empowering the commissioners, subject to any conditions prescribed by the scheme, to sell, give or exchange that land or any part of it for such use or uses; (4) for transferring to the board responsibility for the care and maintenance of that land or any part of it; and the scheme may provide as mentioned in head (4) notwithstanding that the land is or has been used for burials: 1983 Measure s 51(3).

1123. Proceeds of sales and other disposals.

The proceeds of any sale or exchange¹ and the premiums on any lease or licence¹ must be paid to the Church Commissioners, who must pay two-thirds of them to the diocesan pastoral account² and must apply the remaining one-third³ as follows⁴: (1) up to a total in any five-year period⁵ of £100,000 (or any substituted figure⁶) must be paid to the Redundant Churches Fund⁷; (2) the excess over that total in any five-year period must be allocated to the diocesan pastoral accounts of such dioceses, in such amounts, as the commissioners may determine, giving preference to the dioceses which have received and are likely to receive less by way of payments than other dioceses⁸. The net proceeds of disposals made pursuant to a pastoral scheme⁹ are paid in like manner, after defraying the cost of providing a new church or place of worship¹⁰.

The net rent payable under a lease or licence¹¹ must be paid into the diocesan pastoral account¹².

1 Ie under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 51 (2), (3): see PARA 1122 ante. In determining the net proceeds of any sale or exchange or the net premium or net rent of any property the deductions to be made include the deduction of any money expended by the Church Commissioners, diocesan board of finance or diocesan redundant churches uses committee on the property, or for the purpose of furthering its disposal or on the demolition of any building on it, and if any question arises as to what are the net proceeds, premium or rent the commissioners' decision is conclusive: s 90 (2).

2 The diocesan pastoral account is an account for each diocese opened and held by the commissioners, to which they must transfer amounts standing to the account of certain closed funds (ie the Expenses Fund, the Diocesan Reorganisation Fund and the General Reorganisation Fund) under certain repealed provisions (ie the Union of Benefices Act 1860, s 22, the Union of Benefices Measure 1923, s 32, and the Reorganisation Areas Measure 1944), and any money payable to the account under any provisions of the Pastoral Measure 1968 or any scheme or order made under it: see s 77.

3 With the approval of the General Synod the commissioners may vary the proportion of two-thirds and one-third: ibid s 53 (1) (b), (4); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2).

4 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 51 (4).

5 'Five-year period' means the period of five years beginning with the date when the Pastoral Measure 1968 came into operation (ie 1st April 1969) and any subsequent periods of five years: s 52 (2).

6 The figure of £100,000 may be varied by the Church Commissioners with the approval of the General Synod: ibid s 53 (1) (c), (4); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2). The figure of £100,000 has been substituted by the figure of £350,000 or one-half of the sum paid by the commissioners under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 45 (10) (see PARA 1137 post), whichever is the less, for the period from 1st April 1974 to 31st March 1979: Payments to Redundant Churches Fund Order 1974, S.I. 1974 No. 306, art. 3.

7 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 52 (1) (a). As to this fund, see PARA 1137 post. The commissioners may order the payment of additional sums to the fund: s 53 (1) (d).

8 Ibid s 52 (1) (b). These provisions relating to the disposal of sums paid to the commissioners do not apply where any church, other than a church which has been declared redundant, is purchased under compulsory powers: s 56 (4). For the meaning of 'church', see PARA 865 note 1 ante.

TEXT AND NOTES--1968 Measure consolidated in the Pastoral Measure 1983: see table PARA 1435A.

NOTE 3--Consolidated in ibid s 53(1) (b), (3) (amended by the Pastoral (Amendment) Measure 1994 s 6).

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Now 1983 Measure s 51(5), which is now subject to s 51(6)-(9).

Where in exercise of the power conferred on the Churches Conservation Trust by s 44(8) (see PARA 1137), that trust has contributed to the cost of the care and maintenance of a church or part of a church, then, unless that church or part is vested in that trust, the sum contributed by that trust under s 44(8), or so much of it as the commissioners may, with the agreement of the Secretary of State, determine, must be repaid to the trust by the commissioners out of the proceeds of any sale or exchange, or the premiums or any lease or licence, of that church or part of the site of it under s 51(2), (3) or (4) (see PARA 1122) before the net proceeds or net premiums, as the case may be, are paid or applied in accordance with s 51(5): s 51(6).

Where in exercise of the power referred to above the Churches Conservation Trust (see PARA 1137) has contributed to the cost of the care and maintenance of a church or part of a church, not being a church or part which is vested in the trust, and the church or part or the site of it is let or licensed by the Diocesan Board of Finance under s 51(2), (3) or (4) (see PARA 1122) or let by the commissioners under s 51(4) (see PARA 1122), the net rent from time to time paid thereunder must be paid by the board or the commissioners, as the case may be, to the trust until the sum contributed by the trust, or so much of it as the commissioners may, with the agreement of the Secretary of State, determine, has been repaid to the trust out of such rent: s 51(7) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 46(c)).

Where before a declaration of redundancy was made in respect of a church or part of a church that church or part was the subject of a sharing agreement under the Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, and on the termination of the agreement it was vested in an incumbent by s 9(3), any contribution in the nature of capital made in accordance with the agreement by any party to it, or so much of it as the commissioners may determine, may be repaid to that party by the commissioners out of the proceeds of any sale or exchange, or the premiums on any lease or licence, of that church or part or the site of it under the 1983 Measure s 51(2), (3) or (4) (see PARA 1122) before the net proceeds or net premiums, as the case may be, are paid or applied in accordance with s 51(5): s 51(8).

Where a pastoral scheme makes a declaration of redundancy in respect of a church, and the commissioners are satisfied that a new church or place of worship is to be provided in the place or area of the benefice in which the first-mentioned church is situated to take the place of that church, then, if any subsequent redundancy scheme which makes provision, within the period of three years from the declaration of closure or such longer period as the commissioners may allow, for the redundant building also provides for any of the matters authorised to be included in the scheme by the 1983 Measure s 51(2)(b) or (c), (3)(b) or (c), (4)(a) or (b) (see PARA 1122), (1) the proceeds of any sale or exchange made, and the premiums of any lease or licence granted, by virtue of those provisions must be paid in accordance with s 51(5), and (2) the net proceeds and net premiums must be applied in accordance with s 46(1) (c) and not in accordance with s 51(5): s 51(9) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 46(d)); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1995 s 11(c).

NOTE 5--Repealed: Pastoral (Amendment) Measure 1994 s 5.

TEXT AND NOTES 6, 7--The Commissioners must allocate the moneys comprised in the remaining one-third of the net proceeds and net premiums, or the balance thereof, mentioned in the Pastoral Measure 1983 ss 46(1) and 51(5), in such proportions as they may determine between the Churches Conservation Trust, the redundant churches temporary maintenance account and the diocesan pastoral accounts of such dioceses as they may determine, subject in the case of any amounts allocated to the Churches Conservation Trust, to any order made under s 53(1): s 52(1) (substituted by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 16; and renumbered by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 8). In exercising their duty to allocate moneys under the 1983 Measure s 52(1), the Commissioners may decide not to allocate moneys to any or all of the accounts mentioned in s 52(1), in which case all the moneys not so allocated must be paid to the Churches Conservation Trust: s 52(2) (added by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 8).

The Commissioners may by order determine the funding periods and in respect of each funding period the maximum figure to be paid under the 1983 Measure s 52: s 53(1) (a); 1994 Measure s 6. For transitional provisions, see s 14. For current amount, see Payments to the Churches Conservation Trust Order 2008, SI 2008/1968.

1124. Interim vesting, care and maintenance.

When a declaration of redundancy¹ takes effect², the redundant building vests in the diocesan board of finance³ without any conveyance or other assurance⁴. There are certain exceptions⁵. A building which so vests does so free of any trust or burial rights⁶.

Between a declaration of redundancy taking effect and a redundancy scheme coming into operation with respect to redundant property, the board is responsible for the care and maintenance of the redundant building and the safe keeping of its contents, and must insure the building and contents⁷; the diocesan redundant churches uses committee⁸ or, as the case may be, the Church Commissioners must endeavour to find a suitable use for the building⁹. The incumbent and churchwardens, while incurring no financial obligation, must assist the board in providing reasonable supervision of the building against damage¹⁰.

1 As to declarations of redundancy, see PARA 1119 ante.

2 As to when declarations take effect, see PARA 1121 note 1 ante.

3 'Diocesan board of finance' means the board constituted for the diocese under the Diocesan Board of Finance Measure 1925 (see PARA 517 ante), although the bishop (defined in PARA 813 note 3 ante) may certify that another board of finance or body be treated as the diocesan board of finance for the purposes of the Pastoral Measure 1968: s 90 (1).

4 Ibid s 49 (1). This does not apply where s 46 or s 47 applies (see PARA 1120 ante): s 49 (1).

5 See ibid s 49 (1) proviso, and PARA 1121 ante.

6 Ibid s 59 (6). Persons who lose burial rights may claim compensation: see s 59 (6) proviso, and PARA 1125 note 17 post.

7 Ibid s 49 (2) (a). When a declaration of redundancy takes effect, any liability of a parochial church council or rector (including a lay rector) for the repair and maintenance of the redundant building and the safe keeping of its contents ceases and the Inspection of Churches Measure 1955 (see PARA 1099 ante) ceases to apply to the redundant building: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 49 (3). As long as a redundant building is vested in the diocesan board of finance pending a redundancy scheme, any property of a charity the purposes of which include the repair and maintenance of the building or its contents continues to be applicable for that purpose: s 63 (1) (a). The Charity Commissioners retain the power to make schemes in respect of such a charity under the Charities Act 1960: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 63 (2). Sch. 3 para 11 (5) (see PARA 887 ante). See also ibid s 63 (1) proviso (ii), and PARA 1125 note 21 post.

Where the board transfers any of the contents of the redundant building to some other place, it must serve a notice on the commissioners, the Church Buildings Council, the Churches Conservation Trust (see PARA 1137) and the registrar of the diocese informing them of the transfer and giving particulars of the contents transferred and the address of the place in question, and must serve a similar notice on any incumbent, priest in charge, parochial church council or sequestrators concerned: 1983 Measure s 49(4) (amended by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 s 44(f)).

1125. Vesting of property.

Where a scheme¹ provides for the demolition of a redundant building or any part of it, the building or part, and any land which under the scheme is to be disposed of with its site², vests in the Church Commissioners³.

Where a scheme⁴ provides for empowering the commissioners to dispose of the redundant building or part of it or any land annexed to it for a specified use or specified uses⁵ the building, part of a building or any land vests in the commissioners⁶.

Where such a scheme⁷ provides for the use, holding, letting or licensing by the diocesan board of finance of the redundant building or part of it or any land annexed or belonging to it for a specified use or specified uses⁸, the building or land vests in the board if it is not already so vested⁹.

Where such a scheme¹⁰ provides for appropriating any land to use as part of a churchyard or burial ground¹¹ the land vests in the person in whom the churchyard or burial ground is vested¹².

Where a redundancy scheme provides for the care and maintenance by the Redundant Churches Fund¹³ of a redundant building or part of it or land annexed or belonging to it¹⁴, the building, part of a building or land vests in the fund¹⁵.

The vesting of property under the foregoing provisions takes effect without any conveyance or other assurance when the relevant provisions of the scheme come into operation¹⁶, and the property vests free of any trust or burial rights¹⁷. The body in whom the property so vests is deemed to have an interest, for the purposes of faculty proceedings, in any other property so vested or any property formerly annexed or belonging to or held with property so vested¹⁸. The foregoing provisions relating to the vesting of buildings and land may result in the removal of the legal effects of consecration²⁰.

So long as a redundant building is vested in the Redundant Churches Fund pursuant to a redundancy scheme any property of a charity the purposes of which include the repair and maintenance of the building or contents continues to be applicable for that purpose²¹. So long as a redundant building is vested in the Church Commissioners or the diocesan board of finance for a use or uses specified in a pastoral scheme or redundancy scheme the property of such a charity continues to be applicable for the building²² but only if the scheme so provides²³. 1125 Vesting of property

TEXT AND NOTE 3--It now vests in the appropriate body, which is the body, being either the commissioners or the Diocesan Board of Finance, by which in accordance with the scheme the building or part in question is to be demolished: ibid s 59(1).

TEXT AND NOTE 15--Now where a redundancy scheme or a pastoral scheme to which ibid s 47 applies so provides: s 59(5).

Where a redundancy scheme provides for transferring to the Diocesan Board of Finance responsibility for the care and maintenance of any land annexed or belonging to a redundant building or the church of which it forms part, the land vests without any conveyance or other assurance in the Board: s 59(6).

TEXT AND NOTES 21-23--Now ibid s 63, also so long as a redundant building is vested in the Diocesan Board of Finance in pursuance of a redundancy scheme, any property of a charity the purposes of which include the repair and maintenance of the building or contents continues to be applicable for that purpose; ibid s 63(1)(a). Section s 63(1) proviso (ii) also applies in this case; see NOTE 21.

So long as any land annexed or belonging to a redundant building is vested in the Diocesan Board of Finance in pursuance of a redundancy scheme or is vested in the Churches Conservation Trust (see PARA 1137) in pursuance of a redundancy scheme or a pastoral scheme to which 1983 Measure s 47 applies, then, if that land comprises a churchyard, any property of a charity the purposes of which include the maintenance of the churchyard continues to be applicable for that purpose, but if part only of the churchyard is so vested, that property is only so applicable if and to the extent that the scheme so provides: s 63(2).

TEXT AND NOTE 21--This also applies so long as a redundant building is vested in the trust pursuant to a pastoral scheme to which 1983 Measure s 47 applies: s 63(1)(b).

NOTE 22--The reference is now to the Charities Act 1993: 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 11(6) (amended by the Charities Act 1993 Sch 6 para 18(3)).

1126. Rights of way.

Where any property vests in the diocesan board of finance, the Church Commissioners or the Redundant Churches Fund under the provisions in the foregoing paragraph, and any land annexed or belonging to a church¹ the whole or part of which is a redundant building does not so vest, the scheme² may provide for conferring on any of those bodies in whom property so vests rights of way over the land not so vesting³.

Rights of way enjoyed by persons attending a church which has been declared redundant may continue to be enjoyed by the Redundant Churches Fund for the performance of its functions and by members of the public for visiting the church if the redundancy scheme provides for vesting the church in the fund⁴.

1 For the meaning of 'church', see PARA 865 note 1 ante.

2 I.e. a redundancy scheme or a pastoral scheme to which the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 46 or s 47 (see PARA 1120 ante) applies: s 60 (1).

3 Ibid s 60 (1). The rights of way are such as appear to the commissioners to be necessary (1) to enable or facilitate the use of the property so vesting for a use or uses specified or described in the scheme (s. 60 (1) (a)); (2) to enable or facilitate the use of the property so vesting which is to be disposed of by the commissioners (otherwise than for such use as aforesaid) for purposes appearing to the commissioners to be reasonable (s. 60 (1) (b)); or (3) to enable the Redundant Churches Fund to perform its functions with respect to property so vesting in the fund, including the giving of reasonable access to members of the public (s. 60 (1) (c)).

TEXT AND NOTE 3--The scheme may now provide for conferring rights of way or other easements over or in the land not so vesting: ibid s 60(1).

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Now rights of way may continue to be enjoyed by the Churches Conservation Trust (see PARA 1137) or the Diocesan Board of Finance, as the case may be, for the performance of its functions and by members of the public for visiting the church if the church or part vests by virtue of the 1968 Measure in either body: s 60(2).

Where the Commissioners consider that it is necessary or appropriate to acquire any right of way or other easement for the benefit of land which has vested or is to vest in the Churches Conservation Trust by virtue of this Measure or is to be disposed of by them under this Measure they may acquire the right of way or easement in question: s 60A (added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 20). Where rights of way or other easements have been acquired by the Commissioners under the 1983 Measure s 60A and the land for the benefit of which the rights were acquired vests in the Churches Conservation Trust by virtue of the 1983

Measure those rights also vest in the Trust: s 60(3) (added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 19).

1127. Disposal of contents.

Before a church¹ or part of a church is demolished pursuant to a redundancy scheme or pastoral scheme, or appropriated to any use, the body in whom the church is vested must transfer the font, communion table and plate used for Holy Communion to some other church in the area of the benefice², or, if they are not needed for such other church, any church or chapel in the diocese directed by the bishop³. The scheme may also provide for the disposal of any other contents of the church, not being tombstones, monuments or memorials commemorating deceased persons buried in the church or in land annexed or belonging to it⁴.

Where a redundancy scheme provides for the care and maintenance of a church by the Redundant Churches Fund⁵, it may also provide for the vesting in and the care and maintenance by the fund of any of the contents of the church or for the disposal of such contents not being tombstones, monuments or memorials⁶.

No faculty is required for anything done in pursuance of the foregoing provisions for disposal of contents⁷.

1128. Disposal of human remains and memorials.

Where any human remains are believed to be buried in or beneath a redundant building or any land to which a redundancy scheme¹ applies, the body or person in whom the property is vested or to whom it is leased or licensed must not demolish, sell, lease or otherwise dispose of it or appropriate it or any part of it to any use or develop it unless the human remains have been removed and reinterred or cremated and any tombstones, monuments or memorials commemorating the deceased persons have been disposed of². There are exceptions to these requirements³. Moreover, if it appears to the Secretary of State that the demolition of the redundant building or the intended use of development of the property will not disturb human remains he may, after consultation with the bishop⁴, by order dispense with these requirements so far as they concern human remains⁵. Where there is situated in any such building or land a monument or memorial commemorating a deceased person whose remains are not buried in the building or land, that building or land must not be demolished, disposed of, appropriated or developed unless the monument or memorial has been disposed of as the bishop has directed⁶.

A faculty is not required for anything done under the foregoing provisions⁷.

Where the Secretary of State has, under 1983 Measure s 66(4), acquired land situated in England for its maintenance with a building, or part of it, the Commission may undertake, in any agreement made under s 66(6) in relation to the building or part of it, the maintenance of the land on the Secretary of State's behalf: ibid s 66(7); National Heritage Act 1983 s 33(3), Sch 4 para 12.

1134. Places of Public religious worship.

If a building, which is a place of public religious worship and is held by or in trust for a charity but is not a church subject to the provisions of the Pastoral Measure 1968¹, is no longer required for use as a place of public religious worship and the Secretary of State is willing to enter into an agreement for the acquisition by him, under his statutory powers², of the building or part of it by way of gift or for less than full consideration, but the persons in whom the building is vested do not have the powers to carry out the agreement, the court may establish a scheme³ for the making and carrying out of the agreement⁴. The scheme may also provide for the acquisition by the Secretary of State of other land, held by or in trust for the charity and comprising or contiguous or adjacent to the building, and of objects ordinarily kept in the building⁴.

So long as a building so required remains vested in the Secretary of State, any property of a charity applicable for the repair and maintenance of the building or for the provision or maintenance of the building or for the provision or maintenance of objects in the building continues to be applicable for that purpose⁵.

UPDATE

1137 [Churches Conservation Trust]

TEXT AND NOTES--The Redundant Churches Fund has been renamed the Churches Conservation Trust: Pastoral (Amendment) Measure 1994 s 13. In the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 44 any reference to the Advisory Board is to be construed as a reference to the Church Buildings Council: Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 7(a).

NOTES--Now 1983 Measure s 44, Sch 5 paras 13-15 (s 44 amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 11; Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 7).

NOTE 2--Employees of the Churches Conservation Trust now qualify for a civil service pension: Superannuation Act 1972 Sch 1, amended by the Superannuation (Admission to Schedule 1 to the Superannuation Act 1972) (No 3) Order 1998, SI 1998/3030; and see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 567.

TEXT AND NOTE 4--For 'or architectural interest', read 'and archaeological interest or architectural quality': 1983 Measure s 44(4).

TEXT AND NOTES 6-11--Where the freehold interest in a redundant church or any land annexed or belonging thereto has been disposed of under a redundancy scheme or pastoral scheme to which the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 46 or 47 applies and the owner of that freehold interest is unable for any reason to use the redundant church for the use specified in the scheme including any use allowed under any covenant imposed in relation to the scheme under s 62 and is willing to dispose of the freehold interest by way of gift, the Churches Conservation Trust may, with the prior consent in writing of the Commissioners, acquire the freehold by way of gift but, before consenting to such an acquisition, the Commissioners must (1) consult the bishop and the Advisory Board; (2) be satisfied that the Churches Conservation Trust will have the resources to meet the cost of maintaining the redundant church: s 44(5A) (s 44(5A), (5B) added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 11). The Commissioners must seal the deed of transfer of any land acquired under the 1983 s 44(5A): s 44(5B) (as so added).

TEXT AND NOTE 6--Now the trust also has power to acquire property (including rights of way) where it considers that to do so would assist it in the exercise of its powers under head (1): 1983 Measure s 44(5)(aa); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1995 s 11(b).

TEXT AND NOTE 7--Now (2) to permit the occasional use of property, or to grant a licence permitting the temporary use of property, vested in the trust for purposes considered by the trust to be suitable and, in any case, either without charge or on payment of a fee; (2A) to let any property vested in the trust on such terms (including terms as to the purposes for which it may be used) as the Church Commissioners may approve, after consultation with the bishop and the Advisory Board for redundant Churches, being terms which the commissioners consider reasonable and proper having regard to all the circumstances; (2B) in respect of any property which the trust has let or is proposing to let under (2A) above, to carry out such works as the trust considers desirable, after consultation with the advisory board: ibid s 44(5)(b), (bb), (bbb); Pastoral (Amendment) Measure 1994 s 2(2).

NOTE 7--Now the powers conferred on the trust under heads (2) and (2A) may be exercised so as to permit the use of a church or part of a church vested in the trust for such worship (including worship by persons belonging to other Christian churches) as may be authorised by the bishop after consulting the incumbent or priest in charge of the benefice in the area of which the church is situated: 1983 Measure s 44(7); 1994 Measure s 2(3). The terms of a lease granted under head (2A) in respect of any property may provide that the property must not be subject to the legal effects of consecration during the currency of the lease, notwithstanding the provisions of the 1983 Measure s 61 (see PARA 1076): 1983 Measure s 44(7A); 1994 Measure s 2(4). Where any such property has been let under head (2A) and the terms of the lease provide to the effect that no alteration may be made thereto without the approval of the trust, its approval can only be given after consultation with the advisory board: 1983 Measure s 44(7B); 1994 Measure s 2(4). A statement in a document signed by the secretary or other duly authorised officer of the Church Commissioners that the commissioners have approved the terms of any lease granted under head (2A) which is specified in the document is conclusive evidence that those terms have been so approved: 1983 Measure s 44(7C); 1994 Measure s 2(4). As a condition of giving their approval to the terms of any lease under head (2A) the commissioners may require the trust to include in the lease such provisions, if any, as appear to them to be necessary to give effect to those terms: 1983 Measure s 44(7D); 1994 Measure s 2(4).

NOTE 8--In head (3), for 'such property' read 'property vested in the trust': 1983 Measure s 44(5)(c); 1994 Measure s 2(2). Add (3A) to assist, on payment of a fee, in the management of any place of Christian religious worship (not being a church or part of a church) which is vested in any body entrusted with functions similar to those of the trust: 1983 Measure s 44(5)(cc); 1994 Measure s 2(2).

NOTE 12--The trust must now give to the commissioners and to the advisory board such information and advice as they may require about (i) the trust's financial position generally, and (ii) the estimated cost of repairing and thereafter maintaining any church or part of a church which is proposed to be vested in the trust or which the commissioners consider is likely to be proposed for vesting in the trust: 1983 Measure s 44(9A); 1994 Measure s 2(5), (6). 1983 Measure s 44(9B), (9C) added: Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 7(a).

NOTE 13--The total amount of grants which may be made during the period 1 April 2009-31 March 2012 is £4,160,000: Payments to the Churches Conservation Trust Order 2008, SI 2008/1968. For 'five year period' read 'funding period' (see PARA 1123): 1983 Measure s 44(10); 1994 Measure s 2(7).

NOTE 14--The aggregate amount of grants which may be made during the period 1 April 2008-31 March 2011 is £9,485,418: Grants to the Churches Conservation Trust Order 2008, SI 2008/842.

NOTE 15--1983 Measure s 44(11) now as amended by 1994 Measure s 2(8).

TEXT AND NOTE 16--Replaced. The Churches Conservation Trust must transmit copies of the accounts and report to the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State must lay copies thereof before each House of Parliament and the Commissioners must transmit copies of the said accounts and report to the Secretary General of the General Synod and the Secretary General must lay copies thereof before the General Synod: Pastoral Measure 1983 s 44(12) (substituted by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 11).

1138. Committee appointed by Church Commissioners.

The Board of Governors of the Church Commissioners¹ must appoint a committee of the board, which may include persons who are not commissioners, for the purpose of exercising on the commissioners' behalf such functions as the board may assign to it relating to redundant buildings and the preparation of redundancy schemes².

¹ As to the Board of Governors, see PARA 368 ante.

² Pastoral Measure 1968, s 44 (1). The functions include those under s 43 (see PARA 1136 ante); s 44 (1). The Church Commissioners Measure 1947 applies to the committee as to other committees and the commissioners may pay a salary to one of the committee's members: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 44 (2).

1138 Committee appointed by Church Commissioners

TEXT AND NOTE 2--Words 'which may include persons who are not commissioners' repealed: Pastoral (Amendment) Measure 1982 s 32. Now commissioners must constitute a majority of the members of the committee but, subject to that, the committee may include persons who are not commissioners: Pastoral Measure 1983 s 43(1).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(4) PROPERTY BELONGING TO BENEFICES/(i) Acquisition of Residence and Glebe/1139. Meaning of 'glebe' and 'parsonage house'.

(4) PROPERTY BELONGING TO BENEFICES

(i) Acquisition of Residence and Glebe

1139. Meaning of 'glebe' and 'parsonage house'.

The glebe of a benefice¹ includes all land of any kind, houses or other buildings forming part of its endowments but does not include the parsonage house and grounds occupied with it². A parsonage house is a house which belongs to or is parcel of the parsonage, namely of the endowments of the benefice³.

The house and glebe are both comprehended under the word 'manse'⁴. The parsonage house⁵ and glebe are owned⁶ by the incumbent as a corporation sole for the benefit of himself⁷ and his successors in the incumbency, and he is entitled to use them for his own enjoyment or profit so far as that use is consistent with their due preservation for the use of his successors⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'benefice', see PARA 768 ante.

2 Cf. 2 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 297. 'Glebe land' includes any manor, land or tenement, forming the endowment or part of the endowment of a benefice: Glebe Lands Act 1888, s 12. A gift of land in trust to pay the income to an incumbent so long as no new pew rents are charged is not a gift of glebe: Re Randell, Randell v Dixon (1888) 57 LJ Ch 899. For the meaning of 'glebe building', see the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 31 (1); and PARA 1165 note 3 post.

3 'Parsonage' in legal parlance means the various properties which constitute the endowments of the benefice. A parsonage or rectory is a certain portion of land, tithes and offerings established by law for the maintenance of the minister having the cure of souls, within the parish where he is rector or patron, and properly comprehends the whole of the parish church with everything under its jurisdiction, its estates, tithes and all its produce, in other words the benefice: see Spelman's Glossary; Re Alms Corn Charity, Charity Comrs v Bode [1901] 2 Ch 750 at 758. For the meaning of 'parsonage house', see the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 31 (1), and PARA 1165 note 2 post.

4 2 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 297.

5 Where the Church Commissioners acquire or build a benefice house not within the parish, but so near as to be convenient and suitable for a residence, the house when approved by the bishop is to be deemed the house of residence: Pluralities Act 1838, s 34; Church Commissioners Measure 1947, s 18 (2).

6 The nature of the estate of the incumbent is described as a fee simple qualified: Co Litt 341.

7 Where in fixing a price for glebe land a sum has been allowed in respect of inconvenience or annoyance to the incumbent, it may be paid out to him: Re East Lincolnshire Rly Co, ex parte Rector of Little Steeping (1848) 5 Ry & Can Cas 207; Re Saunderton Glebe Lands, ex parte Rector of Saunderton [1903] 1 Ch 480; and see COMPULSORY ACQUISITION OF LAND vol 18 (2009) PARA 683.

8 Purchase money arising on the sale of part of the glebe under the Lands Clauses Acts may be paid out of court for application in keeping the house in repair: Ex parte Rector of Claypole (1873) LR 16 Eq 574; and see COMPULSORY ACQUISITION OF LAND vol 18 (2009) PARAS 669, 679. As to leasing, see PARA 1153 et seq post.

1139 Meaning of 'glebe' and 'parsonage house'

TEXT AND NOTES--Provision is made for the transfer of glebe land to diocesan boards of finance; see Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 s 15 (see PARA 1139A). The diocesan board of finance may require an incumbent or sequestrators to furnish information as to glebe land and certain leases: ss 16, 31. Each board must prepare a scheme for the management of glebe land: s 19(2)-(4). A scheme made under s 19 may provide for the setting up of a wholly owned subsidiary or subsidiaries of the diocesan board of finance: s 19A(1) (added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 5 para 4). Provision is also made for the transfer of certain parsonage land to the board. Where the board is of the opinion that any parsonage land belonging to a benefice and, in particular, a parsonage house or any excluded part of a parsonage house is not necessary for the convenient occupation of the incumbent or is not required as the residence house of the benefice it must so notify the parochial church council and the incumbent or any sequestrators concerned and, in the case of a benefice in respect of which a team ministry is established, every member of the team who may within one month following such notification, make written representations to the Commissioners with respect to the proposed transfer: 1976 Measure s 32(1) (s 32(1), (2) now s 32(1)-(2A), substituted by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 5 para 9(a), s 32(1), (2) amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 3 para 5). After considering any such representations the commissioners must notify board, the parochial church council and the incumbent or sequestrators and every member of the team ministry of their decision and reasons with respect to the representation: 1976 Measure s 32(2) (as so substituted and amended). If no such representations are made within the said period of one month or the commissioners decide that the proposed transfer should take place notwithstanding any representations, the bishop of the diocese concerned may by order under his seal provide for the transfer to the board on such date as may be specified in the order of the land in question: s 32(2A) (as so substituted).

'Parsonage land' means any of the following: (a) a parsonage house, (b) any excluded part of a parsonage house, (c) any building, part of a building or land which an incumbent has acquired or agreed to acquire as a parsonage house or for the site of such a house, (d) any building, part of a building or land vested in an incumbent (when the benefice is full), being a building or land which in opinion of the Diocesan Board of Finance should be retained for use as a parsonage house or as the site for one, (e) any parsonage house or part of one which ceases to be, or to be part of, such a house by virtue of a pastoral scheme or order and for which no provision for its transfer is made, (f) any parsonage house or part of one which has ceased to be, or to be part of, such a house otherwise than by virtue of a pastoral scheme or order and in relation to which the commissioners' consent for its sale under the Parsonages Measure 1938 has been given or is not required by virtue of the 1938 Measure s 1(3A): 1976 Measure s 45(1) (amended by Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2006 Sch 3 para 6(b)). An excluded part of a parsonage house is any part which by reason of the bishop's certificate under the 1938 Measure s 11, is to be deemed not to form part of it: 1976 Measure s 45(1).

NOTE 2--Definitions repealed: 1976 Measure Sch 8; Order of the Church Commissioners dated 11 August 1977.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(4) PROPERTY BELONGING TO BENEFICES/(i) Acquisition of Residence and Glebe/1139A. Transfer of glebe land.

1139A. Transfer of glebe land.

Any glebe land which immediately before 1 April 1978 is, or if the benefice were full would be, vested in right of his benefice in the incumbent of any benefice vests on that day in the diocesan board of finance without any conveyance or other assurance¹. A board may acquire land to be held as part of the diocesan glebe land², and may appropriate for use as such land any land vested in them³.

The diocesan glebe land is to be held, managed and dealt with by the board for the benefit of the diocesan stipends fund⁴.

A board may with the consent of the Church Commissioners sell, exchange, lease, mortgage or otherwise deal with any diocesan glebe land⁵. The proceeds of, or the capital money arising from, any sale, exchange or other dealing with diocesan glebe land, and any other capital payment received in respect of such land, must be paid to the board and allocated by the board to the capital account of the diocesan stipends fund⁶. All rents or other periodical payments in the nature of income received in respect of the diocesan glebe land must be paid to the board and allocated to the income account of the fund⁷.

Diocesan boards of finance must keep diocesan glebe land income and minerals accounts⁸ and must keep the commissioners informed of certain matters affecting diocesan glebe land⁹.

1 Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 s 15(1); Order of the Church Commissioners dated 11 August 1977. It is freed and discharged from any previously existing trusts and charges in favour of any other benefice and any previously existing charge to which s 37(3) (outstanding loans for the provision of parsonage houses, etc, to be secured on the parsonage house instead of the glebe) relates: s 15(1). In other respects it vests (a) subject to, and with the benefit of, any other previously existing trusts and charges, any previously existing tenancies and any covenants, conditions, agreements, easements and rights to which the land is subject and of which it has the benefit immediately before the above date, and (b) subject to all such rights in the nature of easements as are necessary for the reasonable enjoyment of any parsonage land belonging to the benefice or any church land, being rights which were formerly exercisable by the incumbent in right of his benefice: s 15(1). Rights referred to in (b), take effect as legal easements appurtenant to the land referred to: s 15(2). Rights in the nature of easements over parsonage land belonging to the benefice or any church land which are necessary for the reasonable enjoyment of land vested under s 15(1) in the board, being rights which were formerly exercisable by the incumbent in right of his benefice, also vest in the board: s 15(3).

Any dispute between a board and an incumbent or sequestrators is decided by the Church Commissioners: s 15(4), (5).

2 Ibid s 18(1) (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 5 para 3(a)).

3 1976 Measure s 18(2) (amended by the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 3(b)). For the consents required see the 1976 Measure s 18(2), (3).

4 Ibid s 19(1). Notwithstanding this provision, a board may, in the exercise of its powers under New Parishes Measure 1943 s 14, and with the Church Commissioners' consent, grant to the commissioners (i) any building on diocesan glebe land which consists of a church or part of a church or is fit to be used as one or to be converted into one, (ii) any such land as a site for a new church or for a church to be substituted for an existing one or for enlarging the site of an existing one, (iii) any such land for providing a new or extending an existing churchyard or burial ground, (iv) any such building or land for, or for the extension of, a house of residence for an incumbent, (v) any such land required for providing access to or improving the amenities of any such church, etc.: s 23(1). With the commissioners' consent a board may appropriate any such building or land for use as a church hall, etc: s 23(2), (3); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1983 s 1(3); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 Sch 3 para 14. A board may permit a person declared by the bishop to be engaged in the cure of souls within the diocese to reside in a dwelling house situated on the diocesan glebe land without payment of any rent: 1976 Measure s 24 (amended by the 1992 Measure Sch 3 para 15; and the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 3 para 3). 'Lay worker' means a person who has been admitted by a bishop as a lay worker of the Church of England and who has been licensed by a bishop to serve as such a worker: 1976 Measure s 45(1); 1992 Measure Sch 3 para 17.

5 1976 Measure s 20(1) (substituted by the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 5(a)). Where the amenities of any land will be affected by the proposed transaction and the board or the commissioners think it necessary to do so in the interest of safeguarding those amenities they may, notwithstanding anything in the 1976 Measure s 19(1), include or require to be included such terms safeguarding those amenities as, having regard to all the circumstances, they consider reasonable and proper: 1976 Measure s 20(1) (s 20(1) as so substituted). An authorisation may in certain circumstances be suspended (s 20(3) (amended by the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 5(c)) but such suspension may be cancelled in specified circumstances: 1976 Measure s 20(4). Any subsidiary of a board (see s 19A, PARA 1139) has, subject to the provisions of the scheme, the same powers and duties as the board with respect to holding, managing and dealing with such glebe land as may be specified in the scheme: s 19A(2) (added by the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 4). The consent of the commissioners is not required for any disposition of land other than any such disposition as is specified in the 1976 Measure Sch 3: s 20(1A) (s 20(1A), (2D) added by the 2005 Measure Sch 3 para 2). 1976 Measure Sch 3 has effected notwithstanding its repeal: 2005 Measure Sch 3 para 8. Consent is also not required for a disposition of land to a subsidiary of the board: 1976 Measure s 20(2) (s 20(2)-(2C) substituted by the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 5(b)). Consent is also not required where the proposed disposition is made to a person who is not a 'connected person' and certain requirements as to the obtaining of professional advice on the proposed disposition have been satisfied: see 1976 Measure s 20(2A)-(2C) (as so substituted). As to the meaning of 'connected person', see 1976 Measure s 20(12) (added by the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 5(k)). Consent is also not required in relation to a disposition giving effect to the entitlement a tenant of any diocesan glebe land to an interest in the land: see the 1976 Measure s 20(2D) (as so added).

Before a diocesan board of finance seeks the consent of the commissioners under the 1976 Measure s 20(1) to a transaction specified in Sch 3 (except any transaction to which s 20(2D) applies) it must notify (1) the incumbent, or if the benefice is vacant, (i) the priest-in-charge, in the event of a priest-in-charge being appointed for the benefice during a suspension period declared in respect of the benefice under the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 67 or (ii) the churchwardens, in any other case; and (2) the parochial church council of that parish, stating that representations may be made: 1976 Measure s 20(5) (amended by the 1992 Measure Sch 3 para 13; the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 5(d); and the 2005 Measure Sch 3 para 2). Where representations are made to the board under the 1976 Measure s 20(5), the board must forward a copy of the representations to the commissioners together with details of the proposed transaction and s 20(2A) does not apply to the transaction unless the commissioners, having considered the representations, direct that it does: s 20(6B) (added by the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 5(e); and amended by the 2005 Measure Sch 3 para 2).

Where a transaction is in respect of diocesan glebe land situated in the area of a benefice for which a team ministry is established, the 1976 Measure s 20(5) has effect in relation to every vicar in the team ministry and, in the case of a house occupied by a member of the team, in relation to that member as it has effect in relation to the incumbent of the benefice: s 20(6A) (added by Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 14). The bishop must also be notified in certain circumstances: 1976 Measure s 20(6) (amended by the 1992 Measure Sch 3 para 13). Before deciding whether to give their consent, the commissioners must consider any representations: 1976 Measure s 20(8) (s 20(8), (9) amended by the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 5(g), (h); and the 2005 Measure Sch 3 para 2). As a condition of consent they may require provisions to be included in the conveyance, etc: 1976 Measure s 20(9) (as so amended).

Where a board has sold, exchanged or leased any diocesan glebe land and the document concerned contains a restrictive covenant imposed for the benefit of any church land or parsonage land, that covenant is enforceable by the board as if it were the owner of the land: 1976 Measure s 22.

7 1976 Measure s 25(4) (s 25 as substituted: see NOTE 6).

8 Ibid s 26 (amended by the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 7, Sch 8 Pt II; and the 2005 Measure Sch 3 para 4).

9 1976 Measure s 27 (amended by the 2000 Measure Sch 5 para 8).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(4) PROPERTY BELONGING TO BENEFICES/(i) Acquisition of Residence and Glebe/1140. Provision of parsonage etc.

1140. Provision of parsonage etc.

Notwithstanding the rule that no church should be consecrated without the provision of a parsonage house and glebe¹, many of the clergy for want of proper habitations were compelled or induced to reside at a distance from their benefices², and to remedy this evil, as well as to provide for the acquisition of houses of residence where new parishes or ecclesiastical districts are formed, many facilities have been afforded by statute for the purpose of purchasing a house of residence, or purchasing a site and building a house of residence on it, or rebuilding or improving an existing house of residence. In addition to the facilities for acquiring sites already referred to in connection with the acquisition of sites for churches³, an incumbent or, during a vacancy, the bishop of the diocese, has power, with the consent of the Church Commissioners⁴, the parsonages board⁵, and (where the power is exercised by an incumbent) the bishop, to erect or purchase⁶ a house or purchase⁶ land for the site of a house or an orchard, garden and appurtenances or other land, such house, orchard, garden and appurtenances or any such land being respectively suitable for the residence and occupation of the incumbent⁷. Before exercising these powers of erecting or purchasing a house or purchasing land the incumbent or the bishop, as the case may be, must give the prescribed notice⁸ to the patron⁹ of the benefice and to the parochial church council¹⁰. The Church Commissioners must, before consenting to the exercise of the power, consider any objection raised within a period of twenty-one days commencing on the day after the notice is given, by the patron or council and, if satisfied that the objection ought not to prevent the exercise of this power, they must inform the objector of the reasons on which their conclusion is founded¹¹.

The total area of any land purchased, including the site of any house or other building, must not exceed 6 acres¹².

There is a similar power to improve any house erected or purchased under the foregoing power, any house acquired by way of exchange under the Parsonages Measure 1938 or any house forming part of the property of the benefice which it is proposed to constitute the residence house of the benefice¹³.

Where a house is erected, purchased, acquired by way of exchange or improved under the foregoing powers as the residence of an incumbent it is deemed and is taken to be such a residence as from the date on which the bishop so certifies¹⁴.

The parsonages board may advise the bishop that any of these powers should be exercised and, if requested by the incumbent and the bishop, or during a vacancy the bishop alone, may frame proposals for the exercise of any such powers¹⁵.

Land or buildings sold, purchased or exchanged under these powers are conveyed to the incumbent in his corporate capacity and in the case of a vacancy the conveyance is taken by the bishop in the name and on behalf of the incumbent in his corporate capacity¹⁶. The sealing of such a conveyance by the Church Commissioners is conclusive evidence that all requirements with respect to the transaction have been complied with¹⁷.

A house of residence may be provided by purchase or otherwise under a pastoral scheme or order¹⁸. A scheme of the diocesan synod may authorise the parsonages board to erect a parsonage house with the agreement of the persons concerned¹⁹.

(ii) Powers of Mortgaging

1146. Mortgage by incumbent.

An incumbent of a benefice¹ may borrow at interest on mortgage of the glebe and profits of his benefice in the prescribed form for all or any of the following purposes, namely (1) the erection or purchase of a house or the purchase of land for the site of a house, or an orchard, garden and appurtenances or other land, up to 6 acres; (2) improving² any house so erected or purchased or acquired by way of exchange; (3) dividing an existing house into two or more parts; (4) erecting, improving, enlarging or purchasing any house, cottage or other buildings or land belonging to or suitable for acquisition for the benefice; (5) the construction and improvement of the drainage of any such house, cottage, building or land and the provision and improvement of the supply of services to it; (6) the making up of roads and footpaths adjoining any property belonging to the benefice and the improvement of the drive, paths and gardens of the residence house of the benefice; (7) purchasing not more than 12 acres of land contiguous to or desirable to be used or occupied with the house of residence or glebe of the benefice; (9) building offices, stables, outbuildings or fences for the house of residence; (10) building, improving, enlarging or purchasing a farmhouse or farm buildings or labourers' dwelling houses belonging to or desirable to be acquired for a farm or land appertaining to the benefice; (11) paying compensation for the extinguishment of manorial incidents; and (12) paying an amount required for equality of exchange on the exchange of a parsonage house³.

The amount of the loan must normally be not less than £100 and not exceed three years' net income of the benefice⁴, but this restriction does not apply in the case of a loan made by the Church Commissioners⁵.

The incumbent⁶ must first submit a scheme and estimate to the bishop of the diocese and the patron of the benefice, and obtain their written consent to it⁷. The mortgage is to be for the term of thirty-five years, or until repayment of the principal sum secured with interest and incidental costs; and after the first year of the term the incumbent is to repay yearly one-thirtieth part of the principal sum with interest on it or on so much of it as remains unpaid⁸.

The Church Commissioners may lend money to incumbents for any of the aforementioned purposes⁹. Colleges and halls in the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and other corporate bodies possessing the patronage of benefices are also empowered to lend money to assist in any of the aforementioned purposes in respect of benefices in their patronage¹⁰.

The commissioners have power to postpone in whole or in part the repayment of any money advanced by them under any of the foregoing provisions, the payment of interest on it, or both such repayment or payment, for such periods and on such conditions as they may from time to time determine, and this power may be exercised at the time when the loan is made or at any time or times during its currency¹¹.

1 The incumbent of any benefice which has been augmented under the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840 cannot raise money by mortgage of his benefice for purchasing, building or improving a parsonage house without the consent of the Church Commissioners: Ecclesiastical Houses of Residence Act 1842, s 13; Church Commissioners Measure 1947, s 18 (2).

The first four Acts mentioned in this note (excluding the Glebe Exchange Act 1815) are principal Acts for the purposes of the Loans (Incumbents of Benefices) Amendment Act 1918 and are to be construed together as one Act with this Act: see s 1, Sch. 1. The Clergy Residences Repair Act 1776, s 14, has ceased to have effect in relation to persons within the jurisdiction under the Mental Health Act 1959, Part VIII (ss. 100-121): s 121, Sch. 5. 7 Clergy Residences Repair Act 1776, s 1. Loans for the purposes of the principal Acts mentioned in note 3 supra, made in accordance with the regulations contained in the Loans (Incumbents of Benefices) Amendment Act 1918, Sch. 2 (see PARA 1148 post), are as valid and effectual to all intents as if the parties to them had complied in all respects with the provisions contained in those Acts for obtaining, securing and expending loans (s. 2); the bishop and patron, as consenting parties, are precluded from themselves advancing money on the mortgage (Greenlaw v King (1840) 3 Beav 49; affd. (1841) 10 LJ Ch 129), but the incumbent may do so (Boyd v Barker (1859) 4 Drew 582). In practice, however, loans are hardly ever made by private individuals but in nearly all cases by the commissioners. The money can be borrowed on mortgage only to pay for future works and not to repay money already expended: Lidbetter v Hatch [1907] 1 Ch 404. It is essential that before any loan is obtained or any building is commenced application should be made to the commissioners, and that the necessary preliminaries shall have been completed in accordance with the instructions which will be given by them, and that the formal consent prepared by them shall have been duly executed.

If the site for building is not already part of the glebe, it must be secured to the benefice through the medium of the Church Commissioners³.

Under certain local and personal Acts constituting companies with power to advance money for the improvement of land, and under the Improvement of Land Act 1864, incumbents may create a terminable charge on the land of their benefices for securing the repayment of money borrowed for its improvement, but the patron of the benefice and the bishop of the diocese must give their written consent to every such improvement and charge¹. 1153. Powers of leasing before 1842.

After 1571 all leases and other assurances made or suffered by any parson, vicar or any other person having any spiritual or ecclesiastical living of ¹ any houses, land, tithes, tenements or other hereditaments being part of the possessions of any parsonage, vicarage or other spiritual promotion, other than a lease for twenty-one years, or three lives², at the accustomed yearly rent or more, are utterly void and of no effect³. Where a lease, though not made in accordance with the statutory provisions, can be regarded as voidable only and not as absolutely void, it may be good as against the grantor during his incumbency if he is a corporation sole⁴, or during the lifetime of the head if the grantor is a corporation aggregate⁵, and may be adopted by the grantor's successors⁶.

³ Ecclesiastical Leases Act 1571, s 2; Charities Act 1960, s 39, Sch. 5. This provision is not restricted to ecclesiastical property: Eton College v Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food [1964] Ch 274, [1962] 3 All ER 290. Nothing in the Act of 1571 operates to restrict the powers of leasing contained in the Universities and Colleges Estates Act 1925: Eton College v Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food supra. The Act of 1571 no longer applies to any body corporate in a cathedral church (Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 53, Sch. 1); nor does it now have effect in relation to any college or hall in any university (Universities and Colleges Estates Act 1964, s 1). A lease not within the provisions of the Ecclesiastical Leases Act 1571, s 2, is utterly void, and consequently the grantor's right to re-enter exists from the moment of the lease's execution, and where no rent is reserved time begins to run from that date under the Limitation Act 1939 (President and Governors of Magdalen Hospital v Knotts (1879) 4 App Cas 324, HL) but not if a rent, however small, were reserved so as to create a tenancy from year to year (see at 335, per Lord Selborne). A lease for years may bind a parson personally for so long as he continues parson, and if he voluntarily breaks the term by resigning he may be liable in damages: Price v Williams (1836) 1 M & W 6. The lease of a rectory for the term of a rector's incumbency, although not containing the statutory condition of avoidance, was not absolutely void but was good as between the rector and the lessee, and would only become void on the bishop ordering personal residence: Rickard v Graham [1910] 1 Ch 722.

1154. Leases under the Ecclesiastical Leases Act 1842.

Since 1842 it has been possible for any incumbent of an ecclesiastical benefice, with the consents of the bishop and patron¹, to let² any part of the glebe or other land of or belonging to the benefice³, with or without any farmhouses, cottages or other agricultural buildings on it, on lease at the best yearly rent reasonably obtainable without taking a fine, for farming purposes for a term of fourteen years, or on an improving lease for twenty years⁴, provided the parsonage house and 10 acres of land adjoining it are reserved, or if there are not 10 acres adjoining, then 10 acres, or as much, being less than 10 acres, as is within 5 miles of the parsonage or of the church where there is no parsonage⁵.

The lease must contain covenants given by the lessee to pay outgoings, not to assign or sublet without the consents of the bishop, patron and incumbent, to cultivate according to the most improved system of husbandry in the locality so far as that system is not inconsistent with any express stipulation in the lease, to keep all land and fixtures on it in good condition and repair, to insure all buildings against fire, and to lay out in reinstating those buildings any money received by virtue of such insurance; the lease must contain reservations of all timber, saplings and underwood and of all mines and minerals, but the lessor may covenant that the lessee may take brick, earth, stone, lime, rough timber or other materials for the erection or repair of buildings or gates or for other improvements; and the lease must contain a proviso for re-entry in the event of the lessee's default⁶. The lease must be reported on by a surveyor appointed by the bishop, patron and incumbent, who must provide by actual survey, or by copy from an existing map, a plan showing the land to be leased and the other land belonging to the benefice⁷. Where the patron is under incapacity or abroad, consent may be given on his behalf by the guardian, committee, or attorney as the case may be⁸, and when the patronage is in the Crown the consent may be testified by the First Lord of the Treasury if the benefice is above the yearly value of £20, or by the Lord Chancellor if it is not⁹. All the incumbent's documents relating to the lease are deposited in the diocesan registry¹⁰, and a written receipt of a counterpart or attested copy of the lease indorsed on the lease and signed by the lessor is conclusive evidence that the lease has been duly executed by him, and the execution of the lease by the bishop and patron is conclusive evidence that the land leased might properly be included and that the conditions as to rent and covenants have been complied with¹¹.

1 In the case of a perpetual curacy, where the patron is a vicar, the consent of the rector as patron paramount is also required: Doe d Brammall v Collinge (1849) 7 CB 939. As to perpetual curacies today, see PARA 771 ante.

3 This includes any land vested in any trustee for the benefit of any incumbent where at least three-fourths of the net income is payable to the incumbent (Ecclesiastical Lease Act 1842, s 13), but does not include any part of the churchyard (Rector and Churchwardens of St Gabriel, Fenchurch Street v City of London Real Property Co Ltd [1896] P 95).

1155. Leases under the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1842.

An incumbent¹ or other ecclesiastical corporation², with the consent of the Church Commissioners³ and of the patron⁴, may grant a building or repairing lease of any land or houses⁵, except any house of residence of any corporation sole or of any member of a corporation aggregate, and any offices, gardens, orchards or pleasure grounds convenient for actual occupation with it, and except any mines or easements the grant of which might be prejudicial to the enjoyment of that residence⁶, for not more than ninety-nine years, to any person willing to improve or repair existing houses, or to erect new houses on the land, or to annex any part of the land to buildings erected or to be erected on it⁷, and may grant a renewal of such a lease, so long as one-fourth part of the term remains unexpired⁸, and may grant a mining lease for any term not exceeding sixty years⁹.

A building or repairing lease so granted must reserve the best rent reasonably obtainable without taking a fine¹⁰, although a smaller rent may be reserved for the first six years¹¹, and it must contain covenants for erecting or rebuilding or repairing buildings on the land, for keeping in repair and insuring against fire buildings erected or to be erected pursuant to the lease, and for laying out any money received under such insurance in reinstating buildings; and the lease must also contain a proviso for re-entry in the event of the lessee's default¹². The incumbent or other ecclesiastical corporation may, with the same consents, appropriate any part of the land which might be leased as aforesaid for ways, yards or gardens to the buildings erected or to be erected on the land, or for yards or places necessary or convenient for carrying on any manufacture or trade, or for streets, squares, sewers or otherwise for the general improvement of the estate or the accommodation of the occupiers¹³. 1156. Leases under the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1858.

The incumbent or other ecclesiastical corporation¹ may also, with the same consents² as are referred to in the previous paragraph, in cases where it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the Church Commissioners³ that it will be to the permanent advantage of the estate or endowments belonging to the corporation, lease in any manner any part of the property authorised to be leased by the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1842⁴, with or without a premium and upon any terms which the commissioners by an order under their seal approve as proper and advisable in the circumstances of the case⁵. Any money paid by way of premiums on the granting of any such lease, and all rents, royalties and other reservations reserved or made payable by any such lease of any mines, minerals, quarries or beds must be paid to the commissioners⁶; and such money, or the sums appropriated to the benefice in place of such money⁷ must be laid out by the commissioners at such times as they think proper in the purchase of other property to be held by the corporation on whose behalf the money has been received and, pending such purchase, must be invested in public stocks or funds and the dividends paid to the person to whom the rents and profits of such property would go⁸.

No lease or any land purchased or acquired, or in which a lessee's estate or interest is purchased or acquired by any ecclesiastical corporation under that Act, must be made or granted otherwise than from year to year, or for a term of years in possession not exceeding fourteen years, at the best rent reasonably obtainable without fine except under the express power contained in that Act or in the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1842, and the lessee must not be made dispunishable for waste or exempted from liability for waste: Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1858, s 9. Incidental powers as to the making and variation of contracts, granting preliminary licences and as to the costs of leases, are contained in ss 4 and 5; and by s 12 the provisions of the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1842 are incorporated so far as applicable. 1157. Lease of parsonage house.

Neither the Ecclesiastical Leases Act 1842, nor the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts¹ authorise a lease of a parsonage house, or a house of residence or the pleasure grounds held with it². An incumbent has, in fact, no power to grant a lease of a parsonage house for a period exceeding his incumbency, and any tenancy granted by him during his incumbency must contain a condition for avoiding the tenancy upon a copy of an order of the bishop requiring him to reside in the parsonage house being served on the occupier or left at the house³. Similarly a tenancy of a parsonage house granted by sequestrators⁴ must contain a condition providing for the termination of the tenancy six weeks after the determination of the sequestration during which the tenancy was granted⁵.

The bishop may, with the Church Commissioners' consent, authorise sequestrators⁶ to grant a lease or tenancy of the parsonage house for such period as the bishop may authorise⁷.

The letting of a parsonage house in these ways does not bring the house within the scope of the Rent Act 1968⁸, and the purpose for which possession is sought to be regained is not material⁹.

1157 Lease of parsonage house

TEXT--Neither the incumbent nor any sequestrators may grant a lease of any excluded part of a parsonage house belonging to the benefice to any person on or after 1 April 1978: Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 s 29; Order of the Church Commissioners dated 11 August 1977. 'Excluded part' means any part which by reason of a certificate of the bishop under Parsonages Measure 1938 s 11, is deemed not to form part of the house: 1976 Measure s 45(1). A lease granted in contravention is void: s 29.

Where any excluded part of a parsonage house is the subject of a lease the incumbent must within 7 days after receiving any rent pay it to the diocesan board of finance: Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 s 30(1), (2). Any sum paid to the board is deemed to be income from diocesan glebe land and not part of the incumbent's income: s 30(3). The board may require the incumbent to take all necessary steps to enforce any lessee's covenant and may itself take proceedings if he fails to do so: s 30(4)-(6). The board must defray the incumbent's expenses of fulfilling obligations under the lease and of meeting expenses of maintenance, etc: s 30(7), (8). (iv) Powers of Sale, Exchange, Partition and Demolition

An incumbent or other ecclesiastical corporation¹ may, with the same consents as are required in the case of leases², in cases where it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the Church Commissioners³ that it will be to the permanent advantage of the estate or the endowments belonging to the corporation, sell, convey in exchange or by way of partition⁴ or otherwise dispose of all or any part of the land, houses, mines, minerals or other property of or belonging to the incumbent or corporation (including glebe land⁵ but not the parsonage house, or its outbuildings, garden or other appurtenances)⁶, for such consideration in money, land or otherwise as the commissioners, by order under their seal, approve as reasonable and proper, but no sale by an incumbent can be so authorised until one month's notice⁷ has been given to the bishop of the diocese⁸. The power of sale includes power to release rentcharges, rent or other periodical sums forming part of the endowments of the ecclesiastical corporation or benefice⁹.

The assurance giving effect to any sale, exchange or release¹⁰ of any property of a benefice made under these powers (unless therein otherwise expressly provided) operates to discharge the property so disposed of from any mortgage or charge in favour of the commissioners, from any annual or other periodical sum payable to the incumbent of any other benefice or to any other ecclesiastical corporation, and from any other charge or incumbrance to the discharge of which the person entitled to release or discharge the same has given his consent in writing¹¹; and any such mortgages, charges or incumbrances become charged on the purchase money or other consideration given for the sale, exchange or release in like manner and as nearly as the circumstances permit as the property disposed of was subject to, but not so as to prevent or prejudice the exercise of any powers conferred on the commissioners¹² in respect of the improved income of the benefice¹³.

4 Leaseholds may be partitioned even where the court would refuse to make partition: North v Guinan (1829) Beat 342.

5 It is understood that almost all sales of glebe land are now made under these provisions rather than under the Glebe Lands Act 1888.

6 The Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1858 only applies to such property as was authorised to be leased under the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1842 (see the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1858, s 1), and by the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1842, s 9, the parsonage house and garden etc. are excluded. For a form of conveyance under the Act of 1858, see Forms and Precedents.

7 By the Glebe Lands Act 1888, s 11, such notice to the bishop of the diocese as may be prescribed for the purposes of that Act is substituted for the period of three months' notice required to be given to the bishop under the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act 1858, s 1. The notice is now limited to one month, and is issued from the commissioners' office.

8 Ibid s 1 proviso. Where the sale was to trustees of a settlement and the purchase was not authorised by the trust for investment, it was held that the commissioners had no remedy against the owners of the settled estates for specific performance: Ecclesiastical Comrs v Pinney [1900] 2 Ch 736, CA. As to the exercise of powers under the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts in cases of vacancy of a benefice or a see, see PARA 1155 note 1 ante. As to sales under the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 17, and under other enactments, see PARAS 1110, 1111 ante.

9 Ecclesiastical Commissioners (Powers) Measure 1936, s 6 (1). For the purpose of the release of rentcharges and other periodical sums the corporation or incumbents have power to agree with the owners of any land or other property charged with the rentcharges or other sums for any apportionment necessary or proper for giving full effect to the agreement for release (s. 6 (1)); but the same consents and notices are required for the apportionments as for sales (s. 6 (1) proviso). Section 6 (1) does not apply to tithe rentcharges, corn rent moduses or other sums payable in lieu of tithes: s 6 (2).

10 See ibid s 7 (2).

11 This consent may be given either generally or in relation to any specific transaction by a document signed by the person entitled and approved by the commissioners under their seal; and a statement to the effect that the consent has been given contained in any deed of assurance of the property disposed of which is sealed by them is conclusive evidence of the facts so stated in favour of any person claiming under the assurance: ibid s 7 (3) (c).

12 Ie under the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts (see PARA 1157 note 1 ante) or the Ecclesiastical Commissioners (Powers) Measure 1936.

All money paid on any sale, exchange or partition, except where the sale is in consideration of a rentcharge¹, is to be paid to the Church Commissioners². The receipt of the commissioners' treasurer is a good and sufficient discharge for the consideration of the property sold, and the purchaser is not bound to see to the application of the consideration paid³. The purchase money or the sums appropriated to the benefice in place of the purchase money⁴ must be reinvested by the commissioners at such times as they think proper in land convenient to be held by the corporation on whose behalf the money was received, and until so reinvested must be invested in public stocks or funds, and the dividends paid to the person to whom the rents and profits of the property to be purchased would go⁵.

If the incumbent so requests, the whole or any part of the sum appropriated in place of the consideration money arising from a transaction⁶ may be applied in redeeming any annual or other periodical sums charged in perpetuity on the endowments of the benefice, or on any part of those endowments, including the parsonage house, or in defraying the cost of improvements to the parsonage house, glebe or glebe buildings⁷, or in providing a new parsonage house, new glebe buildings, purchasing sites for those houses or buildings or in rebuilding or reconstructing existing houses or buildings⁸. These powers of application must only be exercised if the commissioners consider the expenditure will be of permanent advantage to the benefice and the consent of the patron or patrons, whose consent is required to a sale, must be obtained⁹.

1160. Alternative method of sale of glebe land.

If he is desirous of selling any of the glebe except the parsonage house and any land appurtenant to it¹, the incumbent may apply to the Secretary of State² for his approval of the proposed sale, but before so doing he must give notice to the bishop of the diocese and to the patron of the living³, and also to the parishioners and to the clerk of the local authority and the parish council⁴. If the land is subject to any mortgage or other debt, notice in the prescribed form must also be given to the mortgagee or other creditor⁵. After the notices have been given to the bishop and the patron the incumbent may apply to the Secretary of State to approve the sale⁶, and if the Secretary of State is satisfied of the prima facie expediency of the proposed sale, the land must be valued unless he otherwise directs⁷.

If the Secretary of State is then satisfied that the application has been duly made by an incumbent authorised to apply, that the prescribed notice has been given to the bishop and patron, that an objection to the sale by either has not been made, or if made ought not to prevail, and that the sale will be for the permanent benefit of the benefice, he may approve the sale subject to the provisions of the Glebe Lands Act 1888⁸, but he may not approve any sale of land subject to a lease originally created for a term exceeding twenty-one years or let for any term where, through the rent reserved being less than two-thirds of the value or for any other reason, the incumbent is not in possession of the full rents and profits, or the sale of mines or minerals which are or appear likely to become of considerable value⁹.

The incumbent may also sell glebe land in consideration of a rentcharge¹⁰.

1 This exception includes the outbuildings, garden or other appurtenances of the parsonage house, or such part of the glebe as the Secretary of State considers to be necessary for the convenient enjoyment of that house: Glebe Lands Act 1888, ss 2, 3 (1); Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, S.R. & O. 1927 No. 478, r 2; and see note 9 infra.

3 Glebe Lands Act 1888, s 2; Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, r 1. The notices must be in the forms in the Schedule to the rules, with map annexed, and must contain such particulars of the objects and advantages of the proposed sale, and of the situation of the land, as will enable the bishop and patron to judge whether they ought to object: r 1. If the patron is under disability the notice must be given to the guardian or committee: r 1. It was held in a case under a private Act, which gave trustees the right of presentation during a minority, that this did not constitute them patrons for the purpose of consenting to a sale of glebe, and that the guardian was the proper person to consent: Leigh v Leigh [1902] 1 Ch 400. For other special provisions relating to patronage, see the Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, r 1. The manner of serving notices is prescribed by r 1.

4 Glebe Lands Act 1888, s 8 (2); Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, r 1. The notice to the parishioners must be posted on the notice board of the parish church, at the post office and other usual places on three successive Sundays, and if the land is in another parish notice must be given in both places: r 1.

5 Glebe Lands Act 1888, s 6 (2); Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, r 1. For the prescribed form of notice, see Schedule, Form 3.

6 Ibid r 3. For the mode of application and the information to be given by the incumbent, see rr 3, 4, Schedule, Forms 5, 6 (amended by S.I. 1951 No. 1451). The incumbent must satisfy the Secretary of State that the notices have been duly given: r 1.

7 Ibid r 7. The Secretary of State selects the valuer and gives him the necessary instructions, but the valuer's charges are repayable by the incumbent if no sale takes place and, if the Secretary of State thinks it desirable, he may require the incumbent to deposit a sum to defray the valuation cost: r 7.

8 See the Glebe Lands Act 1888, s 3 (1). If a bishop or patron has objected, the Secretary of State must inform the person objecting, in writing, of his reasons for being so satisfied: s 3 (2). Notice must also have been given to the parishioners and may have been required to have been given to mortgagees or creditors: see note 5 supra. As to objections by mortgagees or creditors and provision for securing their rights, see PARA 1161 note 3 post.

9 Ibid s 5 (2). By the Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, r 2, the incumbent has no power to sell this land, the sale of which the Secretary of State cannot approve. Under the Glebe Lands Act 1888, s 8 (1), the Secretary of State may require as a condition for giving his approval that the land or some part of it is offered in small parcels for sale or to the local authority for allotments unless the price will thereby be diminished; see also the Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, r 8.

10 Law of Property Act 1922, s 43; Law of Property (Amendment) Act 1926, ss 7, 8 (2), Schedule. The repeal of the former provision by the Settled Land Act 1925 is subject to a saving as to glebe land: s 119, Sch. 5. The consideration may consist either wholly or partially of a perpetual rent or a terminable rent consisting of principal and interest combined, and the conveyance must distinguish the part of the terminable annuity attributable to the principal and that attributable to the interest: see the Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, r 6 (amended by S.I. 1951 No. 1451).

1161. Application of proceeds of sale.

Where the Secretary of State has approved the sale¹ the incumbent may sell the land² at the best price that can reasonably be obtained subject to the conditions required by the Secretary of State and to the provisions of the Glebe Lands Act 1888³. The purchase money is payable to the Secretary of State, whose receipt in the prescribed form is a sufficient discharge to the purchaser⁴.

After payment of the expenses of and incident to the sale the residue of the purchase money is payable by the Secretary of State to the Church Commissioners⁵. Subject to the satisfaction of any mortgage or charge on it, money so received is held by the commissioners as part of their general fund free from any trust in favour of the benefice, but a sum of money equal to the money so held by them is appropriated to the benefice⁶. Where however the residue so transferred is subject to an undischarged mortgage or debt⁷ which cannot be fully satisfied as already mentioned, it is held by the commissioners on a special trust⁸. The money appropriated to the benefice may be applied in redeeming sums charged on the endowments of the benefice or in defraying the costs of improvements in the same manner as money appropriated following a transaction under the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts⁹ or, on the request of the incumbent, in providing a new parsonage house or glebe buildings, purchasing sites for those houses or buildings or in rebuilding or reconstructing an existing parsonage or glebe buildings¹⁰.

1 The Secretary of State's approval is signified in the manner prescribed by the Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, S.R. & O. 1927 No. 478, Schedule, Form 7, and is conclusive evidence that the requirements of the Glebe Lands Act 1888 with respect to the sale have been complied with: s 8 (3). As to the Secretary of State, see PARA 1160 note 2 ante.

2 For a form of conveyance, see Forms and Precedents.

3 See the Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, r 10. Even if land is vested in the incumbent 'and his successors', this does not constitute a trust for 'persons by way of succession' so as to make it a settlement within the meaning of the Settled Land Act 1925, and consequently the incumbent does not have the powers of a tenant for life under that Act (Ex parte Vicar of Castle Bytham, ex parte Midland Rly Co [1895] 1 Ch 348; approved in Re Bishop of Bath and Wells [1899] 2 Ch 138), but the Glebe Lands Act 1888, s 8 (4), expressly provides that in effecting the sale the incumbent has as far as circumstances admit powers similar to those of a tenant for life (as to which see SETTLEMENTS, and may enter into a contract for the sale as a tenant for life may. No material expense should be incurred until the Secretary of State has decided that the sale is expedient: Sale of Glebe Land Rules 1927, r 4. The prescribed notice of the proposal to sell having been given to mortgagees and creditors, any mortgagee or creditor may within one month (r. 1) object on the ground that his security will be damaged, and the Secretary of State may make provisions for securing his rights, or if satisfied that he will not be damaged may approve the sale: Glebe Lands Act 1888, s 6 (2). Where a mortgage debt is repayable by annual instalments or the land is subject to any permanent annual charge in favour of another benefice, these become payable by the incumbent out of the interest of the purchase money, and the Secretary of State may make any provisions for preventing prejudice to the future interest of the benefice, which will be binding on the incumbent for the time being, and the Church Commissioners may set apart an adequate part of the security for the purpose of meeting any such permanent annual charge: Glebe Lands Act 188 ss 6 (2) proviso, 7; Church Commissioners Measure 1947, ss 2, 18 (2).

1162. Sale and exchange of parsonage houses.

Where the residence house, outbuildings, gardens, orchard and appurtenances belonging to a benefice are inconveniently situated or too large, or where for other good and sufficient reason it is thought advisable to sell and dispose of the property or part of it, the incumbent of the benefice or, during a vacancy, the bishop has power, after giving the prescribed notices¹, and with the consent of the Church Commissioners², the parsonages board³ and the bishop (unless he is exercising the power), and, where the property is held under a grant made by or on behalf of the Crown, the Crown Estates Commissioners⁴, to sell⁵ the parsonage house with any contiguous land, not exceeding in all 12 acres, whether or not the parsonage house has ceased to be the residence house of the benefice⁶. Where this power of sale exists the incumbent or the bishop, as the case may be, has power to exchange the residence house for any other house⁷ suitable for the residence of the incumbent, and to pay or receive money for equality of exchange⁸.

On the sale or exchange any hereditament, easement, right or privilege of any kind may be excepted, reserved or granted over or in relation to any land retained for the benefice or disposed of, and any restriction on building or the user of land or with respect to any other thing may be imposed, so far as the law permits⁹.

The money arising from a sale or exchange is payable to the commissioners and their treasurer's receipt is a sufficient discharge to the purchaser¹⁰. For fourteen days after service of the prescribed notice on him the patron has a right of pre-emption over property which it is proposed to sell under this power¹¹. The right is exercisable by written notice to the parsonages board¹², which operates as a contract between the incumbent (or, during the vacancy, the bishop) and the patron for the sale of the property to the patron at a price agreed upon between the patron and the board or by a valuer appointed at the request of the board by the president for the time being of the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors and subject to such reservations, restrictions and conditions as the board may require to be imposed¹³.

If the bishop and the parsonages board are satisfied that the price is reasonably satisfactory and the patron and parochial church council do not object, the commissioners are empowered to purchase any property proposed to be sold under the Parsonages Measure 1938¹⁴.

6 Ibid s 1. For forms, see Forms and Precedents. For the general provisions of the Parsonages Measure 1938, see PARAS 1140, 1141 ante. The power of sale under s 1 is not exercisable over or in respect of property vested in trustees (s. 1 (3) (iv)); but the power continues to be exercisable in respect of a house which has ceased to Interim income arising on the money may be added to the capital or paid to the incumbent: see the Parsonages Measure 1938, s 6; Church Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1960, s 4 (1), Schedule. If it is proposed to apply the money in the erection or purchase of a new parsonage house or in the purchase of land for it, or in improving a house so erected or purchased or acquired by way of exchange, or in dividing, enlarging or improving a parsonage house, notice must be given by the commissioners to the patron and to the parochial church council and any representations made by them must be considered: Parsonages Measure 1938, s 7.

UPDATE

1162 Sale and exchange of parsonage houses

TEXT AND NOTES--These provisions apply to any excluded part of a parsonage house so long as that part is or would be vested in the incumbent: Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 s 34. An incumbent or bishop proposing to exercise any of the powers conferred on him by the 1938 Measure s 1 in respect of the residence house of a benefice for which a team ministry is established must, if the house is or is to be occupied by the incumbent, (1) keep every member of the team informed of matters arising from the proposal, (2) afford every member of the team an opportunity to express views thereon before taking any action to implement the proposal, and (3) have regard to those views before taking any such action: ibid s 3(4), added by Team and Group Ministries Measure 1995 s 8(4).

The parsonages board (or the diocesan board of finance if designated as the parsonages board under the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972 s 1(1) (see PARA 520; and see the 1938 Measure s 20 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 11)) is now required to provide the Church Commissioners with such information as they may require concerning transactions affecting property under the Parsonages Measure 1938: s 5(4) (added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 7). As from a day to be appointed 1938 Measure s 5 substituted: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2006 Sch 1 para 5.

TEXT AND NOTE 2--The consent of the Church Commissioners is not required where (1) the property is not being sold to or exchanged with the incumbent, the bishop, any member, officer, agent or employee of the parochial church council of any parish within the benefice in question or of the diocesan board of finance concerned or the spouse or civil partner, or any child, parent, grandparent, brother or sister of any such person (1938 Measure s 1(3A), (6) (s 1(3A), (3B) added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 3(b); 1938 Measure s 1(6) amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 3(d); the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 1 para 2; SI 2005/3129); (2) the incumbent or bishop has obtained a surveyor's report, has advertised the proposed sale or exchange in accordance with the surveyor's advice, and is satisfied that the terms of the sale or exchange are the best that could reasonably be obtained for the benefice (1938 Measure s 1(3B), (6) (s 1(3B) as so added; s 1(6) as amended)). A statement in a document giving effect to any transaction under the 1938 Measure that the consent of the commissioners or the board or both to the terms of the transaction is not required is, if the document is sealed with the seal of the board or is signed on behalf of the board by a person duly authorised by the board, conclusive evidence of that fact: s 9(2B) (added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 9(b)). Where any transaction under the 1938 Measure affecting property does not contain a statement under s 9(2A) or (2B) then in favour of a person who, whether under the transaction or afterwards, in good faith acquires an interest in the property for money or money's worth the disposition effected by the transaction is valid whether or not any consent of the commissioners or the board which was required to the transaction has been given: s 9(2C) (added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 1 para 5). The 'board' is the parsonages board (or the diocesan board of finance if designated as the parsonages board under the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972 s 1(1) (see PARA 520; and see the 1938 Measure s 20 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 11)).

As from a day to be appointed 1938 Measure s 3(1) further amended: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2006 Sch 1 para 4.

NOTE 5--As to circumstances where the Church Commissioners' consent is not required to the exercise of the power under the 1938 Measure s 1((1)(ii), see s 1(3AA) (added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 1 para 2).

NOTE 6--The power also continues to be exercisable in respect of any property belonging to a benefice, being property which consists of an outbuilding, garden or orchard of a house which has been sold or otherwise disposed of under the 1938 Measure, and any land contiguous to, or appurtenances enjoyed with, such a house or any part of such property: s 1(4); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1983 s 4. As from a day to be appointed 1938 Measure s 1(4) further amended: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2006 Sch 1 para 2.

NOTE 8--SR & O 1938/636 replaced by the Parsonages Measure Rules 2000, SI 2000/3171 (amended by SI 2007/862).

TEXT AND NOTE 10--The money is now payable to the parsonages board (or the diocesan board of finance if designated as the parsonages board under the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972 s 1(1) (see PARA 520; and see the 1938 Measure s 20 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 11)) in the first instance, whose receipt is a sufficient discharge to the purchaser, but thereafter the money is to be transferred to the commissioners: Parsonages Measure 1938 s 1(5) (substituted by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 3). As from a day to be appointed 1938 Measure s 1(5) further amended: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2006 Sch 1 para 3.

NOTE 10--The commissioners no longer have power to apply the money arising on a sale or exchange in erecting or improving houses or farm buildings belonging to the benefice: Parsonages Measure 1938 s 5(1) amended: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 7(a), Sch 8 Pt II. 1938 Measure ss 1(1A)(iii), 2(1)(iv) repealed: Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 Sch 8. As from a day to be appointed 1938 Measure s 5 substituted, s 6 further amended: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2006 Sch 1 paras 5, 6.

1938 Measure s 7 (as substituted by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 8; and amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 1 para 4), now requires notice to be given by the parsonages board (or by the diocesan board of finance if designated as the parsonages board under the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972 s 1(1) (see PARA 520; and see the 1938 Measure s 20 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 1 para 11)) to the registered patron (as defined in the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 39(1): see PARA 818A.1), to the parochial church councils of all parishes within the benefice and to the Church Commissioners, and requiring the board to forward to the commissioners for consideration any representations made by a patron or council within the period specified in the notice. As from a day to be appointed 1938 Measure s 7 further amended: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2006 Sch 1 para 7.

1164. The Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Measures.

The statutory provisions relating to dilapidations and the repair of benefice buildings were formerly contained in the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Measures 1923 to 1951¹. These Measures, save for one section relating to chancel repairs², are now repealed³, although there are transitional provisions⁴. Under the Measures, the powers and duties in respect of dilapidations and repairs were in diocesan dilapidations boards (whose functions are now transferred to parsonages boards) and there are provisions for their dissolution⁵.

As to the transfer of functions from a diocesan dilapidations board to a parsonages board and the continuing in office of surveyors, see Sch. 1 paras 1, 2 (2), and PARA 520 ante. The remaining transitional provisions include those relating to the execution of repairs under orders in force on the day appointed for the coming into operation of this Measure in any diocese and the payment of sums due to the Church Commissioners on the appointed day: see Sch. 1 para 2 (1), (3)-(6).

1165. The Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972.

The statutory provisions relating to repairs¹ to parsonage houses² and glebe buildings³ are now contained in the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972⁴.

The Measure provides for the appointment or designation in every diocese of a parsonages board⁵ and the appointment of diocesan surveyors⁶. As soon as a parsonages board is appointed or designated for a diocese, the functions of the diocesan dilapidations board for that diocese are exercisable by the parsonages board so appointed or designated⁷.

1 'Repairs' in relation to a parsonage house means such works of repair and replacement as are needed (1) to keep in repair the structure and exterior of the buildings of the parsonage house, including doors, windows, drains, gutters and external pipes (Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, ss 2 (1) (a), 31 (1)), (2) to keep in repair all its walls, fences, gates, drives and drains, other than those which some person other than the incumbent is wholly liable to repair (s. 2 (1) (b)), and (3) to keep in repair and proper working order the installations in that house for water, gas and electricity supply, for space and water heating and for sanitation, including basins, sinks, baths and other sanitary conveniences, and any other fixtures and fittings if they belong to the benefice but not otherwise (s. 2 (1) (c)). 'Repairs' includes works of interior decoration necessitated in consequence of such work: s 2 (1). 'Building' includes part of a building, and 'benefice' means the office of rector or vicar of a parish or parishes, with cure of souls, but not the office of vicar in a team ministry: s 31 (1).

2 'Parsonage house' means a residence vested in the incumbent of a benefice, being his official residence or the designated residence of a vicar in a team ministry established for the benefice under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 19 (see PARA 870 ante) except a residence held under a lease which makes the landlord wholly or mainly responsible for the repairs, and includes the buildings, gardens, orchards, paddock, walls, fences and appurtenances necessary for the convenient occupation of the residence: Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 31 (1). The separate letting of part of the residence is not deemed to exclude it from the residence unless it is excluded by a bishop's certificate under the Parsonages Measure 1938, s 11 (see PARA 1140 ante): Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 31 (1).

3 'Glebe building' means any building, wall, fence or work which the incumbent of a benefice is bound by virtue of his office to maintain in repair, not being a parsonage house or comprised in a parsonage house: ibid s 31 (1). The provisions of this Measure do not apply to glebe buildings leased by the incumbent for a term of years binding on his successors, except so far as the lessee is not liable under the lease to repair or insure the buildings, but the diocesan surveyor has power of inspection: s 22 (1). As to enforcing the lessee's obligations, see PARA 1174 post.

4 The Measure was to come into operation on a day to be appointed by the Church Commissioners; different days might be appointed for different dioceses (ibid s 32 (1)), but the appointment for every diocese was not to be later than 1st April 1974 (s. 32 (1) proviso). The Measure extends to the whole of the provinces of Canterbury and York, except the Channel Islands and the diocese of Sodor and Man, but may be applied to the Channel Islands in accordance with the Channel Islands (Church Legislation) Measures 1931 and 1957: Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 36 (2). See also PARA 402 ante. The provisions of this Measure do not authorise the carrying out of any works otherwise than in accordance with the Town and Country Planning Acts: Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 33. Nor does it apply to glebe land while the land is leased to a smallholdings authority or the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for the purposes of smallholdings: Agriculture Act 1970, s 61 (4) (a).

5 Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 1 (1). If a parsonages board is not appointed the diocesan board of finance may be designated for the purpose: s 1 (1). The appointment or designation is by scheme of the diocesan synod; and references in the Measure to 'the board' are references to the parsonages board or as the case may be the diocesan board of finance for the diocese concerned: s 1 (1). As to the establishment of parsonages boards, see PARA 520 ante.

6 Ibid s 1 (2). See PARA 520 ante.

1166. Incumbent's obligations and powers.

The incumbent¹ has a duty to take proper care of a parsonage house², being a duty equivalent to that of a tenant to use premises in a tenant-like manner³. The incumbent must notify the board⁴ of any repairs⁵ to a parsonage house appearing to him to be necessary and, in the case of repairs urgently required for reasons of safety or to prevent further damage or deterioration or to meet a liability to other persons, must do so without delay⁶. The incumbent may carry out as agent of the board such repairs to a parsonage house as the board may generally or specially authorise⁷.

An incumbent must not make additions or alterations to the buildings of a parsonage house or any glebe buildings without the consent of the board and the patron⁸. If the incumbent does so, the board may by notice require him or his personal representative to restore the buildings to the condition in which they were before⁹. If the board intends to refuse its consent it must give notice to the incumbent of its intention¹⁰. A notice from the board informing the incumbent of its intention or requiring him to restore buildings must inform him of his right to make representations¹¹.

The incumbent must keep the board informed of matters affecting buildings and land belonging to the benefice, other than churches¹².

1 In applying the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972 to a parsonage house which is the residence of a vicar in a team ministry, references to the incumbent include the vicar as well as the incumbent (s. 31 (2)); but there are exceptions where the reference is to the incumbent only (s. 31 (2) proviso). During a vacancy in a benefice, the provisions of the Measure (except s 13 (1), (4)), apply to that benefice as if for the references to the incumbent there were substituted references to the sequestrators or, if the benefice is not under sequestration, to the bishop of the diocese: s 26 (1). Any liability under s 26 (1) of the sequestrators or the bishop must be discharged out of the income of the benefice: s 26 (1) proviso. In s 26 (1), references to the incumbent do not include a vicar in a team ministry: s 31 (2) proviso. For the meaning of 'benefice', see PARA 1165 note 1 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'parsonage house', see PARA 1165 note 2 ante.

3 Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 13 (1). This statutory duty is not imposed on a vicar in a team ministry: s 31 (2) proviso. The duties of the board under the Measure in respect of repairs to parsonage houses does not affect any liability of an incumbent as owner, tenant or occupier of a parsonage house to persons other than the board, but the board must indemnify the incumbent against such liability arising out of the execution of repairs or a failure to execute repairs to a parsonage house if it is not covered by insurance effected by the board under s 12 (see PARA 1182 post): s 13 (2). 1166 Incumbent's obligations and powers

NOTE 1--The measure now applies to a team vicar's house as it applies to a parsonage house with the omission of references to the registered patron and to a previous incumbent, and (subject to certain modifications) with the substitution, for references to the incumbent, of references to the diocesan board of finance in which the house is vested and the vicar: 1972 Measure s 31(2) (as substituted by Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 Sch 5 para 4(6); and amended by Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2006 s 9).

Section 26(1) proviso amended: Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 Sch 5 para 4(4).

TEXT AND NOTE 8--An incumbent must not make additions or alterations to the buildings of a parsonage house until after he has consulted the registered patron and, in the case of a parsonage house which is occupied by a person who is a member of the team in a team ministry established by a pastoral scheme under the Pastoral Measure 1983 and not by the incumbent, that person also, and obtained the consent of the board: 1972 Measure s 21(1), (4) (s 21(1) amended by the Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 Sch 8; the Patronage (Benefices) Measure 1986 s 34(6), Sch 4 para 15; and the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 4 para 10; 1972 Measure s 21(4) added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 4 para 10). The board¹ must cause an inspection to be made by the diocesan surveyor of all the buildings of each benefice² in the diocese within an initial period of five years³. Subsequent inspections must be made periodically at intervals not exceeding, in the case of any benefice, five years from the last inspection⁴. The board must cause a new building of a benefice to be inspected as soon as possible after it is provided and thereafter at intervals not exceeding five years⁵.

A diocesan synod may by scheme provide for regulating the inspection of buildings⁶.

1168. Reports.

On every inspection¹ the diocesan surveyor must make a report to the board² (1) stating what repairs³ are required, specifying them in detail and estimating their cost, and stating whether they should be executed immediately or otherwise⁴; (2) specifying any repairs to a parsonage house⁵ which are in his opinion necessary by reason of damage caused or aggravated by any deliberate act of the incumbent or a previous incumbent or any default in his duties⁶, and estimating the cost of executing those repairs or, in a case of aggravation, the additional cost attributable to the act or default⁷; (3) stating whether any improvements⁸ to a parsonage house appear to him expedient and, if an estimate appears to him practicable and useful, estimating their cost⁹; (4) stating whether in his opinion a parsonage house should be replaced¹⁰; (5) stating whether any outbuilding of a parsonage house or any glebe building appears to him to be superfluous¹¹ and, if an estimate appears to him to be practicable and useful, estimating the cost of demolition¹²; (6) commenting on the state of the interior decoration of any parsonage house and the state of fixtures and things in any building of the benefice which belong to the benefice¹³; (7) advising on the respective amounts for which the buildings of the benefice should be insured, and specifying the special risks to which they are liable¹⁴.

On the first inspection of the buildings the diocesan surveyor must attach to his report a list of fixtures and things in any building which belong to the benefice, and a list of trees of a parsonage house which in his opinion (after taking such expert advice, if any, as he thinks fit) ought to be preserved¹⁵. On subsequent inspections he must make such additions to and amendments of the lists as may be necessary¹⁶.

1171. Execution of repairs to parsonage houses.

The board¹ must, within twelve months of confirming the diocesan surveyor's report², commence all repairs specified in the report which relate to the parsonage house the execution of which is stated to be immediately necessary, and must complete them as soon as possible³. It must also execute all other repairs specified in the report which relate to a parsonage house within such period as may be recommended in the report or, if no period is recommended, as the board thinks expedient⁴.

If, however, it appears to the board and the bishop of the diocese that a parsonage house or a part of it should be sold, exchanged or demolished, and for that reason it is not necessary or desirable to execute the repairs or all the repairs, the board may, within six months of confirming the report, notify the incumbent that such repairs as are specified are not to be executed, giving its reasons⁵, and informing him of his right to make representations to the board⁶. The board must notify him of its decision, from which he may appeal to the Church Commissioners⁷.

If it appears to the board, whether as a result of an interim inspection or otherwise, that any repairs to a parsonage house are necessary, it may execute those repairs⁸, but if the repairs are not specified in an interim report the board may not execute the repairs without the incumbent's consent⁹.

Where any party wall or fence of a parsonage house or any drive, drain or other appurtenance of a parsonage house is maintainable by the incumbent in common with other persons, the board may make agreements with those other persons for the execution and financing of necessary works of repair and replacement in respect of them, and may enforce the liability of those persons in respect of the repairs¹⁰.

A diocesan synod may by scheme provide for regulating the execution of repairs to buildings of a benefice¹¹.

1172. Incumbent's liability for cost of repairs.

Where the report of a diocesan surveyor, whether on a periodic¹ or interim inspection², specifies any repairs to a parsonage house as necessary by reason of damage caused or aggravated by any deliberate act of the incumbent or a previous incumbent or any default in his duties³, the board⁴ may, on completion of the repairs, by notice require the incumbent concerned or his personal representative to pay to it the whole or part of the cost certified by the diocesan surveyor to be attributable to that act or default and, if the notice is not complied with, the board may take proceedings for its enforcement⁵.

Where the Church Commissioners notify the board¹ that they have consented or agreed to the sale, exchange² or demolition of a parsonage house, the board's duties in respect of the parsonage house cease, save for limited duties to insure and repair³. Where a parsonage house ceases, otherwise than in consequence of a sale, exchange or demolition, or proposals for them, to be a parsonage house, most of the statutory provisions⁴ relating to the repair of the parsonage house cease⁵.

1 For the meaning of 'the board', see PARA 1165 note 5 ante.

1174. Execution of repairs to glebe buildings.

The board¹ must by order require the incumbent to execute, within the time specified in the order, the repairs specified in the diocesan surveyor's report² which relate to glebe buildings³. If the incumbent fails to execute any such repairs within the time so specified, the board may by notice require him to execute the repairs forthwith⁴. If at the expiration of one month from the date of the notice the default is continuing, the board may, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, execute the repairs; and the cost is recoverable as a debt due to the board from the defaulting incumbent or his personal representative⁴.

If the board considers that repairs to a glebe building which are specified in an interim report⁵ of a diocesan surveyor are required without delay in order to prevent further damage, it may by order require the incumbent to execute those repairs⁶.

If the diocesan surveyor has reported on a glebe building subject to a lease⁷, and it appears that repairs for which the lessee is responsible ought to be carried out, the board may send a copy of the report to the incumbent and require him to enforce the lessee's repairing covenants⁸. If the incumbent fails to do so or requests the board to do so on his behalf, it may take or continue proceedings to enforce the covenants on behalf of the incumbent and may recover its costs from the incumbent or his personal representative⁹.

3 Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 6 (1). For the meaning of 'glebe building', see PARA 1165 note 3 ante. The order may specify different times for different repairs and may distinguish between repairs stated in the report to be immediately necessary and other repairs: s 6 (1). The order may be varied to extend the time for execution of the repairs: s 6 (2). If a vacancy occurs after an order, the duty to execute the repairs devolves on the incumbent's successors, including the sequestrators or bishop during the vacancy (s. 26 (4)), but if the previous incumbent has entered into a contract for the execution of the repairs he or his personal representative has three months to execute the repairs, and his successors are not liable to do so during that period (s. 26 (3)). This provision is subject to any variation made by the board or any agreement between the outgoing incumbent or his personal representative and the new incumbent: s 26 (3) proviso.

4 Ibid s 6 (3). If it appears to the board that the incumbent cannot reasonably meet the estimated cost of the repairs which he is required to execute by the order the board may advance to him the whole or part of the cost on such terms as to the repayment of the advance and interest on it and otherwise as it may determine, and the amount of the advance and interest is deemed to be charged on the revenues of the benefice: s 6 (4). Where sums are due from the incumbent to the board the Church Commissioners may retain sums payable by them to the incumbent and pay them to the board: s 6 (5). As to advances, see also PARA 1178 note 2 post.

The diocesan synod may by scheme¹ (1) authorise the board² to execute works of interior decoration of parsonage houses³ by agreement with the incumbent⁴ and works of improvement, demolition or erection of parsonage houses⁵ by agreement with persons on whom powers to do this work are conferred⁶; (2) provide for the inspection by a diocesan surveyor of buildings (other than parsonage houses) used as residences by clergy or lay workers of the Church of England and for making reports to the board on such inspections⁷; and (3) provide for authorising the board to execute works of repair, interior decoration, improvement, demolition or erection of any buildings held for charitable purposes connected with the Church of England by agreement with the persons having the management or control of those buildings⁸.

Pastoral schemes and orders⁹ may provide for the improvement or repair of residences¹⁰.

1 Generally as to schemes made by a diocesan synod, see PARA 520 note 1 ante. Schemes under s 15 must provide that the cost of works, inspections and reports (except in respect of an incumbent's residence, not being a parsonage house (s. 15 (4) proviso)) are not a charge on the parsonages fund: s 15 (4). As to this fund, see PARA 1178 post. The powers extend to buildings intended to be used for the purposes mentioned in s 15: s 15 (5).

For the purpose of carrying out any inspection of¹ or executing repairs to² a building of a benefice³ the diocesan surveyor or the board⁴, or any persons employed or authorised by the surveyor or the board, may enter the building at all reasonable hours during the daytime⁵. Except where repairs are suddenly and urgently needed, the board or the surveyor must first use their best endeavours to agree with the incumbent the times for the inspection or repairs, and in default of agreement must give at least fourteen days' notice to the incumbent⁶.

1178. Finance.

The board¹ must open, hold and manage a parsonages fund into which money must be paid under the provisions of the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972², and all expenditure of the board, except expenditure defrayed out of a specific trust fund³ or by direct payments of parochial church councils⁴, must be defrayed out of the fund⁵. The diocesan synod must by scheme⁶ provide for the submission to the synod of annual estimates of the expenditure of the board and proposals for meeting that expenditure⁷, and may by scheme provide for the payment by parochial church councils of annual contributions towards the board's estimated expenditure, or for the direct payment by parochial church councils of the cost of repairs to parsonage houses of their own parishes⁸. The Church Commissioners may make grants out of their general fund to the board for payment into the parsonages fund⁹. The board may accept gifts and bequests¹⁰. In general all money received by the board must be paid into the fund¹¹.

1 For the meaning of 'the board', see PARA 1165 note 5 ante.

2 Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 17 (1) (2). Sums standing to the credit of the repair accounts, the deferred repair accounts, the insurance accounts and the administration account under the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Measure 1923, ss 29, 30, 34, 39 (all repealed), were paid into the parsonages fund: Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 18 (1), (4). The payment into the fund was after making a deduction for glebe buildings and for discharging loans and interest outstanding in respect of parsonage houses: see s 18 (1) proviso. Money paid into the fund from the repair accounts and deferred repair accounts is to be treated as a reserve, and only the income is applicable for the fund's general purposes: s 18 (2). Up to two-fifths of the original amount of the rest may be applied by the board for meeting and temporary excess of expenditure over income (subject to its being replaced within the same accounting year), meeting the cost of extraordinary repairs to a parsonage house, and making advances to incumbents under s 6 (4) (see PARA 1174 ante): s 18 (3). After 10th February 1977 the Church Commissioners may, if expedient, authorise an increase for a particular diocese in the total amount to be so applied out of the reserve, and, in addition, on the commissioners' application, the General Synod may by resolution increase the two-fifths proportion for all dioceses: s 18 (3) proviso. As to the application of sums apportioned to glebe buildings, see Sch. 1 para 2 (7). The board has the same powers of investment in respect of the fund as trustees of trust funds (s. 17 (2)), although if there is a separate parsonages board the diocesan synod may by scheme provide that the board's management powers in respect of the fund and the receipt of money payable into the fund are to be exercisable by the diocesan board of finance on behalf of the board (s. 17 (2) proviso). Generally as to schemes, see PARA 520 note 1 ante.

3 Where the purposes of a charity include the repair of parsonage houses the funds of the charity continue to be applicable for that purpose notwithstanding the board's responsibilities as to repairs: ibid s 25.

4 See ibid s 19 (2), and note 8 infra.

5 Ibid s 17 (3). This is, however, without prejudice to s 15 (4), for which see PARA 1176 note 1 ante.

6 As to schemes made by the diocesan synod, see PARA 520 note 1 ante.

7 Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 19 (1). Where there is a separate parsonages board the board must consult with the diocesan board of finance before submitting the estimates: s 19 (1).

8 Ibid s 19 (2) (a), (b). Such contributions and direct payments may be combined in a scheme (s. 19 (2) (c)), and any part of a contribution not required may be refunded by the board (s. 19 (2) (a)).

9 Ibid s 19 (3).

10 Ibid s 19 (5).

11 Ibid s 19 (6). This is subject to the specific provision of s 19 (4) relating to insurance money (see PARA 1182 post), to any scheme under s 7 (see PARA 1175 ante) and any specific trusts: s 19 (6).

(vi) Miscellaneous Powers and Duties

1179. Power to work glebe.

An incumbent may cultivate glebe in any way he thinks fit, provided he does not commit any waste¹. He may work open mines² for his own benefit³, but may not open new mines⁴ even with the consent of the patron⁵, except to get stone to do repairs⁶. If the incumbent works minerals in excess of his rights the patron may obtain an injunction to prevent him⁷ and, according to the better opinion, is entitled to an account⁷; and, in case of collusion between the incumbent and the patron, the Ordinary may take proceedings⁸. The Church Commissioners also may obtain an injunction⁹. The ecclesiastical courts might formerly punish improper workings by deprivation¹⁰. The successor to a benefice, however, cannot, in an action for dilapidations, recover anything against the estate of a former incumbent in respect of minerals improperly worked¹¹.

1 Neglect by an incumbent to cultivate glebe land in a husbandlike manner does not render him or his executors liable in an action by a succeeding incumbent, although he or they may be liable for leaving the buildings, hedges and fences in a state of decay: Bird v Relph (1833) 4 B & Ad 826; and see Ross v Adcock (1868) LR 3 CP 655. As to the incumbent's liability to repair glebe buildings under the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, see PARA 1174 ante. 4 A bishop was formerly in the same position as an incumbent as regards the working and opening of mines, but his powers and limitations in this respect are now obsolete, episcopal estates being vested in the Church Commissioners by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1860, s 2 (repealed) (see PARA 363 ante, 1233 post), and episcopal residences being similarly vested by schemes made under the Episcopal Endowments and Stipends Measure 1943, ss 1, 2 (see PARA 482 ante). A dean and chapter cannot work mines beneath any corporate land vested in them, as they may not commit waste: Dean and Chapter of Worcester's Case (1605) 6 Co Rep 37a; Ross v Adcock (1868) LR 3 CP 655 at 664.

1180. Felling of trees.

Timber growing on any glebe land must not be felled without the consent of the board¹, unless the felling is necessary to avoid immediate danger to the occupants or general public². If it appears to the board that timber growing on glebe land ought, as a matter of good management, to be felled it may by notice require the incumbent to fell it and, if he fails to do so, may itself do so and sell the timber³. The incumbent may make representations before the board exercises its power to fell the timber⁴. The consent of the patron⁵ or Ordinary is not necessary for any felling under the foregoing provisions⁶. The net proceeds of any such felling and any money recovered by the board in respect of wrongful felling⁷ may be applied for the purpose of planting new trees and, subject thereto, must be paid to the Church Commissioners and treated in the same way as the net proceeds of the demolition of any glebe building⁸. Where the expense to the incumbent of felling trees exceeds the proceeds, the board may defray the amount of the excess⁹. The foregoing provisions relating to timber do not apply to glebe land leased to the incumbent for a term of years binding on his successors¹⁰.

1 Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 20 (1). For the meaning of 'the board', see PARA 1165 note 5 ante. This restriction applies also to the felling, lopping or topping of trees included in the current list scheduled to the report of the diocesan surveyor under s 4 (3) in respect of a parsonage house (see PARA 1168 ante), and to the felling of timber growing in a churchyard: s 20 (1). As to timber growing in churchyards, see PARA 1083 ante. As to the restrictions on the felling of trees imposed by the Forestry Act 1967, Part II (ss. 9-36), see FORESTRY vol 52 (2009) PARA 120 et seq. As to the power of an incumbent or other ecclesiastical corporation to enter into a forestry dedication covenant, see s 5 (4), Sch. 2 para 3, and FORESTRY vol 52 (2009) PARA 119.

2 Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 20 (1) proviso.

3 Ibid s 20 (3). This applies also to timber growing in a churchyard: s 20 (3). The board's workmen and agents have powers of entry under s 11 (see PARA 1177 ante) for the purpose of felling and sale: s 20 (3). If the trees are wrongfully felled, lopped or topped, the board may require the incumbent or his personal representative to pay the board the net value of the timber or, in the case of a parsonage house, the resulting depreciation as estimated by the surveyor, and may take proceedings to recover payment: s 20 (2). In any such proceedings the defendant may show that the timber had no net value or, as the case may be, that there was no depreciation, or that the amount required is excessive: s 20 (2) proviso.

4 Ibid s 20 (4). The board's notice must give the incumbent not less than one month after the date on which the notice is sent to make representations (s. 20 (4)); and he may require to meet the board, which may make inspections and take advice before deciding whether or not to proceed with the notice (ss. 4 (5), 20 (4)).

6 Repair of Benefice Buildings Act 1972, s 20 (5).

7 See ibid s 20 (2), and note 3 supra.

8 Ibid s 20 (6). Where the money recovered by the board is in respect of trees of a parsonage house (see note 3 supra) it must be paid to the commissioners and treated in the same way as the net proceeds of the demolition of outbuildings of a parsonage house: s 20 (6). As to the application of such money, see s 19 (4), and PARA 1163 ante.

1182. Insurance of benefice buildings.

The board¹ must insure all the parsonage houses and glebe buildings in its diocese². The board must make and prosecute all claims arising under any such insurance, and all money payable under a policy must be paid to the board³. If the insurance office elects to pay the insurance money instead of making good the damage, the board must, in the case of a parsonage house, make good the damage and, in the case of a glebe building, apply the money in defraying the cost of making good the damage⁴. The premiums paid by the board in respect of policies effected on glebe buildings are recoverable from the incumbent or his personal representative and are deemed, without any assurance, to be charged on the revenues of the benefice⁵.

1 For the meaning of 'the board', see PARA 1165 note 5 ante.

2 Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 12 (1). For the meaning of 'parsonage house' and 'glebe building', see PARA 1165 notes 2, 3 ante. Glebe buildings must be insured against damage by fire and any other risks agreed between the board and the incumbent: s 12 (1) (b). Any question arising as to the risks to be covered is to be conclusively determined by the Church Commissioners: s 12 (1). The insurance must be effected with the Ecclesiastical Insurance Office Ltd or such other insurance office as is selected by the board and approved by the commissioners: s 12 (1). The sums in the insurance account of a benefice apportioned to glebe buildings under s 18 (1) (see PARA 1178 ante) must be applied by the board in paying the premiums in respect of glebe buildings: s 34, Sch. 1 para 2 (7) (a).

As to such sales, see PARA 1158 et seq ante.

5 Ibid s 12 (4). Sums due to the board in respect of such premiums may be deducted from money received under the policy, and, where sums are due from the incumbent, the commissioners may retain sums payable by them to the incumbent and pay them to the board: s 12 (4), applying s 6 (5).

(5) SHARING OF CHURCH BUILDINGS

1186. Sharing agreements.

Notwithstanding any statutory or other legal provision any two or more churches¹ may make agreements, called 'sharing agreements', for the sharing by them of church buildings² and may carry such agreements into effect³. A sharing agreement may relate to a single church building or two or more church buildings in the same locality, and any existing or proposed church building, and, subject to provisions relating to consecrated churches of the Church of England⁴ and residential buildings⁵, may provide for the shared building or buildings to be owned or continue to be owned by one only of the sharing churches or to be jointly owned by all or some of them⁶.

A sharing agreement must be under seal and must be registered⁷, and the required consents⁸ must be signified in writing⁹ and registered with the deed¹⁰. A sharing agreement is binding on the successors to the parties to it¹¹ and may be amended by subsequent agreement by the same parties with the same consents¹².

No sharing agreement may be made with respect to a cathedral church or peculiar of the Church of England situated in an extra-diocesan or extra-parochial place¹³.

1 The churches to which the Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969 applies are any church of the Baptist denomination, any church of the Congregational denomination, any congregation of the Association of Churches of Christ in Great Britain and Ireland, the Methodist Church, the United Reformed Church, the Roman Catholic Church, the Church in Wales, the Church of England and any other church giving notice: s 11 (1), Sch. 2; United Reformed Church Act 1972, s 24 (1). Any church represented on the General Council of the British Council of Churches or on the governing body of the Evangelical Alliance or the British Evangelical Council may give notice that the Act should apply to that church: Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, s 11 (3).

2 'Church building' means a building used or proposed to be used by a church or churches to which the Act applies (see note 1 supra) as a place of worship, as a church hall or centre available wholly or mainly for activities other than worship, as a youth club or centre or youth hostel, or as a residence or residences for ministers or lay workers, but it does not include any school: ibid s 12 (1). A sharing agreement may provide for including any land (other than land used or appropriated for use for burials) or outbuildings held or to be held with a church building, and any easements or rights enjoyed or to be enjoyed with a church building, and references to a 'church building' must in relation to that agreement be construed accordingly: s 12 (1). 'Building' includes part of a building: s 12 (1).

3 Ibid s 1 (1). Any practice of a church to which the Act applies of lending church buildings temporarily for particular occasions to other religious bodies is not affected: s 13. A sharing agreement does not effect any exception or exemption for a church building from any provisions of the Charities Act 1960: Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, s 8 (1). A sharing agreement with respect to a church building which under the agreement is owned by the Church of England does not affect the application of the Charities Act 1960, s 45 (2) (which excludes from the definition of 'charity' certain corporate property of the Church of England and certain trusts of consecrated property): Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, s 8 (2).

4 See ibid s 5, and PARA 1191 post.

5 See ibid s 7, and PARA 1192 post.

6 Ibid s 1 (2). For the purposes of the Act, a church building is deemed to be owned by a church if the building is held by any body or person, whether for a freehold or leasehold estate, for the purposes of that church or on behalf of that church: s 12 (2).

7 le in the case of the Church of England, in the registries of the province and diocese, and, in the case of other churches, in the registry or office of the appropriate authority: ibid s 1 (8). As to the appropriate authority, see PARA 1187 note 4 post.

8 As to the required consents, see ibid s 1 (4), and PARA 1187 post.

9 le by the secretary or clerk of the body concerned or by the person concerned: ibid s 1 (8).

11 Ibid s 1 (9). As to the necessary parties, see PARA 1187 post.

12 Ibid s 1 (10).

13 Ibid s 10 (1). Chapels and other parts of a cathedral church may be used for inter-denominational worship: see s 10 (2), and PARA 1190 note 3 post. The provisions of s 10 do not prevent the sharing, otherwise than in pursuance of a sharing agreement, of a church building in an extra-diocesan or extra-parochial place: s 10 (3). 1186A. Ecumenical relations.

The Church of England (Ecumenical Relations) Measure 1988 enables the General Synod to make provision by canon for co-operation between the Church of England and other designated churches¹. Provision may be made for members of other churches to take part in public worship in accordance with the forms of service and practice of the Church of England², for clerks in Holy Orders, deaconesses, lay workers and readers of the Church of England to take part in worship in accordance with the forms and practice of other churches³, and for places of worship of the Church of England to be made available to other churches for the conduct of worship in accordance with the forms of service and practice of such churches⁴. Further, the General Synod may provide for the bishop of a diocese to enter into agreements for the participation of the Church of England in local ecumenical projects⁵ established in areas of his diocese⁶ and to make special provision as to the ministry in such areas of clerks in Holy Orders, deaconesses, lay workers and readers⁷. Similar agreements may be entered into for participation in such projects in the case of institutions in respect of which a clerk in Holy Orders is licensed⁸ as an extra-parochial minister or the bishop or bishops who make a bishop's mission order⁹. The powers of the General Synod under these provisions must be exercised so as to ensure that no person may preside at Holy Communion according to the rites of the Church of England unless he has been episcopally ordained priest in a church whose orders are recognised by the Church of England and that no person may solemnise a marriage according to the rites of the Church of England unless he is a clerk in Holy Orders of the Church of England¹⁰.

The parties to a sharing agreement must, as respects the Church of England, be the diocesan board of finance¹ of the diocese and the incumbent² and parochial church council of the parish in which the building or buildings is or are or will be situated³, and, as respects any other church, be such persons as the appropriate authority⁴ of that church may determine⁵. In the case of an existing building, the person in whom it is vested⁶ and any managing trustees and, in the case of a proposed building, any person in whom it is to be vested or who is to be a managing trustee, must be a party to the agreement⁷.

A sharing agreement must not be made on behalf of the Church of England without the consent of the bishop⁸ and the pastoral committee⁹ of the diocese concerned¹⁰. The appropriate authority of any other church may require the consent of any body or person to be given to sharing agreements made on behalf of that church¹¹.

1 'Diocesan board of finance' means the board of that name constituted under the Diocesan Boards of Finance Measure 1925 for that diocese and also a board of finance not so constituted or a body constituted for holding diocesan property on trust if the bishop certifies that it is to be treated as the diocesan board of finance for the diocese: Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, s 12 (1).

2 Where a benefice is vacant and a suspension period is current under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 67 (see PARA 813 ante), the minister in charge must be a party in substitution for the incumbent, but otherwise a sharing agreement must not be made on behalf of the Church of England during a vacancy in the benefice concerned: s 1 (6).

3 Ibid s 1 (3) (a).

4 The 'appropriate authority' for each of the following churches is the authority named after it, namely for Baptist churches, the Baptist Trust Corporation as defined in ibid Sch. 2 as respects s 1 (3), (4), but not s 1 (8), acting with the concurrence of the church meeting); for Congregational churches, the Congregational Trust Corporation as so defined (as respects s 1 (3), (4), but not s 1 (8), acting with the concurrence of the church meeting); for any congregation of the Association of Churches of Christ in Great Britain and Ireland, the association's Annual Conference (as respects s 1 (3), (4), but not s 1 (8), acting with the concurrence of the duly constituted church meeting); for the Methodist Church, its Annual Conference; for the United Reformed Church, the Synod of the Church's province in which the church building or buildings is or are to be situated; for the Roman Catholic Church, the bishop of the diocese in which the church building or buildings is or are or will be situated; and for the Church in Wales, the Governing Body: s 11 (2), Sch. 2; United Reformed Church Act 1972, s 24 (1).

6 If the Church Commissioners certify that the ownership of a consecrated church of the Church of England cannot be ascertained with certainty, and that the church ought to be treated as vested in the incumbent of the parish in which it is situated, the church must be deemed to be so vested for the purposes of the Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969: s 12 (3). 'Consecrated' means consecrated for the purpose of public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England: s 12 (1).

8 Where a see is vacant, or the bishop is unable because of illness or absence to give his consent, the archbishop of the province may appoint a suffragan or assistant bishop or an archdeacon of the diocese to act in place of the bishop for the purpose of giving consent; and in the event of a vacancy in the see of an archbishop or his illness or absence, an appointment may be made by the other archbishop: ibid s 1 (7).

9 As to the pastoral committee, see PARA 521 ante.

10 Ibid s 1 (4). Where a church building is held on trust for educational purposes which include instruction in religious knowledge according to the faith and practice of the Church of England, the consent of the diocesan education committee is required in lieu of the consent of the pastoral committee, and the agreement is subject to the approval of the Secretary of State: s 1 (5). 'Diocesan education committee' means the committee constituted under the Diocesan Education Committees Measure 1955, Schedule, or in accordance with an order made under that Measure (see PARA 522 ante): Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, s 12 (1).

1189. Finance and management.

A sharing agreement¹ must make provision with respect to the financial and other obligations of the parties to it in respect of the provision, improvement and management² of the church building³ or building shared or to be shared under the agreement⁴. The powers of any body or person under any statutory or other legal provision⁵ to apply money, whether by grant or loan, in respect of the provision, improvement or management of church buildings of a church to which the Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969 applies⁶ are applicable in respect of any church building shared or to be shared by that church under a sharing agreement⁷.

The powers of any body or person under a statutory or other legal provision (1) to acquire, hold, improve or manage church buildings of a church, or any property to be used for or in connection with the provision of such church buildings, or (2) to grant property for or in connection with the provision of such church buildings, whether for a full consideration or for less than a full consideration, are applicable in respect of any church building to which a sharing agreement relates and which, under the agreement, is or is to be owned by that church or jointly owned by that church and any other church or churches⁸.

The responsibility for the management of a church building owned by one only of the sharing churches under a sharing agreement and of its contents remains with the authorities of or trustees representing that church⁹. Where a sharing agreement provides for joint ownership of the shared building the trustees are responsible for the management of the building in place of any responsibility of the authorities of the sharing churches¹⁰.

In the case of a building¹ used as a place of worship, a sharing agreement² must provide for determining the extent to which it is to be available for worship in accordance with the forms of service and practice of the sharing churches, and may provide for the holding of such joint services on such occasions as may be approved by those churches³. A minister, reader or lay preacher of one of the churches sharing a church building⁴ under a sharing agreement may, by invitation of a minister, reader or lay preacher of another such church, take part in conducting worship in that building in accordance with the forms of service and practice of that other church⁵.

Subject to the above provisions the participation of the communities of the sharing churches in each other's worship must be governed by the practices and disciplines of those churches in like manner as if they worshipped in separate buildings⁶.

With respect to an existing consecrated¹ church of the Church of England, a sharing agreement² must not be made unless the church under the agreement remains in the sole ownership of the Church of England³, or authority to make the scheme on behalf of the Church of England is given by a pastoral scheme⁴ and the church is under the agreement to be in the joint ownership of the Church of England and another church or churches⁵.

Where a sharing agreement is made on behalf of the Church of England with respect to a church building⁶ used or to be used as a place of worship, but not an existing consecrated church, the building must not be consecrated unless under the agreement it is to be in the sole ownership of the Church of England⁷.

Where a church building, being a place of worship, is shared by the Church of England under a sharing agreement, then (1) if the agreement provides for the sole ownership of the building by the Church of England, but not otherwise, the building may become or remain a parish church⁸; and (2) in any case the agreement does not prevent or affect the designation of the building⁹ as a parish centre of worship¹⁰.

A church building to which a sharing agreement relates, including one owned by the Church of England, may be certified¹¹ as a place of religious worship of any church sharing the building other than the Church of England¹².

Where a sharing agreement¹ is made with respect to a church building² or buildings proposed to be used under the agreement as a residence or residences for ministers or lay workers, the purpose of the agreement must be to provide residential accommodation, whether in the form of separate residences or otherwise, available for occupation by the ministers or lay workers of the sharing churches³. Where under any such agreement a separate residence is let to an incumbent of the Church of England in his corporate capacity, it must be the residence house of the benefice during the term of the lease⁴.

A sharing agreement must not be made with respect to an existing residence house⁵ of a benefice of the Church of England, unless authority to make the agreement is given under a pastoral scheme⁶.

1193. Termination of sharing.

A sharing agreement¹ must contain provisions for terminating the sharing of the church building or buildings². Such provisions may (1) if the agreement relates to two or more buildings, provide for terminating the sharing of any building before the others³; and (2) if there are two or more sharing churches, provide for the withdrawal of any church from the sharing of any church building, not being a church which is the sole owner or previous owner of the building⁴. The sharing agreement may provide for financial adjustments as between the churches, on such termination or withdrawal, by payments out of money held for the purposes of the agreement or of any shared building or by other payments by one church to another⁵.

On the termination of the sharing of a church building owned by one only of the sharing churches the building must be held on the trusts or for the purposes on or for which it was held before the sharing agreement or would be held but for the agreement⁶. On the termination of the sharing of a church building jointly owned by all or some of the sharing churches, being a building which before the agreement was owned by one only of those churches, it vests (i) if it was previously a consecrated church of the Church of England or a building vested in the incumbent of a Church of England parish, in the incumbent of the parish where the building is situated, for the same purposes as before, as nearly as may be⁷; and (ii) in any other case, in such of the trustees in whom the building is vested as represent the church which previously owned the building, and must be held and managed on the trusts or for the same purposes as before⁸. Otherwise the agreement may provide for the disposal of the building and for the application of the proceeds to charitable purposes of the sharing churches⁹.

(6) FEES AND OFFERINGS

(i) Parochial or Surplice Fees

1194. Fees for the offices of the church.

Fees have from very early times been recognised by custom as due for the performance of the services of the church¹. In particular fees, now called surplice fees, are recognised as due on the performance of those offices of the church which are for the benefit of individual members of the church², namely marriages, churchings and burials. On marriage the bridegroom is directed by rubric, when laying the ring upon the book, to lay with it the accustomed duty to the priest and clerk³, and on being churched the woman who comes to give her thanks is directed by the rubric to offer accustomed offerings⁴. It is a law of the church that no sacrament should be denied on account of non-payment of money, and neither must matrimony be hindered, nor must burial be denied⁵, on account of the non-payment of the fee, but a moderate fee may be shown to be due by custom on marriage⁶ or on burial⁷, and where so shown to be due is recoverable⁸.

As appears subsequently⁹, fees may be payable in accordance with tables established and fixed under powers conferred by Measure, and in fact fees payable for or in respect of the solemnisation or performance of the offices of the church have in most cases been settled or fixed under powers so conferred¹⁰.

In the absence of a table of settled or fixed fees¹ the minister can only demand for publishing banns, giving certificates of the publication of banns and solemnising marriage such fees, if any, as have been taken by immemorial custom in the parish². Fees have been fixed for these matters under powers conferred by Measure³.

A fee cannot be demanded for the marriage of a parishioner which is solemnised in another parish: Patten v Castleman supra. A customary marriage fee must be of such a moderate amount that, having regard to the then value of money, it could conceivably have been taken as of right in the reign of Richard I; otherwise it is bad: Bryant v Foot (1868) LR 3 QB 497, Ex Ch. A fee may be due by custom to the rector or vicar for allowing the erection of a monument in the church, and a charge may also be made by the parson, as owner of the freehold of the churchyard, for permitting the erection of a monument over a grave there¹. The payment demanded must not include any sum in respect of the ground occupied by the grave of a parishioner or person dying in the parish, nor of the performance of the office, but may take account of the particular place in the churchyard in which the burial is permitted or the longer occupation of the ground by reason of the nature of the monument or of the mode of burial². Fees for the erection of monuments in churchyards have been prescribed under powers conferred by Measure³.

1197. Fees fixed under former enactments.

Fees were formerly fixed under enactments, now largely repealed, relating to the formation of new parishes and districts¹.

In 1938 the Ecclesiastical Commissioners were given powers to establish and fix for any parish a table of fees to be payable for or in respect of the solemnisation or performance of church offices, the erection of monuments in churchyards and other such services or matters as might by any law or custom be included in such tables, and to revoke tables of fees and to establish and fix new tables in substitution for them². These powers, subsequently exercisable by the Church Commissioners³, have now been revoked⁴ and replaced by new powers of establishing fees⁵.

1197 Fees fixed under former enactments

NOTE 4--1962 Measure replaced by Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1986: see PARAS 1198, 1204.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(6) FEES AND OFFERINGS/(i) Parochial or Surplice Fees/1198. Fees established by the Church Commissioners.

1198. Fees established by the Church Commissioners.

On 3rd July 1962¹ the Church Commissioners came under a duty to frame an order establishing a table of parochial fees² which, with certain exceptions³, should apply in all parishes in the provinces of Canterbury and York⁴. The commissioners may frame further orders in substitution for, or revoke, alter or add to, earlier orders⁵. An order may contain incidental provisions, may provide for the payment of special or increased fees for special services and may provide that the amount of any fee may be determined in each case by the chancellor of the diocese⁶. An order framed by the commissioners does not come into operation unless it has been approved by the General Synod⁷, and it is subject to annulment by a resolution of either House of Parliament⁸.

During a vacancy in a benefice fees which would be paid to the incumbent must be paid to the sequestrators⁹.

Any parochial fee is recoverable as a debt due by proceedings in the county court¹⁰.

1 le the date on which the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962 was passed.

2 'Parochial fees' means any fees payable to a clerk in holy orders, parish clerk, sexton or other person performing duties in connection with a parish or to a parochial church council for or in respect of the solemnisation or performance of church offices, the erection of monuments in churchyards, such other services or matters as might by law or custom on 3rd July 1962 be included in a table of parochial fees, and such other services or matters of a like nature for which in the commissioners' opinion the payment of fees is appropriate: ibid s 2 (2). 'Parish' means any ecclesiastical parish or district, parochial chapelry or other place the incumbent or minister whereof either is entitled to retain for his own benefit or is under a duty to pay over to another clerk in holy orders the fees chargeable in respect of the performance of church offices: s 7.

3 No order is binding upon a clerk in holy orders, parish clerk, sexton or any other person performing duties in connection with a parish who on 3rd July 1962 held office or performed duties in connection with a parish for which a table of fees had not been established in accordance with the provisions of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners (Powers) Measure 1938, s 1 (repealed) (see PARA 1197 ante), without that person's written consent so long as he holds such office or performs such duties, but such consent when given is irrevocable: Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 2 (4).

4 Ibid s 2 (1). The Measure does not extend to the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man, but may be applied to the Channel Islands in accordance with the provisions of the Channel Islands (Church Legislation) Measures 1931 and 1957 (see PARA 402 ante): Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 9. The first order made under s 2 (1) was the Parochial Fees Order 1962, S.I. 1962 No. 2466, which has been revoked and replaced by the Parochial Fees Order 1972, S.I. 1972 No. 177.

5 Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 2 (1). The Parochial Fees Order 1972, art. 1, Schedule, prescribes the following fees:

Baptism fees payable to the incumbent: certificate, 50p; short certificate, 25p; searching the register, 30p for the first year and 15p for each year thereafter.

Marriage fees payable to the incumbent: publication of banns, 75p (and 30p to the clerk); certificate of banns, 50p (and 20p to the clerk); marriage service (the fees being doubled if the organ is used), £2 (and £1 each to the clerk and parochial church council); searching the register for a period before 1837, 30p for the first year and 15p for each year thereafter.

Burial fees payable to the incumbent: service in church before burial or cremation where the organ is not used, £2 (and £1 each to the clerk, sexton and parochial church council); the same where the organ is used: £4 (and £2 each to the clerk and council and £1 to the sexton); burial in grave or vault or burial or deposit of cremated remains in churchyard not following service in a church of the same parish, £2 (and £1 each to the clerk and sexton and £2 to the council); burial certificate, 50p; searching the register, 30p for the first year and 15p for each year thereafter. Other burial fees payable are £1 to the sexton for tolling the bell or for the burial of a still-born infant, and £2 to the council for burial in grave or vault or burial or deposit of cremated remains in churchyard following service in a church of the same parish.

Fees for monuments in churchyards, including the original inscription, payable to the incumbent: small wooden cross, 50p (and 20p to the sexton); vase not exceeding 12 inches in height, £1 (and 25p to the sexton); other monuments, £6 (and £1 to the sexton; where a faculty is granted the parochial church council is entitled to a fee fixed by the chancellor, and where the monument is erected with the incumbent's consent given under the chancellor's general directions the council's fee is £4); additional inscriptions, £2.

Miscellaneous fees to the incumbent: inspection of instrument of apportionment or agreement for exchange of land for tithes deposited under the Tithe Act 1836, 25p; furnishing copies of the above, 20p for every seventy-two words.

The incumbent may direct that fees otherwise payable to him be payable to the minister performing the service or duty; where there is no clerk or sexton their fees are payable to the church servant performing the duty, and where no church servant is so employed those fees are payable to the incumbent: Parochial Fees Order 1972, Schedule.

No table of fees established under the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962 extends to any matter in respect of which a table of fees may be made under the Cremation Act 1902, s 12 (see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 974), or the Local Authorities' Cemeteries Order 1974, S.I. 1974 No. 628, art. 12: Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 2 (8) (which refers to the Burial Act 1900, s 3, repealed by the Local Government Act 1972, Sch. 30, and replaced by Sch. 26 paras 12, 13, in turn repealed by the Local Authorities' Cemeteries Order 1974, art. 17, Sch. 3, and replaced by art. 12, which must now be read into the Measure of 1962 by virtue of the Local Government Act 1972, s 272 (2)). Fees prescribed by the commissioners under the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 2 (1), have precedence over fees fixed by a bishop's licence under the Marriage Act 1949, s 20 (see PARA 1200 post): Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 2 (5).

UPDATE

1198 Fees established by the Church Commissioners

TEXT AND NOTES--1962 Measure replaced by Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1986. The Archbishops' Council may prepare a draft of an order, known as a Parochial Fees Order, which prescribes the amount of the parochial fees to be paid to the persons specified in that order in relation to specified matters; such an order may contain such incidental provisions as the Council considers necessary or desirable: s 1 (amended by SI 1998/1715). As to the Archbishops' Council see PARA 427A et seq. 'Parochial fees' mean any fees payable to a parochial church council, to a clerk in Holy Orders, or to any other person performing duties in connection with a parish for, or in respect of, the solemnisation or performance of church offices or the erection of monuments in churchyards or such other services or matters as may by law or custom be included in a Parochial Fees Order and such other services or matters for which, in the opinion of the Commissioners, the payment of fees is appropriate, except fees or other charges payable under Local Government Act 1972 s 214, Sch 26 (burial fees) or Cremation Act 1902 s 62 (cremation service fees): 1986 Measure s 10. Every draft order must be laid before the General Synod and if it is approved by it, whether with or without amendment, the draft order as so approved must be referred to the Council: s 2(1) (amended by SI 1998/1715). Where a draft order is referred under the foregoing provision: (a) if it has been approved by the General Synod without amendment, the Council may, by applying its seal, make the order; (b) if it has been approved with amendment the Council may either (i) by applying its seal make the order as so amended or (ii) withdraw the draft order for further consideration in view of any amendment made by the General Synod. An order does not come into force until it has been sealed by the Council: 1986 Measure s 2(2) (amended by SI 1998/1715).

Where the Business Committee of the General Synod (see PARA 383B) determines that an order does not need to be debated by the General Synod, then, unless (a) notice is given by a member of the General Synod in accordance with its Standing Orders that he wishes the draft order to be debated or (b) notice is so given by any such member that he wishes to move an amendment to the draft order, the draft order may for the purposes of the 1986 Measure s 2(1), (2) be deemed to have been approved by the General Synod without amendment: s 2(3) (amended by Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1995 s 14; and SI 1998/1715. The Statutory Instruments Act 1946 applies to an order sealed by the Commissioners under the 1986 Measure s 2(2) as if it were a statutory instrument and were made when sealed by the Commissioners and as if the 1986 Measure were an Act providing that any such order is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 2(4) (amended by SI 1998/1715).

During a vacancy in a benefice parochial fees which, but for the vacancy, would be paid to the incumbent of the benefice must be paid to the diocesan board of finance or to such other person as the said board, after consultation with the bishop, may direct: 1986 Measure s 3(1).

Any fee payable by virtue of an order made under this Measure is recoverable as a debt: s 7.

By virtue of Sch 2, orders for fees made under the 1962 Measure are to continue in force as if they were made under the 1986 Measure.

NOTES--Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3, see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

1 Burial on a separate occasion

In relation to the fee for a burial in a churchyard, 'on a separate occasion' means on any occasion other than following on from a service in church, for example the interment of cremated remains.

2 Burial of infant

No fee is payable in respect of the burial of a still-born infant, or for the funeral or burial of an infant dying within the period of one year after birth.

3 Funeral service

If a full funeral service is held at the graveside, the incumbent's fee is increased to that payable where the service is held in church.

4 Burial of cremated remains in churches or closed churchyards

Where cremated remains are buried in or under a church or in a closed churchyard, the fees payable to the incumbent and the parochial church council are (a) where burial is authorised by a general faculty, the same as those laid down in the above table for burial in a churchyard; (b) where burial is authorised by a particular faculty, such sums as may be determined by the chancellor, who must specify the person or persons entitled to receive them.

5 Monuments in churchyards

The fees marked (*) include fees for the original inscription. Where a monument in a churchyard is erected, or an additional inscription on a monument is made under the authority of a particular faculty, the fees payable to the incumbent and the parochial church council or either of them are such sums as may be determined by the chancellor, who must specify the persons entitled to receive them. The incumbent's fee for an additional inscription on a small cross of wood must not exceed the current fee payable to the incumbent for the erection of such a monument.

6 Monuments in churches

Where a faculty is granted in connection with the erection of a monument in a church or any additional inscription thereon, the fees payable to the incumbent and the parochial church council or either of them are to be determined by the chancellor, who must specify the person or persons entitled to receive them.

7 The incumbent's fees

An incumbent who has not executed an assignment of parochial fees to the Diocesan Board of Finance may direct, either generally or in a particular case, that all or part of any fee which is payable under these provisions is payable to the minister performing the service or duty.

8 Reservation of grave space: vaults

Payment of any of the fees prescribed by the above table does not confer any right to construct a new vault or an exclusive right to a grave or vault. Where a faculty is granted conferring rights for a period specified in the faculty, the fees payable to the incumbent and the parochial church council or either of them are to be determined by the chancellor, who must specify the persons entitled to receive them.

9 Searches in church registers, etc

The search fee relates to a 'particular search' where the approximate date of the baptism, marriage or burial is known. The fee for a more general search of a church register is negotiable with the incumbent and the parochial church council.

10 Services in crematoria and unconsecrated cemeteries

The Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 s 2 requires a minister of a parish, if requested, to perform a funeral service for defined parishioners in any appropriate crematorium or unconsecrated cemetery. The fees prescribed by the above table for such services, which are identical to the fees for services held in consecrated cemeteries, are mandatory except where a local authority or other crematorium authority has fixed charges for these services, in which case the authority's charges will apply.

Where the foregoing provisions or any order framed by the Church Commissioners is inconsistent with a private, local or personal Act affecting a parish¹, the commissioners, if requested by the parochial church council², may frame a draft scheme for the amendment or repeal of the Act to enable the foregoing provisions or any order made under them to apply to that parish³. After considering representations made to them within the time provided⁴, the commissioners may seal the draft scheme, with such amendments as they think fit⁵, and lay the scheme before Parliament⁶. The scheme comes into operation upon publication or such later date specified in it⁷, and the Act is thereupon amended or repealed to the extent provided in the scheme⁸. The commissioners may frame further schemes in substitution for, or revoke or amend, such schemes⁹.

whose right to receive fees is affected by the order and must publish in the London Gazette a notice stating they have made the order and specifying a place where copies of the order may be obtained: Sch 1 para 6.

(ii) Legal Fees

1204. Fees to legal officers.

The right of ecclesiastical judges and their officers and subordinates to receive fees formerly depended on custom but is now regulated under Measure¹.

A fees committee² may frame orders relating to fees to be demanded, taken and received by any legal officer³ for the performance of the duties of his office⁴. Orders may establish tables of fees, whether by way of substitution for or variation of existing tables or otherwise, and may revoke, alter or add to earlier orders, and may contain incidental provisions⁵. An order cannot come into operation unless it has been laid before and approved by the General Synod, and it is subject to annulment by a resolution of either House of Parliament⁶. Any fee payable under an order is recoverable as a debt due by proceedings in the county court⁷.

Fees payable to any legal officer as remuneration for the performance of his duties in connection with proceedings under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 must be fixed in the foregoing manner⁸.

1 The fees established under Measure do not cover all fees eg fees for marriage licences.

2 As to the appointment of three persons to be the fees committee, see the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 1 (3).

3 'Legal officer' means any person who carries out the duties of a legal officer in respect of work relating to the province of Canterbury or York, or any diocese, archdeaconry or cathedral church within either of those provinces, and is by law or custom required or permitted to act: ibid s 1 (2).

4 Ibid s 1 (1). The duties referred to include (1) specific duties imposed by any Act or Measure on the legal officer or on any person who delegates these duties to him (s. 1 (1) (a)); and (2) in the case of a legal secretary of an archbishop or bishop, general duties of giving advice and assistance to the archbishop or bishop, in which case the fee is a sum specified in the order payable annually, and where more than one person holds such office in one province or diocese the total amount payable to all such persons is the sum so specified (s. 1 (1) (b)). As to the extent of the Measure, see PARA 1198 note 4 ante. Fees were formerly fixed by order made under the Ecclesiastical Officers Remuneration Measure 1939 (repealed); see also the Pluralities Act 1838, s 131 (repealed); Ecclesiastical Fees Act 1867 (repealed); Incumbents Resignation Act 1871, s 17 (repealed). The Ecclesiastical Officers Remuneration Order (No. 2) 1953, S.I. 1953 No. 1709, was saved by the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1962, s 8 (2), Schedule, Part II. It has been amended by the Legal Officers Fees Order 1964, S.I. 1964 No. 1033. 1204 Fees to legal officers

TEXT AND NOTES 1-7--Replaced by Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1986.

Fees committees now replaced by the Fees Advisory Commission, detailed provisions as to which may be found in s 4 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 s 16, Sch 8 Pt II; and the National Institutions of The Church of England (Transfer of Functions) Order 1998, SI 1998/1715). The Commission may make recommendations as to the annual fees to be paid to ecclesiastical judges and legal officers in respect of the duties of their office as are specified by the Commission and as to the fees to be paid in respect of such duties performed by ecclesiastical judges and legal officers as are specified: 1986 Measure ss 5(1), 6(1) (amended by the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 Sch 6 para 2). The Fees Advisory Commission may also make recommendations as to the fees to be paid in respect of such functions performed by Diocesan Advisory Committees and archdeacons as are specified, and an order may be made to give effect to those recommendations: 1986 Measure s 6(1A) (added by the Care of Places of Worship Measure 1999 Sch 2). The Commission may also make orders giving effect to their recommendations: 1986 Measure ss 5(1), 6(1) (amended by the 1991 Measure Sch 6 para 2). 'Legal officers' means the provincial registrars, diocesan registrars, bishops' legal secretaries and chapter clerks, and the deputy provincial and diocesan registrars: 1986 Measure s 10 (amended by the 1991 Measure Sch 6 para 4). It includes the registrar of tribunals (see PARA 1350B) for the purposes of the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003: 1986 Measure s 10 further amended by 2003 Measure s 44(4)(a). 'Ecclesiastical judges' means the Dean of the Court of Arches and the Auditor of the Chancery Court of York, the Vicars General of the provinces of Canterbury and York, the Commissary General and Diocesan Chancellors and the deputies of any of them: 1986 Measure s 10 (amended by the 1991 Measure Sch 6 para 4). It includes the president and deputy president of tribunals (see PARA 1350B) for the purposes of the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003: 1986 Measure s 10 further amended by 2003 Measure s 44(4)(b).

Orders made under the foregoing provisions may contain such incidental provisions as the Commission considers necessary or desirable (including provision for payments in respect of reasonable expenses incurred by ecclesiastical judges and legal officers on travel, subsistence, accommodation and the holding of court hearings) and must be laid before the General Synod. They do not come into force until approved by the General Synod: ss 5(2), (3), 6(2), (3) (ss 5(2), 6(2) amended by the 1991 Measure Sch 6 para 2). Where the Business Committee of the General Synod (as to which see PARA 383B) determines that either an order under the 1986 Measure s 5(1) or 6(1) does not need to be debated by the General Synod, then unless notice is given by a member of the General Synod in accordance with its Standing Orders that he wishes the order to be debated, or, in the case of an order under s 6(1) notice is so given by any member that he wishes to move an amendment to the order and at least 25 other members of the Synod indicate when the amendment is called that they wish the amendment to be moved, the order is deemed to have been approved without amendment: ss 5(4), 6(4) (both amended by the 1991 Measure Sch 6 para 2; and SI 1998/1715). The Statutory Instruments Act 1946 applies to an order under the 1986 Measure ss 5, 6 as if it were a statutory instrument and were made when so approved and as if 1986 Measure were an Act providing that any such order is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: ss 5(5), 6(5).

By virtue of Sch 2, orders made under the 1962 Measure continue in force as if made under the 1986 Measure. For current fees, see the Legal Officers (Annual Fees) Order

2009, SI 2009/2107, and the Ecclesiastical Judges, Legal Officers and Others (Fees) Order 2009, SI 2009/2105.

1207. Easter offerings.

Easter offerings were a well-known and widely recognised form of contribution to the emoluments of the clergy, as are Easter offerings in the modern sense of allocating alms and other collections to the incumbent¹.

It is directed by rubric in the Book of Common Prayer that yearly at Easter every parishioner shall reckon with the parson, vicar or curate, or his or their deputy or deputies, and pay to him or them all ecclesiastical duties accustomably due, then and at that time to be paid².

Easter offerings are due of common right from every householder at the rate of one new penny³ for every member of his family over the age of sixteen⁴, unless a larger sum is due by custom⁵.

Easter offerings are assessable to income tax as profits accruing to the incumbent by reason of his office⁶.

1 Cooper v Blakiston [1907] 2 KB 688 at 700, CA; affd. sub nom. Blakiston v Cooper [1909] AC 104, HL. Following a decision of the General Synod of February 1975 most dioceses are likely to introduce in 1976 a system of calculating clergy incomes under which, in assessing the need for augmentation of stipends, any Easter offering will be counted as income and will consequently no longer have the effect of being a bonus.

2 Book of Common Prayer, rubric at the end of the Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion. Every person who by law or custom ought to make or pay any offering is bound, if he has not already paid in the preceding year, to pay at Easter: Tithes and Offerings (1548) (see note 5 infra).

This Act and the Tithes and Offerings (1548) were repealed by the Statute Law Revision Act 1887, s 1, Schedule, except as to tithes, offerings and duties which have not been commuted or are otherwise still payable. Easter offerings are expressly excepted from the law as to commutation of tithe: Tithe Act 1836, s 90 (prospectively repealed on the coming into operation of a scheme under the Corn Rents Act 1963, s 1: see PARA 1222 post), unless a special provision relating to them was inserted in the parochial agreement. The Acts of 1548 and 1695 remain in force in respect of such Easter offerings as are still payable, but are probably obsolete. If the custom to pay a particular sum is disputed in good faith the justices' jurisdiction is ousted: R v Kidd (1866) 16 LT 203.

6 Blakiston v Cooper [1909] AC 104, HL: see further INCOME TAXATION. If two Easters fall within the same tax year whereas an Easter does not fall within an adjoining tax year the Inland Revenue will normally allow the offerings to be spread over both years. Whitsun offerings are often given to assistant curates by analogy with Easter offerings given to incumbents. These Whitsun offerings are similarly taxable: Slaney v Starkey [1931] 2 KB 148.

Tithes which arise merely and immediately from the ground, such as grain of all sorts, hay, wood, fruit and herbs, are called praedial tithes⁴. Tithes which arise from things immediately nourished by the ground, such as colts, calves, lambs, chickens, milk, cheese and eggs, are called mixed tithes⁵. Where the tithes are divided into great and small tithes, the great tithes, which are ordinarily the rectorial tithes, are those of corn, hay and wood, and the small tithes, which are ordinarily the vicarial tithes, are the remainder of the praedial tithes, and the mixed and personal tithes¹.

UPDATE

1209-1223 Tithes, Payments in Lieu of Tithe and other Payments

Tithe redemption annuities chargeable under the Tithe Acts 1936 and 1951 were extinguished as from 2 October 1977 and the relevant statutory provisions were repealed accordingly: Finance Act 1977 s 56, Sch 9 Pt V (repealed: Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004). All tithe records have been transferred to the Public Record Office: SI 1981/232.

1211. Land regarded as exempt from tithes.

Although tithes were primarily payable in respect of all land which was not naturally barren, the following land was regarded as exempt:

- (1) forest land while in the occupation of the Crown or its lessee¹;
- (2) church land or glebe of a parish while in the occupation of the parson or incumbent of the parish in his ecclesiastical capacity², but not the glebe of another parish³;
- (3) land in the occupation of an owner deriving title from one of the privileged orders, Cistercians, Templars or Hospitallers⁴;
- (4) land held free and discharged from tithe by one of the greater monasteries at the time of their dissolution⁵;
- (5) land in respect of which an arrangement, called a composition real, had been made by the owner of the tithe, with the consent of the Ordinary and the patron, that the land should be discharged from tithe⁶;
- (6) land in respect of which an arrangement, called a modus, could be proved to exist for the discharge of the liability in some other customary mode⁷;
- (7) land in respect of which a prescriptive right not to pay tithes can be shown to have arisen against the Crown or any lay person not being a corporation sole or any corporation aggregate, or a discharge from tithe can be proved, or non-payment or the payment of a modus can be proved for thirty years⁸ without any written consent to such non-payment or payment of a modus⁹, or, where the tithe is claimed by a corporation sole, non-payment or payment of a modus can be proved during two incumbencies and three years or sixty years, whichever is the shorter period¹⁰.

3 The maxim 'ecclesia ecclesiae decimasolvere non debet' (a church need pay no tithes to a church) is confined to ecclesiastical persons belonging to the same church: Warden etc of St Paul's v Dean of St Paul's (1817) 4 Price 65 at 74; Sheris v Baskerville (1714) 1 Eag & Y 709.

5 The greater monasteries of the yearly value of £ 200 or upwards were dissolved by the Suppression of Religious Houses Act 1539, and by s 17 (repealed) the King and every other person who should have any parsonages appropriate, tithes, pensions and portions and other hereditaments of those monasteries should enjoy them discharged and acquitted of payments of tithes as freely and in as large and ample a manner as the abbots or other ecclesiastical governors of them had. The Suppression of Religious Houses Act 1539 was repealed, except for s 19, by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1969. A list of the greater monasteries is given in 3 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 690-695. Land held free by an alien monastery which passed to the Crown, and thence through lay hands to a greater monastery, are not exempt: Page v Wilson (1821) 2 Jac & W 513.

6 A composition real was where the present incumbent with his patron and Ordinary agreed by deed or by fine in the King's court that certain land should be freed and discharged from all manner of tithes in specie by reason of sown land or other real recompense given to the parson in lieu thereof: 2 Co Inst 490; Ekins v Dormer (1747) 3 Atk 534; A-G v Bowles (1754) 3 Atk 806 at 809.

7 'Modus decimandi' is money or other thing of value given annually in lieu of tithes: Termes de la Ley. A modus must be certain and invariable, beneficial to the parson himself, and different from the thing compounded for. As to the difference between a modus and a composition real, see Ekins v Dormer (1747) 3 Atk 534.

8 The exemption is absolute after sixty years: Tithe Act 1832, s 1. As to the evidence of non-payment required, see Salkeld v Johnston (1849) 1 Mac & G 242. Where a modus is set up as existing from time immemorial it need not be proved for each of the sixty years fixed by the Act for an indefeasible prescription, but the evidence is liable to be rebutted by proof of payment of tithe in kind before the sixty years: Earl of Stamford v Dunbar (1845) 13 M & W 822. Where the tithes were commuted before the time limited had expired, the time under the Act ceased to run: A-G v Earl of Durham (1882) 46 LT 16.

9 The consent must be expressly given for that purpose, in accordance with the requirements of the Tithe Act 1832, s 1: Toynbee v Brown (1848) 3 Exch 117.

10 Tithe Act 1832 (commonly called Lord Tenterden's Act), s 1. Mere non-payment of tithes apart from the Act is no evidence to defeat the title even of a lay impropiator (Andrews v Drever (1835) 3 C1 & Fin 314, HL), but no action to recover tithes may be brought by the Crown or any spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole after the expiration of thirty years after accrual of the right or by any other person after twelve years: see the Limitation Act 1939, ss 4 (1)-(3), 31 (1).

UPDATE

1209-1223 Tithes, Payments in Lieu of Tithe and other Payments

Tithe redemption annuities chargeable under the Tithe Acts 1936 and 1951 were extinguished as from 2 October 1977 and the relevant statutory provisions were repealed accordingly: Finance Act 1977 s 56, Sch 9 Pt V (repealed: Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004). 1212. Tithe rentcharge.

The inconvenience of collecting tithe in kind and the fluctuating nature of the income derived from it has led to the compounding of tithes from very early times, voluntary compositions being called 'modus' or compositions real¹ and compositions by local or general statutes being called 'corn rents'² or tithe rentcharges. In 1836 a procedure was provided for the commutation of all tithes into tithe rentcharges either by agreement or by compulsion³, and in fact almost all tithes have been so commuted. Tithe rentcharge has now been extinguished, with an exception of little practical importance⁴, and it is no longer possible to commute tithes into tithe rentcharge⁵.

Instead of tithe rentcharge the landowner⁶ now pays to the Crown a redemption annuity, payable for sixty years from 2nd October 1936⁷, at the end of which (or sooner if the annuity is redeemed⁸) the land formerly subject to tithe will be absolutely freed from tithe, tithe rentcharge or any similar charge⁹. The rentcharge owner was compensated by the issue of redemption stock, guaranteed by the Crown¹⁰, and thus the connection between the tithe payer and the tithe owner has been finally severed.

Tithe rentcharge which, in 1936¹¹, was vested in the same person as the land out of which it issued was extinguished without any subsequent liability to pay a redemption annuity or right to redemption stock¹².

2 Tithes commuted for payments by statutes passed before 1836 are usually referred to as corn rents: see PARA 1222 note 1 post.

5 Tithe Act 1951, s 10 (1), prospectively repealed by the Corn Rents Act 1963, s 3 (4), Schedule, on the coming into operation of a scheme under s 1: see PARA 1222 post.

6 For the purposes of the Tithe Act 1936, 'owner' means the estate owner of the fee simple except where the land is subject to a lease for a term of more than fourteen years at less than a rackrent, in which case it is the estate owner in respect of the term: s 17 (1), (3). If there is more than one such lease the owner is deemed to be the estate owner of the term on which the others are reversionary: s 17 (2). Where the land is held by a nominal trustee (as in the case of charitable or public trusts) or by the Public Trustee in circumstances in which he is not entitled to act in the trust, the managing trustees or the persons beneficially interested in the land are deemed to be the owners: s 17 (4). A highway authority is an owner within the meaning of s 17 (1): see Tithe Redemption Commission v Runcorn UDC [1954] Ch 383 at 388, [1954] 1 All ER 653, CA. The owner of the land in respect of which an annuity is charged is ascertained in accordance with the Tithe Act 1951, s 5, Sch. 1.

All tithe rentcharge was extinguished on 2nd October 1936¹. 'Tithe rentcharge' means tithe rentcharge issuing out of land and payable in pursuance of the Tithe Acts², including a corn rent converted into a rentcharge under those Acts³ and extraordinary tithe rentcharge, but not including a rentcharge payable⁴ in respect of the tithes on any gated or stinted pasture or a sum or rate payable for each head of stock turned on land subject to common rights or held or enjoyed in common⁵. Therefore there has not been extinguished (1) tithe rentcharge which had been awarded on commutation but of which the apportionment has not been confirmed⁶; (2) all tithes which have not been commuted; and (3) those payments expressly excluded from the Tithe Acts of which the most important are tithes of fishing⁷ and tithes payable by rates⁸.

Persons interested in tithe rentcharge which was extinguished in 1936¹ were compensated in respect of its extinguishment by the issue of redemption stock, charged by way of guarantee on the Consolidated Fund². The amount of stock to be issued was so much as would yield interest equal in amount to the gross annual value of the rentcharge³, less certain deductions⁴. Extraordinary tithe rentcharge owners were compensated on a different basis⁵. Compensation is, however, no longer payable⁶.

A sinking fund, established in the hands of the National Debt Commissioners, was started in 1942 to provide for the redemption of all outstanding stock on or before 1st October 1996, and the Treasury has the right to redeem the stock, at par, on or after 1st October 1986⁷.

Stock issued in respect of tithe rentcharges, which was vested in Queen Anne's Bounty and held on account of a benefice, became held by Queen Anne's Bounty on their general corporate account⁸. A sum was appropriated by Queen Anne's Bounty to the benefice in lieu of the amount of stock issued in respect of that benefice and became applicable for the augmentation of the benefice⁹, subject to withholding an amount for the tithe maintenance fund¹⁰.

1216. Functions of Commissioners of Inland Revenue.

The Tithe Redemption Commission, established in 1936¹, was dissolved and its functions were transferred to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue on 1st April 1960². The commissioners, as the successors of the Tithe Redemption Commission, are charged with the duty of determining the amount of stock to be issued and the persons entitled to receive the stock issued, of determining what redemption annuities were to be charged and with the general duty of executing the provisions of the Tithe Act 1936³. In making such determinations the commissioners may hold inquiries, and before reaching any decision must give interested parties an opportunity of making representations⁴. In the case of settled land, the tenant for life and not the remainderman must bear the payment of redemption annuities⁵.

The provisions of the Arbitration Act 1950⁶ apply to proceedings before the commissioners with respect to the administration of oaths, the correction of mistakes and errors in awards, the summoning and attendance and examination of witnesses, the costs of proceedings and the statement in the form of a special case for the decision of the court of any question of law arising in the course of the reference⁷. Subject to such an appeal on a question of law by way of special case a determination of the commissioners is binding and conclusive for all purposes⁸.

The commissioners must keep records of determinations, ascertainment and orders made by them⁹, and these records and other documents must be open to inspection by any person during usual office hours¹⁰. Copies or extracts may be taken¹¹ and, if duly certified, are admissible in evidence¹².

Where in any financial year the commissioners' proceedings include items relating to matters other than of routine which are not dealt with in accounts for the year¹³, a report of them must be sent to the Treasury and appended to the accounts¹⁴.

As regards fees paid before the transaction of business the commissioners have a discretion to repay them in whole or in part if the business is not transacted or not wholly transacted: s 16 (3). The power to make an order is exercisable by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of the House of Commons: s 16 (5). 1217. Redemption annuities.

In the place of the extinguished tithe rentcharges¹ an annuity called a 'redemption annuity' is charged on land which bore tithe rentcharge, payable to the Crown from 2nd October 1936 to 1st October 1996². The amount payable under the redemption annuity is to bear the same proportion to the amount of the rentcharge as £91.56 bears to £100, in the case of agricultural land, and as £105 bears to £100 where none of the land is agricultural land³. Annuities charged in the place of extraordinary tithe rentcharge are 4 per cent of the capital value of the land⁴ and are in all cases borne by the owner⁵ of the fee simple⁶.

Owners of land subject to redemption annuities may voluntarily redeem the annuities at any time or may, in certain circumstances, be compelled to redeem them by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue⁷.

In order to secure that not more than one annuity is charged in respect of any given land, the commissioners have power to apportion and consolidate annuities⁸ and may also, with Treasury consent, extinguish annuities where the cost of collection and management is excessive in relation to their value⁹.

Redemption annuities are payable in one yearly sum on 1st October¹⁰. They are incumbrances which it is an offence on a vendor's part fraudulently to conceal¹¹ and are overriding interests for the purposes of land registration¹², but they are not registrable as land charges¹³. For income tax purposes five-sixths of any instalment may be deducted in computing the total income of the payer for the year of assessment in which it becomes payable¹⁴, but no deduction in respect of income tax may be made from any instalment of an annuity¹⁵.

Where there is a change of ownership in any estate or interest in land in respect of which an annuity is charged, it is the duty of the assignor of the estate or interest to furnish particulars to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue of the transfer and of the new owner within one month of the execution of the instrument¹⁶. Failure to furnish these particulars is an offence¹⁷.

As to the transfer to the commissioners of the functions of the Tithe Redemption Commission, see PARA 1216 ante. Tithe redemption annuities chargeable under the Tithe Acts 1936 and 1951 were extinguished as from 2 October 1977 and the relevant statutory provisions were repealed accordingly: Finance Act 1977 s 56, Sch 9 Pt V (repealed: Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004). 1218. Registration of redemption annuities.

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue have power to prepare and seal a register of annuities charged in respect of land in any district where it appears to them expedient to do so owing to circumstances making it difficult for the existence, amount or incidence of the annuities to be ascertained¹. The amount of every annuity charged in the district in respect of which the register is prepared must be specified in the register and the land charged must be indicated on a map, sealed by the commissioners, on the same date as the register². Before sealing an annuities register the commissioners must determine the various matters of which particulars must be entered only after giving any person who satisfies them that he has an interest in the subject matter of the register an opportunity to make representations³. Any person who satisfies the commissioners or the court, as the case may be, that he has such an interest may also apply for a statement in the form of a special case on any question of law arising in relation to the matter⁴.

Once sealed an annuities register is conclusive evidence of the matters set out in it unless it is shown that interested persons did not have opportunities to make representations⁵, and it is also conclusive evidence that no annuity, other than those of which particulars are comprised in the register, was charged in respect of any land in the district covered by the register at the date of sealing it⁶.

An annuities register may not be amended, except to correct accidental errors or omissions⁷, but if the circumstances again arise which make the preparation of an annuities register expedient then a fresh register may be prepared and sealed⁸.

The commissioners have power to seal a declaration that no annuity is charged in respect of any land in a district, and such a declaration is also conclusive evidence of that fact⁹. These declarations and annuities registers are, when sealed, deposited at the commissioners' principal offices¹⁰.

Redemption and reduction of annuities.

1219. Redemption and reduction of annuities.

Annuities may be redeemed compulsorily or voluntarily, the consideration money required for redemption being in both cases determined by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue in accordance with the method prescribed by the Treasury¹. Annuities subject to compulsory redemption are those of £3 or less and those chargeable in respect of land the whole of which is, or in the commissioners' opinion is about to be, divided into numerous plots². Where an annuity is redeemable compulsorily the commissioners may serve on the owner³ of the land a redemption notice specifying the amount of the consideration money to be paid for the redemption and the redemption date⁴. The annuity will thereupon be extinguished as from the day following the preceding payment date⁵.

Where after 1st October 1962 an estate or interest in the whole or part of land upon which an annuity is charged is, for consideration in money or money's worth, disposed of or created in such manner as to bring about a change in the owner of the land or that part, any annuity which is or thereafter becomes charged wholly in respect of land to which the change of ownership extends must be redeemed compulsorily⁶.

An owner of land wishing of his own motion to redeem annuities charged on his land may, by application containing the necessary particulars, require the commissioners to notify him of the amount of consideration money required for the redemption of the annuities, and on payment of the amount notified to him accordingly the annuity is similarly extinguished⁷.

An owner of land may reduce the amount of the annuities charged on his land by a payment at any time of a capital sum of not less than £25 to the commissioners⁸, who may grant him a certificate charging any land in respect of which the annuity was charged, or any estate or interest in such land, with the sum paid, or any lesser sum, and interest; and the charge so created has such priority in relation to other charges on the property as may be specified in the certificate⁹.

Where at any time a payment has been made by a person, as being the owner of any land, pursuant to a redemption notice, and it appears that the person making the payment was not in fact the owner of the land, the extinguishment, discharge or reduction of the annuity is to be treated as having taken effect; the person making the payment is not entitled to recover it¹⁰.

If the land in respect of which the annuity is charged is wholly or partially washed away by the sea or destroyed by natural causes, the commissioners have power to reduce or extinguish the annuity¹¹.

Where part of land subject to an annuity is or is about to be divided into plots the commissioners may apportion the annuity so as to be able to require the redemption of the part of the annuity chargeable in respect of the land about to be divided: Tithe Act 1936, s 11 (2).

An instalment of an annuity payable on any payment date is a debt due to Her Majesty by the person who is on that date the owner of any land in respect of which the annuity is charged¹. This is a debt owed personally by the owner², even though after the instalment accrues he assigns the land, and is recoverable by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue in any manner in which a debt to the Crown is normally recoverable³ and also in the county court by a special statutory procedure⁴.

Where an annuity, or a substituted annuity, is compulsorily redeemed⁵ the payment required by way of consideration money is similarly a debt due to Her Majesty from the person on whom the redemption notice has been duly served⁶ and may be recovered in the same manner as any other debt to the Crown⁷, and also in the county court by special statutory procedure⁸.

Debts due to Her Majesty in respect of the recovery of annuities⁹ are not subject to the Limitation Act 1939, and there is no maximum period within which action must be brought by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue¹⁰.

1221. County court proceedings.

The procedure in the county court under the provisions of the Tithe Act 1891 is preserved¹. Application for the recovery of an instalment of an annuity must be made to the county court of the district in which the land subject to the annuity is situate² but may not be made until three months after the instalment is due³. The procedure on an application is prescribed by special rules⁴, and is peculiar, although in many respects it is analogous to the procedure in an action⁵.

The county court has power to appoint a receiver, who may be nominated by the applicant⁶ and who has extensive powers to collect the rents and profits of the land subject to the annuity⁷.

If the land is occupied by the owner⁸ the court may appoint an officer to execute by means of distraint, in which case he has the same powers of distraint for the recovery of the sum ordered to be paid as were conferred by the Tithe Acts on the owner of a tithe rentcharge and no greater or other powers⁹; and if there is no sufficient distress the person entitled to the sum ordered to be recovered may proceed to obtain possession of the land¹⁰.

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue, however, may apply for the order for recovery to be executed as an order for the recovery of a debt from the respondent personally¹¹, in which case the order for recovery has the same effect as an ordinary judgment¹². Even if this has not originally been done, if the order for recovery is unsatisfied the county court may, of its own motion or on the application of the commissioners, direct that the order be executed as an order for the recovery of a debt from the respondent personally¹³.

In the absence of special directions the costs of applications abide the event¹⁴. The costs are taxed by the registrar and the ordinary scales apply¹⁵.

A party to an application or other matter under the foregoing provisions may appeal to the Court of Appeal as in any other county court proceedings¹⁶.

The applicant in all cases of recovery of instalments of redemption annuities will be the Commissioners of Inland Revenue. The judge in the county court cannot refuse to issue an order for distress because the party applying for the order has refused to nominate a person for appointment as the officer to execute the order: R v Judge Clements, ex parte Queen Anne's Bounty (1933) Times, 28th July.

As to the powers of a tithe rentcharge owner, see the Tithe Act 1836, s 81 (as to the construction of which see Swaffer v Mulcahy [1934] 1 KB 608). Under the Tithe Act 1836, s 81, not more than two years' arrears are recoverable by distress, but as redemption annuities are not subject to the Limitation Act 1939 as debts to the Crown (ss. 30 (1) proviso, 31 (1)) it seems doubtful whether, in view of the terms of the Tithe Act 1936, s 16 (3), this limitation of two years applies to distress for arrears of instalments of redemption annuity. The limitation deals with quantum only, and does not apply solely to the period immediately antecedent to the distress: Queen Anne's Bounty v Blacklock's Executors [1934] 1 KB 599, DC.

11 If as owner of the land the respondent can show that his ownership was vested in the capacity of trustee or representative and his rights of indemnity are insufficient to provide for his reimbursement, the court has a discretion to limit or release the personal liability: Tithe Act 1936, s 33.

1222. Corn rents etc.

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue may provide by scheme for the appointment and redemption of corn rents, rentcharges and money payments liable to redemption under the Tithe Acts¹. A scheme may also provide for the extinguishment of such payments in certain cases², and may include a number of other provisions³. A scheme may be revoked or amended by a subsequent scheme⁴.

Until the first scheme made by the commissioners comes into operation such payments are subject to the provisions of the Tithe Acts relating to the redemption of tithe rentcharge⁵ or to the alteration of apportionments⁶, subject to certain modifications⁷.

The Treasury has power to lay before both Houses of Parliament an order providing for the extinguishment of all or any such payments⁸.

1 Corn Rents Act 1963, s 1 (1); and see the Tithe Act 1936, s 30 (1) (prospectively repealed on the coming into operation of the first scheme: Corn Rents Act 1963, s 3 (4), Schedule). Corn rents and the other payments referred to were created by Acts of Parliament (often Inclosure Acts) in lieu of tithes, and not by virtue of the Tithe Acts, usually when common or waste land was enclosed. Such payments were made subject to redemption by the Tithe Rentcharge Redemption Act 1885 (prospectively repealed on the coming into operation of the first scheme under the Corn Rents Act 1963, s 1: see s 3 (4), Schedule). The Tithe Act 1860, s 1 (repealed), made provision for the conversion of corn rents into tithe rentcharge. Corn rents not so converted are not tithe rentcharge: see the Tithe Act 1936, s 47 (1). As to the assessment of corn rents, see Re Scremby Corn Rents [1960] 3 All ER 462, [1960] 1 WLR 1227, CA.

A scheme made under the Corn Rents Act 1963, s 1, may apply to additional payments which by virtue of any enactment or by custom are charged or otherwise payable in relation to land wholly or partly in lieu of tithes: s 1 (2). All payments which may be made subject to a scheme are referred to as 'rents': s 1 (2). In regulating the redemption of rents a scheme must provide that redemption may only be on the application or with the consent of the person who, under the scheme, would be liable to defray the consideration money: s 1 (4). Such consent may be dispensed with under the scheme where the amount payable to that person in the preceding year did not exceed £2 or where the land is, or is about to be, divided into plots: s 1 (4) proviso. A scheme is made by statutory instrument and is subject to annulment by a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 1 (7). At the date (1st May 1975) at which this volume states the law no scheme had been made under s 1.

2 Provision for extinguishment may be included in cases where a rent has been redeemed, or a person is entitled both to the rent and to the land, or all persons having an interest in the rent or the land agree: ibid s 1 (3).

3 A scheme may include provisions reproducing, with modifications, the effect of any of the enactments of the Tithe Act 1836 to 1925 applied to corn rents and other payments by the Tithe Act 1936, s 30 (1): Corn Rents Act 1963, s 1 (5) (a); and see notes 5, 6 infra. The Acts of 1836 to 1925 are listed in PARA 1213 note 2 ante. A scheme may apply to the redemption of rents any enactment relating to the redemption of tithe rentcharge: Corn Rents Act 1963, s 1 (5) (b). The scheme may also apply provisions of the Arbitration Act 1950 (Corn Rents Act 1963, s 1 (5) (c)), and may provide for the payment of fees to the commissioners (s. 1 (5) (d)).

4 Ibid s 1 (6).

5 These are to be found in the Tithe Act 1846, ss 6-12; Tithe Act 1860, ss 31, 32, 35, 38, 39; Tithe Act 1878, ss 1, 3, 5, 6; Tithe Act 1918, ss 3-6; Tithe Act 1925, ss 19, 20. All these sections (except the Tithe Act 1846, s 9, and the Tithe Act 1925, s 20) are prospectively repealed by the Corn Rents Act 1963, s 3 (4), Schedule, on the coming into operation of the first scheme under s 1: see note 1 supra.

6 These are to be found in the Tithe Act 1836, s 72; Tithe Act 1842, s 14; Tithe Act 1846, s 13; Tithe Act 1860, ss 10-16; Tithe Act 1925, s 18. All these sections are prospectively repealed by the Corn Rents Act 1963, s 3 (4), Schedule, on the coming into operation of the first scheme under s 1: see note 1 supra.

7 Tithe Act 1936, s 30 (1) (prospectively repealed: see note 1 supra); Corn Rents Act 1963, s 1 (1). The powers formerly exercised by the Minister of Agriculture are now exercised by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue: Tithe Act 1936, s 30 (1); Tithe Act 1951, s 10 (4); Tithe Redemption Commission (Transfer of Functions and Dissolution) Order 1959, S. 1. 1959 No. 1971, arts. 1 (4), 3 (2). The procedure to be followed in connection with the apportionment and redemption of annuities created under the Tithe Act 1918 is prescribed by the Corn Rent Annuities (Apportionment and Redemption) Rules 1951, S.I. 1951 No. 1535.

8 Tithe Act 1936, s 30 (2); Corn Rents Act 1963, s 2. If a resolution is passed by both Houses approving the order it takes effect from a day appointed by the Treasury: Tithe Act 1936, s 30 (2); Corn Rents Act 1963, s 2.

1223. First fruits and tenths.

First fruits, 'primitiae', or 'annates', were the first year's whole profits of the spiritual preferment according to a valuation determined in 1292¹. Tenths, or 'decimae', were the tenth part of the annual profit of each living by the same valuation¹. These payments were at first made to the Pope, but at the Reformation they were appropriated to the Crown². The Crown property in first fruits and tenths was later transferred to Queen Anne's Bounty³.

In 1852 first fruits and tenths were commuted for annual payments⁴. With the exception of some small sums payable by lay persons in respect of sinecure prebends or lay rectories, or by clergy in respect of sinecure rectories legally vested in them but not attached to any benefice with cure of souls, these have been extinguished⁵.

The Church Commissioners may determine and accept redemption money for first fruits and tenths not so extinguished⁶.

(8) PROPERTY ECCLESIASTICAL BY REASON OF OWNERSHIP OR TRUST

1224. Property owned by ecclesiastical person.

Property which is owned by any person in the capacity of a representative of the Church of England is ecclesiastical property. Where a person owns property and the relation between the person and the thing owned arises out of and can be defined by reference to spiritual functions to be performed on behalf of the Church of England, the property is owned by the person in the capacity of a representative of the Church of England, and is ecclesiastical property¹.

Thus ecclesiastical property includes every legal right and every description of property which is vested in any person for the purpose of furthering the spiritual work of the Church, such as the right to levy a church rate², the right to demand pew rents (where that right still subsists)³, and buildings or other property conveyed upon trust to be used for furthering the spiritual work of a parish or of the Church at large.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(8) PROPERTY ECCLESIASTICAL BY REASON OF OWNERSHIP OR TRUST/1225. Chapels.

1225. Chapels.

The word 'chapel' is commonly applied to a sanctuary or place of Christian worship, whether or not in connection with the Church of England¹, not being the church of a parish or the cathedral church of a diocese², but in strict legal parlance a chapel is a building consecrated³ for the purposes of divine worship in accordance with the tenets of the Church of England⁴, other than the church of a parish or the cathedral church of a diocese⁵.

A chapel may have a district attached to it called a chapelry⁶, or it may be built for the convenience in prayer and preaching only of parishioners who live far from the parish church, in which case it is called a chapel of ease⁷. A chapel which has an ancient division of a parish attached to it by immemorial custom, with the parochial rights of baptising and burying, is a parochial chapel⁸.

1 In Hornsey Local Board v Brewis (1890) 60 LJMC 48 the court apparently assumed that the nonconformist meeting house to which the case referred was capable of being a 'chapel'.

2 Oxford English Dictionary, 'Chapel'.

3 It has been said that private chapels should be consecrated by the bishop of the diocese (3 Co Inst 203), but such is not the modern practice.

4 The legal meaning of 'chapel' is a chapel of the Church of England: Caiger v Vestry of St Mary, Islington (1881) 50 LJMC 59 at 64, per Grove J. In the New Parishes Acts and Church Building Acts Amendment Act 1869 'church' and 'chapel' apply only to churches and chapels of the established Church of England (s. 14) and therefore, since it applies to a 'chapel consecrated or unconsecrated' (s. 2), the implication is that a building may be legally a chapel of the Church of England although it is not consecrated. The Interpretation Measure 1925, s 3, defines 'church' as any church or chapel consecrated for the purpose of public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England. This definition is amplified in the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 90 (1): see PARA 865 note 1 ante.

5 A chapel may be annexed to or form part of the structure of a parish church or cathedral church, and where this is the case the question whether it does or does not form part of that church is one of fact to be decided by reference to the history of the foundation: Duke of Norfolk v Arbuthnot (1880) 5 CPD 390, CA. The Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B 14 para 2, requires Holy Communion to be celebrated as frequently as is convenient in churches and chapels dependent on a parish church.

6 A chapelry is the same thing to a chapel as a parish to a church, being the precinct and limits thereof: Jacob's Law Dictionary, 'Chapelry'. Thus the Act of Uniformity 1662, s 22 (repealed), required a prayer book to be obtained by the parishioners of every parish church and chapelry, cathedral church, college and hall.

7 Jacob's Law Dictionary, 'Chapel'. In such a case sacraments and burials ought to be performed in the parish church: 2 Roll Abr 340.

8 A parochial chapelry must be coeval with the parish, but its existence may be inferred from modern usage, provided the usage is immemorial: Carr v Mostyn (1850) 5 Exch 69.

1226. Chapel of ease.

A chapel of ease, which is a chapel for the convenience of parishioners who live at a distance from the parish church¹, can only be constituted with the consent of the Ordinary, patron and incumbent². It is served either by the incumbent or a stipendiary curate of the parish, or by a minister specially appointed to it by the incumbent of the parish and removable by him, or appointed by some other person or persons in whom, in exceptional instances, the appointment is vested³, that person being, unless some exceptional provision applies, subordinate to the incumbent of the mother church, to which church all the rights of performing the sacraments appertain⁴. Such a chapel may become the parish church of an area which is constituted a new parish under the provisions of a pastoral scheme⁵.

In some cases, by a private Act of Parliament, a chapel of ease is made presentative⁶. The minister is then instituted and inducted by the bishop on the presentation of the patron⁶. In all other cases he is licensed by the bishop to the chapel⁷.

A chapel may be founded by the Sovereign without being subject to the jurisdiction of the Ordinary. A chapel so founded is called a free chapel⁸.

A declaration of redundancy may be made in respect of a chapel of ease which is no longer required as such⁹.

1227. Private and proprietary chapels.

Private chapels are chapels which persons have built at their own charge in or near their own houses in which they and their families may perform religious duties. A private chapel is repaired and maintained at the expense of the person to whom it belongs, who may appoint whom he pleases to minister there¹, although that minister, unless he is the incumbent of the parish in which the chapel is situated, and the chapel is consecrated², must be authorised by the Ordinary³ and have the consent of the incumbent⁴. The chaplain ministering in such a chapel must celebrate Holy Communion there only seldom on Sunday and other greater feast days so that the residents may resort to their parish church and there attend divine service⁵.

The attendance at divine worship in a private chapel need not be confined to the members of the owner's family, and any person or several persons together may provide a building for the purpose of celebrating divine worship and the sacraments for the benefit of such persons as desire to attend and the proprietors of the building are willing to admit⁶. Such a building is commonly called a proprietary chapel⁷. It need not necessarily be consecrated⁸.

The minister of such a chapel is appointed by the owner of the chapel or the persons having the right of appointment under the terms of any trust under which the chapel is held⁹. He must be licensed by the bishop to perform service there with the consent of the incumbent of the parish in which the chapel is situate¹⁰, and the bishop can at any time revoke the licence¹¹. A succeeding incumbent may refuse consent to his officiating under a licence granted by the bishop with the consent of the previous incumbent¹².

1229. Mission rooms.

An unconsecrated building may be used by or with the authority of the incumbent or, in his absence, the curate of a parish, as a place of assembly for the purpose of religious worship in accordance with the liturgy of the Church of England¹. When an unconsecrated building is habitually so used it is commonly called a 'mission room'. Buildings used for this and for cognate purposes, such as Sunday schools, parish halls or rooms and parochial schools, are ecclesiastical property if the purpose for which they were founded or built is a spiritual purpose². Where the question whether the purpose is a spiritual purpose can be answered by reference to a trust deed or deeds relating to the property it must be so answered, but in many cases there is either no trust deed, or the terms of the deed cannot be ascertained or are insufficient to determine the purpose, in which case the question must be answered by reference to the history of the foundation of the charity or of the erection of the building, and this history if otherwise in doubt must be ascertained by reference to the purposes for which the property has in fact been used³.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(8) PROPERTY ECCLESIASTICAL BY REASON OF OWNERSHIP OR TRUST/1230. Vesting of trust property in diocesan authority.

1230. Vesting of trust property in diocesan authority.

There are provisions¹ for the vesting in the diocesan board of finance or other diocesan authority² of certain interests in property which are acquired or held on charitable trusts, established for ecclesiastical purposes of the Church of England³.

The interests concerned are estates and interests in land⁴ and interests in personal property held or to be held on permanent trusts⁵, with certain exceptions⁶, and whereof (1) no present or past trustee⁷ is or has been any person other than an incumbent or churchwardens⁸ or an ecclesiastical corporation sole acting as a joint trustee with an incumbent or churchwardens⁹; or (2) the presently acting trustees, whether or not validly appointed, are the persons specified in head (1) above, unless acting in contravention of the terms of the trust¹⁰; or (3) the presently acting trustee is the parochial church council not validly appointed, if the trusts have immediately previously been administered by the persons specified in head (1) above, unless the latter were acting in contravention of the terms of the trust¹¹.

Upon becoming aware of any property which may be affected by the vesting provisions the diocesan authority¹² must consider whether the provisions apply to any interest in it¹³. If it considers that the provisions apply, notice of the proposed vesting must be given to the persons entitled to the general control and management of the property, the incumbent and the Charity Commissioners¹⁴. An opportunity must be given for objections and representations, which the authority must consider¹⁵. If the Charity Commissioners do not object or withdraw any objection and the authority remains of the opinion that the property is subject to the vesting provisions, the authority must, by declaration under seal, vest in itself as custodian trustee¹⁶ the interest affected¹⁷.

After 1964¹⁸ neither an incumbent nor churchwardens may acquire any interest in land or personal property to which the foregoing provisions apply, except an interest in personal property by gift or under a will, without the diocesan authority's consent¹⁹.

The managing trustees of property vested in the diocesan authority as custodian trustee under the foregoing provisions may not sell, lease, let, exchange, charge or take any legal proceedings in relation to it without the authority's consent²⁰.

1 Ie under the Incumbents and Churchwardens (Trusts) Measure 1964.

2 'Diocesan authority' means the diocesan board of finance or any existing or future body appointed by the diocesan synod to act as trustees of diocesan trust property: ibid s 1; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4 (7).

3 Incumbents and Churchwardens (Trusts) Measure 1964, s 2 (1).

4 Ibid s 2 (2) (i). 'Land' includes land of any tenure, and mines and minerals, whether or not held apart from the surface, buildings or parts of buildings and any other corporeal hereditaments; also a manor, a rent and other incorporeal hereditaments and an easement, right, privilege or benefit in, over or derived from land; but not an advowson nor an undivided share in land: see s 1.

5 Ibid s 2 (2) (ii). 'Permanent trusts' means any trust of property which is a permanent endowment within the meaning of the Charities Act 1960, s 45 (3): Incumbents and Churchwardens (Trusts) Measure 1964, s 1. Any question as to whether personal property is held or to be held on permanent trusts must be determined for the purposes of s 2 by a person appointed by the bishop or, during a vacancy in a see, the guardian of the spiritualities (s. 2 (3)), but without binding the Charity Commissioners (s. 2 (3) proviso).

6 The exceptions are any estate or interest (1) vested in an incumbent (as defined below), by virtue of his office, in any church, churchyard or burial ground or in the endowments of his benefice (as defined below); (2) of an incumbent in land or buildings vested in him before 13th April 1960 by virtue of the New Parishes Measure 1943, s 17 (as originally enacted), or thereafter by virtue of s 16 (1), (2); Church Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1960, s 6 (see PARA 1081 ante); (3) vested in the Official Custodian for Charities; (4) being a church educational endowment as defined in the Diocesan Education Committee Measure 1955, s 3 (see EDUCATION vol 15(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1435); (5) being a term of years absolute for a year or from year to year or for any shorter period; (6) vested in churchwardens in the goods, ornaments and movables of the church of which they are churchwardens and in an incumbent and churchwardens (as defined below) in any other chattel: Incumbents and Churchwardens (Trusts) Measure 1964, s 2 (2).

'Incumbent' includes any minister with a separate cure of souls but not a curate in charge of a conventional district; 'endowments of the benefice' includes the parsonage house and glebe of the benefice together with all their appurtenances and easements and any land or personal property held by the incumbent under the Parsonages Measure 1938, and all incorporeal hereditaments belonging to the benefice; and 'incumbent or churchwardens' means any incumbent and the churchwardens of the parish comprising the benefice of that incumbent or of any parish comprised in any united benefice of that incumbent, and is deemed to refer to them or any of them jointly or severally: Incumbents and Churchwardens (Trusts) Measure 1964, s 1. 'Parish' means an ecclesiastical parish or district, whether old or new, the minister of which has a separate cure of souls there and includes each parish which remains a separate parish, in cases where a scheme of union provides for the union of benefices but not of parishes, but does not include a parish of which the parish church is a cathedral: s 1. It was to the corporation known as Queen Anne's Bounty that Queen Anne's Bounty that Queen Anne granted all her revenue of first fruits and tenths¹ which had become payable to the Crown after payment of them to Rome had been prohibited by statute². In the great majority of cases these or the sums payable in lieu of them ceased to be payable after 1926, and even where they survived provision was made for their voluntary redemption and consequent extinguishment³. In the rare cases where first fruits and tenths continue to be payable they are payable to the Church Commissioners as successors to Queen Anne's Bounty.

In addition Queen Anne's Bounty formerly received such portion of the profits of a benefice sequestered for non-residence as the bishop might order to be paid to them for the Bounty⁴. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners were in their corporate capacity empowered to hold a large amount of the revenues of the Church of England as one common fund¹, and to apply the same by scheme ratified in the usual manner for such purposes as they thought fit to propose².

The estates of all sees³ and all endowments and other property belonging to or held in trust for the see or the bishop, including the episcopal houses of residence⁴, suspended canonries⁵, suspended deaneries⁶, and of all subdeaneries, chancellorships, vice-chancellorships, treasurerships, provostships, succentorships, non-residentiary prebends⁶ and sinecure rectories⁷, and the separate estates of non-suspended canonries and deaneries⁸ became vested by statute in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners⁹, and the Cathedral Commissioners¹⁰ made schemes for the compulsory transfer to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners of certain parts¹¹ of the estates of all vicars choral, priest vicars, senior vicars, custos and vicars warden, vicars or minor canons and other subordinate officers performing duties in cathedral churches except Christ Church, Oxford¹², and of all land forming part of the endowment of any cathedral church except Christ Church, Oxford¹², and Manchester Cathedral¹³, or forming part of the property of any deanery, canonry, prebend, archdeaconry or office in such a church¹⁴; and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners could, with the consent of the appropriate corporation and its visitor, make schemes for the transfer to themselves of the rest of the property¹⁵ of the dean and chapter¹⁶ of the church and of the deaneries and other offices¹⁷. These transfers were made subject, in the case of the estates of sees, deans and chapters, non-suspended canonries and deaneries, prebends and archdeaconries, to various provisions for the consideration to be paid and for the re-assignment or transfer of part of the property as endowments¹⁸.

The money and revenues payable to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and carried over to the common fund included the rents and profits of land and other hereditaments vested in them¹⁹, the episcopal fund²⁰, any increase of income of ecclesiastical corporations resulting from sales, enfranchisements, exchanges, purchases or investment²¹, £1 million the produce of sales effected under the New Parishes Act 1843²², and contributions by bishops towards episcopal provisions²³.

1235. Diocesan stipends funds.

In every diocese within which a reorganisation scheme¹ had come into force, a diocesan stipends fund was opened and kept by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, into which were paid all money directed by any scheme to be so paid and any donations, legacies and other contributions which might from time to time be received for the credit of or be allocated by the bishop or the diocesan board of finance to that fund². While not all dioceses were affected by reorganisation schemes all were to some extent affected by the need for general pastoral reorganisation and accordingly the Church Commissioners were to open a diocesan stipend fund for every diocese for which such a fund had not been established, into which should be paid all money directed so to be paid by any scheme or order as respects pastoral reorganisation, and any donations, legacies or other contributions from time to time received for the credit of, or allocated to, that fund³. The power to make such schemes and orders has been repealed⁴.

On 1st April 1953⁵ the Church Commissioners opened and now keep two accounts for each diocesan stipends fund, namely a capital account and an income account, and allocated to each all money and other properties then held by them on behalf of the fund in such proportions as they determined after consultation with the bishop and the diocesan board of finance⁶. Provision was also made for the future allocation between the capital and income accounts of payments, legacies, donations, contributions and other money or property received for the credit of the fund⁷. Money or other property allocated to either account is not in fact credited direct to that account, but is taken over and held by the commissioners as part of their general fund, the accounts themselves being credited with a sum charged upon their general fund of an amount equal in value to the money or property taken over⁸. Subject to any charges imposed on it, money standing to the credit of the capital account may be appropriated as an endowment fund for any benefice within the diocese or as an augmentation of any such endowment fund⁹. Subject also to any charges on it, money standing to the credit of the income account is applied in providing or augmenting stipends or other emoluments of incumbents, or other persons declared by the bishop to be engaged in the cure of souls within the diocese¹⁰. The diocesan board of finance is entitled to be furnished with the annual accounts of the capital and income accounts¹¹.

The Church Commissioners have been given power to divide the tithe maintenance fund¹², and to transfer three-fifths of it to the capital account of the diocesan stipends fund and hold the remainder as part of the capital of their general fund¹³.

There are provisions for the making of pastoral schemes¹⁴ whereunder endowments of benefices are transferred to diocesan stipends funds and those funds are charged with the payment of stipends and remuneration¹⁵.

1236. Diocesan pastoral accounts.

On 1st April 1969¹ the Church Commissioners came under a duty to open and hold an account for each diocese, called the diocesan pastoral account².

Expenses incurred by or on behalf of, or under the authority or direction of, the bishop³ of any diocese or any pastoral committee⁴ or any diocesan redundant churches uses committee⁵ or the Church Commissioners for the purposes of the Pastoral Measure 1968 or any scheme or order made under it⁶, except any part of the salaries or wages of persons in the regular employment of the bishop, any diocesan board or committee or the commissioners, may be paid out of the money standing to the credit of such one or more of the diocesan pastoral accounts as the commissioners may determine⁷. The commissioners may repay out of such an account any money expended by them or by a diocesan board of finance⁸ on any property vested by or under that Measure⁹ in the commissioners or the board, as the case may be, for the purpose of furthering the disposal or use of the property¹⁰.

Where it appears to the commissioners that any money standing to the credit of a diocesan pastoral account is not required or likely to be required for meeting the afore-said expenses or expenditure they may, at the request of the diocesan board of finance, (1) apply that money by way of grant or loan to the provision, restoration, improvement or repair of churches¹¹ and parsonage houses¹² in the diocese, including the repair of any redundant building¹³ vested in the board pending the making of a redundancy scheme¹⁴, or to other purposes of the diocese or any benefice¹⁵ or parish¹⁶ in the diocese¹⁷; or (2) apply that money by way of grant or loan for the benefit of another diocese, either generally or for such of those purposes as the board may specify¹⁸; or (3) transfer that money to the capital or income account of the diocesan stipends fund¹⁹.

If at any time there is not a sufficient amount standing to the credit of a diocesan pastoral account to meet any such expenses or expenditure, the commissioners may make an advance out of their general fund²⁰ towards such expenses or expenditure and may at any time transfer from that diocesan pastoral account into their general fund the amount of that advance²¹.

1 le the date of the commencement of the Pastoral Measure 1968: see s 96 (3), and the London Gazette dated 7th February 1969.

2 Pastoral Measure 1968, s 77 (1). The commissioners also came under a duty to transfer to the diocesan pastoral account (1) the amounts standing to the credit or debit of the diocese in the expenses fund set up under the Union of Benefices Measure 1923, s 32 (repealed), and the diocesan reorganisation fund set up under the Reorganisation Areas Measure 1944, s 33 (repealed); (2) a share, determined by the commissioners to be fair and reasonable, of the money standing to the credit of the general reorganisation fund set up under s 33 (repealed) and the fund set up under the Union of Benefices Act 1860, s 22 (repealed); and (3) any money payable to the account under the provisions of the Pastoral Measure 1968 or any scheme or order made under it: s 77 (1) (a)-(c). The foregoing funds have been closed, and money which would have been paid into the fund is treated and applied as money standing to the credit of the fund: s 77 (2) (a). Money which would have been payable out of the fund is payable out of the appropriate diocesan pastoral account: s 77 (2) (b). Money which would have been payable by the diocesan board of finance to the Church Commissioners under the Reorganisation Areas Measure 1944, s 31 (1) (repealed), must be credited to the diocesan pastoral account of the diocese concerned: Pastoral Measure 1968, s 77 (3). Where by virtue of that Measure or any pastoral scheme or order any money is required to be appropriated or credited to a diocesan pastoral account the money must be taken over and held by the commissioners as part of their corporate property, and they must credit the account with an equivalent amount charged upon their general fund: Sch. 3 para 10 (1).

1236 Diocesan pastoral accounts

TEXT AND NOTES--Consolidated in Pastoral Measure 1983 ss 77(1), 78.

Every diocesan board of finance must as soon as practicable after the end of each financial year of the board prepare an account of the money paid into or out of the diocesan pastoral account during that year and must include in it a statement of the amount by which the diocesan pastoral account was in debit or credit, as the case may be, at the beginning and end of that year: s 77(3). Every diocesan board of finance must lay a copy of the account prepared before the diocesan synod: s 77(4) (substituted by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 21).

TEXT AND NOTE 2--The duty of the Church Commissioners to hold a diocesan pastoral account under the 1983 Measure s 77 is transferred to the diocesan board of finance of the diocese: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 s 1(b).

NOTE 2--The diocesan board of finance for the diocese is now under a duty to transfer to the diocesan pastoral account (1) any money payable to the account under any provisions of the 1983 Measure or any scheme or order made under it; (2) such other money as the bishop and the diocesan board of finance for the diocese determine should be credited to that account not being money for the application or disposal of which provision is made by or under any other enactment: 1983 Measure s 77(1) (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 6 para 5(a); and Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2006 Sch 4 para 6). 1968 Measure s 77(2) not reproduced. 1968 Measure Sch 3 para 10(1) now 1983 Measure Sch 3 para 10 (amended by the Pastoral (Amendment) Measure 1994 s 12), under which the commissioners must allow interest at such rate as they may determine on all sums credited to a diocesan pastoral account or the redundant churches temporary maintenance account.

TEXT AND NOTE 7--Now such expenses must be paid out of the money standing to the credit of the diocesan pastoral account: 1983 Measure s 78(1) (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 6 para 6(a)). Where such expenses are incurred in respect of more than one diocese the commissioners must, after consultation with the diocesan board of finance of each diocese concerned, determine the proportions in which the expenses are to be borne by each: 1983 Measure s 78(1A) (added by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 6 para 6(b)).

NOTE 9--See now 1983 Measure s 59 (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2005 Sch 4 para 18).

TEXT AND NOTE 10--Now the commissioners or the diocesan board of finance, as the case may be, are entitled to be repaid out of the diocesan pastoral account any money expended by them or the board on any property vested by or under the 1983 Measure in the commissioners or the board, as the case may be, for this purpose: s 78(2) (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 6 para 6(c)).

NOTES 13-16--See now 1983 Measure ss 28, 49(1), 86(1).

TEXT AND NOTES 17-19--Now where the diocesan board of finance is satisfied that any moneys standing to the credit of a diocesan pastoral account are not required or likely to be required for meeting the expenses or expenditure referred to in ibid s 78(1), (2) it may, take step (1), (2) or (3): s 78(3) (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 Sch 6 para 6(d)). In step (1), for 'making of a redundancy scheme' read 'coming into operation of arrangements under a redundancy scheme': 1983 Measure s 78(3) (amended by the Pastoral (Amendment) Measure 1994 s 9). The diocesan board of finance may also transfer those moneys to one or more other accounts or funds held by the board or apply or transfer them partly to such other accounts or funds and partly as provided in the 1983 Measure s 78(3)(a)-(c): s 78(3)(d) (added by the Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 5 para 16).

The commissioners must hold a redundant churches temporary maintenance account and must transfer into it any moneys which are payable to the account under the 1983 Measure s 52 (see PARA 1123): s 78A(1) (added by the 1994 Measure s 10). Any money transferred under the 1983 Measure s 78A(1) must be held by the commissioners as part of their corporate property and the commissioners must credit the redundant churches temporary maintenance account with an equivalent amount charged on their general fund and must allow interest at such rate as they may determine on all sums 1238. Quarterly payments to incumbents.

The net income¹ payable to an incumbent or other person entitled to receive the emoluments of a benefice² is payable by the Church Commissioners by equal quarterly payments on 1st January, 1st April, 1st July and 1st October in each year³, less, in certain cases, a small deduction to meet the cost of the system⁴. The initial estimate of the net income made by Queen Anne's Bounty in 1937 is subject to an annual review on or before 1st April in respect of the year next ensuing and any necessary revision⁵; there is also a general power to revise and adjust quarterly payments at any time as circumstances may require⁶.

In respect of such part of the benefice income as was formerly payable by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners to an incumbent or other person from time to time entitled to receive it, the Church Commissioners may submit schemes for confirmation to Her Majesty in Council providing for such income to be paid by four quarterly instalments on convenient quarterly days, each instalment being as nearly as practicable equivalent to a quarter of the whole net amount of the income after providing for deductions or outgoings⁷. Schemes may provide for a date of commencement, the manner of computing the gross amount of the income and the deductions or outgoings to be brought into account, the time and manner of making adjustments, apportionment on a change of incumbency, accounts, exclusion of certain income if desirable and other necessary matters⁸. The commissioners have power to prepare and submit supplementary or other schemes for remedying defects or supplying omissions in any existing schemes, for making alterations or additions to such an existing scheme or for substituting a new one⁹. Orders in Council confirming any such schemes are published in the London Gazette, and as soon as it is gazetted an order and the provisions of a scheme have full force and effect¹⁰.

1239. Application of augmentation money etc.

The Church Commissioners¹ have power to apply money or securities in their hands appropriated for the augmentation of a benefice² in or towards (1) the division of the residence house of the benefice into two or more parts³, in which event the diocesan bishop has power to declare one part to be the residence house of the benefice⁴; (2) improvements to the residence house and any cottage and outbuildings belonging to it, including drainage and water, gas and electricity supply⁵; (3) building, rebuilding, constructing or improving any house, cottage or other buildings on land belonging to the benefice, including drainage and water, gas and electricity supply⁶; (4) making up roads and footpaths adjoining any property belonging to the benefice and improvements to the drive, paths and gardens of the residence house⁷; (5) redemption of fee farm rents, quit rents and other fixed annual charges and annuities arising under the Tithe Act 1936⁸ charged on the property⁹; and (6) compounding of liability for the repair of a chancel for which they are liable by reason of tithe rentcharge having been vested in them for the benefice before 1936¹⁰.

The commissioners also have power, with the consent of each incumbent and of the diocesan bishop¹¹, to extinguish any permanent charge upon the whole or any part of the revenues of a benefice in favour of another benefice, by transferring from the benefice charged to the benefice entitled to the charge such part of the money or securities appropriated or held by them for the augmentation of the benefice charged as will produce an annual income equal at the date of transfer to the annual amount of the charge¹².

Subject to any charges on the income of the diocesan stipends fund¹³ by any enactment or scheme, money standing to the income account of the fund is to be applied¹⁴ in providing or augmenting the stipends or other emoluments of incumbents or assistant curates licensed under seal or other persons who are declared by the bishop to be engaged in the cure of souls within the diocese¹⁵.

1240. Stabilisation of endowments.

With a view to stabilising the income derived by benefices from certain endowments (known as transferable endowments) the Church Commissioners are empowered to make under their seal a stabilisation order in respect of these endowments or any part of them¹, specifying the benefice affected and the endowments to which it relates and the date on which the order is to take effect². Transferable endowments comprise (1) any securities held by the commissioners at the date on which the order takes effect for the benefit of the benefice otherwise than on special trusts³; (2) any annuity or instalment of any annuity payable to the commissioners under the Tithe Acts 1918 to 1936⁴ or any Act amending or extending them after the date on which the order has effect in respect of the redemption of any rentcharge, corn rents or other payments in lieu of tithe forming part of the endowments of the benefice⁵; and (3) any accumulated sinking fund held by the commissioners under the Tithe Act 1918⁶ at the date on which the order has effect which is attributable to the redemption of any such rentcharges, corn rents or payments⁷.

When such an order takes effect the endowments specified in it are held by the commissioners as part of their general fund free from any trust in favour of the benefice⁸; in exchange, the commissioners appropriate to the benefice a sum of money⁹ and their general fund stands charged with the payment to the benefice of an annual sum¹⁰.

UPDATE

1238-1248 Church Commissioners' Functions

The Church Commissioners must continue to manage their assets for the advancement of any purpose for which they held those assets immediately before 1 January 1999 (ie the date on which the National Institutions Measure 1998 came into force: see PARA 427A NOTE 1), and in so doing must have particular regard to the requirements of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840 s 67 relating to the making of additional provision for the cure of souls in parishes where such assistance is most required: 1998 Measure s 8.

Repealed: Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 Sch 8.

Provision is made by ss 1-7 (see PARA 1240A) for payments towards stipends of certain clergy following the pooling of endowments, including income from glebe, by ss 10-13 (para 1240B) for the extinguishment of certain charges and trusts and by s 14 (para 1240C) for future gifts for endowment of a benefice. Provision is made for the cessation of guarantee annuities to incumbents and certain other payments to dioceses: Stipends (Cessation of Special Payments) Measure 2005; and PARA 1240A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/7. PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(9) FUNDS AND INCOME/(ii) Church Commissioners' Functions/1240A. Payments towards stipends.

1240A. Payments towards stipends.

Where immediately before 1 April 1978 a benefice has endowment income the general fund of the Church Commissioners stands charged as from that day with the payment of an annuity towards the incumbent's stipend¹. This is called the guaranteed annuity². It is not payable during a vacancy³. The amount is either the amount of the net endowment income immediately before that day or £1,000, whichever is the less⁴. Special provisions apply where a new benefice is created by the union of two or more under a pastoral scheme coming into operation on or after the above day⁵.

However, no guaranteed annuity is payable by the Commissioners in respect of any benefice towards the stipend of the incumbent of that benefice after the cessation date⁶ or, if the benefice is vacant on 1 July 2005, after that date⁷. The Commissioners must serve a written notice on the incumbent of each benefice, except any benefice which is vacant on that date, in respect of which a guaranteed annuity is payable, informing the incumbent of the cessation of the guaranteed annuity⁸.

Where the guaranteed annuity is £1,000 and the net endowment income of the benefice immediately before 1 April 1978 exceeds that sum, the person who immediately before that day is the incumbent is entitled, so long as he continues in that office, to receive from the commissioners an annual personal grant equal to the excess⁹.

What constitutes the endowments or endowment income of a benefice, or is the amount of the net annual endowment income immediately before 1 April 1978, or is the amount of the endowment income of an archdeacon immediately before that day is to be conclusively determined by the commissioners¹⁰.

The Church Commissioners may make schemes providing for property held by them under certain private or local Acts on certain trusts to be held as part of their corporate property freed from those trusts and for property vested in others under such Acts on certain trusts to vest in them freed from the trusts¹¹.

As to payment see s 5.

⁵ If, where the scheme comes into operation on 1 April 1978 an annuity would otherwise have been payable in respect of any of the benefices or, in the case of any other scheme, an annuity was immediately before it came into operation payable in respect of any of the benefices, the commissioners' general fund stands charged as from the day on which the scheme comes into operation with the payment towards the stipend of the incumbent of the new benefice of an annuity of an amount which is either the aggregate of the annuities which would have been or were payable in respect of the benefices or £1,000, whichever is the less: Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 s 1(3), (4). As to payment see s 5.

6 le the date specified in the notice served under the Stipends (Cessation of Special Payments) Measure 2005 s 1(2) or, where the Commissioners allow a later date under s 1(3), that date: s 4(1).

8 Ibid s 1(2). In their notice the Commissioners must state that the incumbent has the right, not later than the date specified in the notice, to notify the Commissioners in writing that he wishes the guaranteed annuity to continue to be paid: s 1(2). If the Commissioners are so notified, the guaranteed annuity is to continue to be payable to the incumbent as long as he remains in office: s 1(3). However, the incumbent may at any time notify the Commissioners in writing that he no longer wishes to receive the guaranteed annuity: see s 1(4). Sections 1(1) and (2) have no effect in relation to an incumbent to whom, on 1 July 2005, a guaranteed annuity and an annual personal grant are payable and, in such a case (notwithstanding anything in the Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 s 1), the guaranteed annuity continues to be payable only so long as that incumbent remains in office: 2005 Measure s 1(5). An annual personal grant is a grant payable under the 1976 Measure s 2: 2005 Measure s 4(1). The Commissioners must pay the sums which would have been paid by way of the guaranteed annuities to the Archbishops' Council, and the Council must to pass on those payments to the income accounts of the diocesan stipends funds for allocation amongst the dioceses: see s 3.

9 Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 s 2(1). Where by means of a pastoral scheme coming into operation on or after the appointed day a new benefice is created by the union of two or more, and the person who becomes the incumbent of the new benefice was immediately before the scheme comes into operation the incumbent of any of the constituent benefices, and that person, as incumbent, would have been or was entitled to an annual personal grant under s 2(1), he is entitled to an annual personal grant of the same amount so long as he holds the office of incumbent of the new benefice: s 2(2).

Where immediately before 1 April 1978 two or more benefices are held in plurality s 2(1) applies in relation to the incumbent as if those benefices constituted one benefice, the guaranteed annuity payable towards the stipend of the incumbent of those benefices were the guaranteed annuity in respect of that one benefice, and the aggregate of the net annual endowment incomes of those benefices were the net annual endowment income of that one benefice: s 3(2). If he resigns one or more but not all of the benefices or one or more but not all is declared vacant he is entitled, so long as he continues to be the incumbent of the other benefice or benefices retained, to receive an annual personal grant of an amount determined by the commissioners after consulting the bishop: s 3(3); Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1978 s 11.

As to payment see 1976 Measure s 5.

10 Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 s 7(1), (8). Certain property and income are specifically excluded by s 7(2)-(7).

11 See ibid s 4, Schs 1, 2. However, where on 1 July 2005 such a scheme makes provision for the Commissioners to charge their general fund with annual payments to the income account of any diocesan stipends fund, no such payments may be made after that date: Stipends (Cessation of Special Payments) Measure 2005 s 2(1). The Commissioners must pay the sums which would have been paid as such annual payments to the Archbishops' Council, and the Council must to pass on those payments to the income accounts of the diocesan stipends funds for allocation amongst the dioceses: see s 3.

1243. Charges on benefices.

Where the endowment of any benefice (the 'recipient benefice') consists of or comprises an annual sum constituting a permanent charge on the endowment or any part of the endowment of any other benefice (the 'charged benefice'), the Church Commissioners may substitute for the annual sum so charged or any part of it an annual sum of the like amount, to be paid by them out of their general fund to the incumbent for the time being of the recipient benefice¹. They may then appropriate for the benefit of their general fund out of any endowment of the charged benefice held by them or payable out of their funds such portion of the endowment as will in their opinion produce an annual income equal to the amount of the annual sum so to be paid out of the general fund². Every such payment to be made out of the general fund must be secured, and every such appropriation for the benefit of the general fund must be effected by an instrument under the commissioners' common seal³.

From and after the taking effect of any such instrument the endowment of the charged benefice is discharged from the payment of the annual sum charged on it, or, as the case may be, from the payment of the part for which a payment out of the general fund has been substituted⁴.

1 Ecclesiastical Commissioners (Powers) Measure 1938, s 4 (1); Church Commissioners Measure 1947, ss 2, 18 (2). These powers are only exercisable (1) at the request of the incumbents of both benefices (s. 4 (4) (i)), or (2) after three months' written notice has been given to the incumbents of the commissioners' intention to exercise the power in relation to their benefices (s. 4 (4) (ii)).

2 Ibid s 4 (1). For the conditions of the exercise of the powers, see note 1 supra.

3 Ibid s 4 (2). The provisions of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1866, s 5 (repealed), in relation to instruments made under that section extend and apply to any instrument sealed by the commissioners for the foregoing purposes: Ecclesiastical Commissioners (Powers) Measure 1938, s 4 (2).

1244. Power to withdraw or reduce curate grants.

Where any annual or other periodical sum is payable out of the Church Commissioners' general fund towards the payment of the stipend of an assistant minister or curate for any benefice pursuant to a grant¹, and the commissioners are of opinion that the grant ought to be determined or reduced in amount, they may, with the written consent of the bishop of the diocese, by an instrument under their seal published in the London Gazette declare that the grant shall be either wholly determined or reduced to such amount as is stated in the instrument². This power to determine or reduce a grant does not prevent the commissioners from discontinuing, suspending or reducing the amount of any grant in any case where it may be lawful or competent for them without reference to the foregoing power to effect the discontinuance, suspension or reduction³.

Before executing any such instrument in relation to any grant the commissioners must give written notice to the incumbent and parochial church council of the parish concerned that the determination of the grant in whole or in part is under consideration, and that any representations made within two months by the incumbent or the council will be duly considered⁴.

Save with the written consent of the incumbent of the benefice in favour of which the grant was made, the determination or reduction of any grant in this manner does not take effect until after the first vacancy of the benefice subsequent to the date of the instrument⁵. Furthermore, where at the date of the instrument an assistant minister or curate is, under or by virtue of an engagement or employment then current, in receipt of a stipend wholly or partly provided out of the grant to which the instrument relates, the determination or reduction of the grant does not take effect until after six months from the date of the instrument or before the termination of the engagement or employment, whichever first happens⁶.

In order to give effect to the transfer, the commissioners, by notice in writing to any person to whom, on 22nd May 1946⁵, a grant towards any such stipend was payable by them, may determine the grant at the expiration of such period, not being less than seven months, as may be specified in the notice⁶.

The transfer does not affect or apply to grants of the commissioners made in consideration of capital benefactions secured for the endowment of particular curacies or other ministries, or to grants to curates in charge of conventional districts⁷.

1252. Ecclesiastical persons as owners of property.

Property may be affected with an ecclesiastical character by being vested in a person or succession of persons as its trustees for spiritual purposes¹. So far as the relation of the owner to the thing owned is concerned, a corporation is, within the limits of its powers, as capable of standing in that relation as a person or body of persons². Having regard to the necessity of securing that property given for the purpose of promoting the performance of particular functions shall be permanently devoted to that purpose and to the impossibility of any individual holder of an office affording such permanent security³, ecclesiastical property is in general vested in an ecclesiastical corporation recognised by the law as having a permanent capacity in right of some office or function of holding property, thereby securing that it shall be applied to the purpose intended⁴.

1 See PARAS 1051, 1052 ante. It does not necessarily follow that the person in whom the property is so vested is an owner of it for the purposes of the Metropolis Management Acts: Angell v Vestry of Paddington (1868) LR 3 QB 714; and see PARA 1084 ante.

1255. Ecclesiastical corporations aggregate.

A corporation aggregate may be either composed of constituent parts not essentially different, or it may be a body with one or more members or classes of members essentially differing from other members¹. Any of the constituent members may themselves be corporations², and where the members are entirely spiritual, that is to say where they are members solely in their spiritual capacities, the corporation is an ecclesiastical corporation; but even where the members are all spiritual persons, unless they are such in an entirely spiritual capacity, the corporation is not ecclesiastical unless the intention of its foundation is spiritual³.

Chapters of cathedrals are ecclesiastical corporations aggregate⁴, as are also colleges or corporations of vicars choral, priest vicars, senior vicars, custos and vicars, or minor canons⁵, which are expressly excepted from the powers of leasing given by the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts to ecclesiastical corporations in general. A hospital may be an ecclesiastical corporation⁶, depending upon the object for which it is founded⁷.

At the dissolution of the monasteries and other religious and ecclesiastical houses the property of lay rectors in them was transferred to the Crown, the transfer being confirmed by statute¹. The statutes of dissolution provided that the persons to whom any grants should be made by letters patent from the Crown should hold the land, tithes, churches, chapels, advowsons, patronages and other hereditaments so granted in like manner, form and conditions as the abbots, priors and other chief governors of the religious houses held them², but as the grants could be, and were in fact, made to laymen, who by the law of the church could not have cure of souls, the effect of the patents in these cases was that benefices which had been appropriations in the hands of a monastery became impropriations³ in the hands of the lay persons or corporations to whom they were granted, while the impropiators who received such grants were, by virtue of the patent by which the grant was made, corporations and were recognised as lay rectors⁴.

A lay rector is in some cases liable to repair the chancel⁵, and is entitled to the chief seat in it unless another person can show a prescriptive right to it⁶.

Following their separation from the civil tribunals the ecclesiastical courts¹ in time established a large field of jurisdiction in both criminal and civil matters. Among the former, in addition to all offences of the clergy and of churchwardens² in connection with their offices, jurisdiction extended to a number of crimes or offences of the laity which by the laws of the realm were of ecclesiastical cognisance, such as heresy, brawling in church or churchyard and defamation³. Among the latter were matrimonial causes and divorce and testamentary causes and the incidents to them, such as probate of wills and testaments and grants of administration and controversies touching them. Where ecclesiastical courts exceeded their jurisdiction they were restrained by prohibition⁴.

The repudiation of papal authority and the assertion of royal supremacy in the sixteenth century had certain effects in relation to the Church's judicial system, but they were slight compared with the changes affecting doctrine and liturgy¹. The ecclesiastical courts in England continued to function with no real break in continuity, although a notable change was the recognition of laymen who were doctors only of the civil law² as eligible for ecclesiastical judgeships³.

From the reign of Stephen¹, and probably before², appeals from the ecclesiastical courts had been brought to Rome. Such appeals were prohibited in 1532 as part of the Reformation³; in the following year this prohibition was confirmed and appeals from the archbishop's court and appeals which had formerly been made to Rome were directed to be made henceforth to the King in Chancery⁴. For the purpose of hearing appeals there was constituted the High Court of Delegates⁵, which remained the supreme court of appeal in ecclesiastical matters until it was superseded on 1st February 1833 by the Jurisdiction of the Queen in Council⁶.

During the nineteenth century the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts was much curtailed. Their cognisance in cases of defamation was taken away in 1855¹; two years later their jurisdiction in testamentary matters and in cases of intestacy was transferred to the Court of Probate then created² and their jurisdiction in matrimonial causes was transferred to the newly-established Divorce Court³. In 1860 their power to punish lay persons for brawling was abolished⁴.

With this curtailment of jurisdiction there came about the closure of Doctors' Commons whose members had held a virtual monopoly of the right of audience in the ecclesiastical courts. Thereafter practice in those courts was gradually thrown open to common lawyers: see Kemp, Introduction to Canon Law in the Church of England 52, 53. See also PARA 1298 note 1 post.

1265. Movement towards reform.

In the latter half of the nineteenth century there was a growing demand for reform of the ecclesiastical judicial system. This sprang largely from the controversies which had arisen over questions of ritual and ceremonial and of the legality of ornaments¹, most of which carried doctrinal implications. Much feeling was aroused by cases in which clergymen were prosecuted for offences relating to these matters. The enactment of the Public Worship Regulation Act 1874² increased rather than allayed the discontent, and there was resentment in particular of the fact that the final appellate authority in ecclesiastical causes was a non-ecclesiastical body, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council³. The multiplicity of courts and other authorities empowered to adjudicate in this sphere was an additional cause of dissatisfaction⁴.

Between 1883 and 1952 no fewer than six commissions made proposals for the reform of the system⁵. Finally, in 1954, a report⁶ was submitted by the Archbishops' Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts which led to the enactment of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963⁷.

1 See PARA 953 et seq ante.

2 The Public Worship Regulation Act 1874 (repealed) provided a procedure for enforcing the law relating to worship and ornaments by representation to the bishop and proceedings in the provincial courts of Canterbury and York, with a right of appeal to the Queen in Council: see s 9.

3 See PARA 1263 ante.

6 The Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts was entitled 'The Ecclesiastical Courts: Principles of Reconstruction'. The chairman of the commission was Lloyd-Jacob J.

7 The fact that the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical (see PARA 308 ante) were in course of preparation during this period made the reconstruction of the courts, in the commission's opinion, a matter of great urgency: Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts (SPCK 1954) 80.

1266. The Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963.

The specific purposes for which the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963¹ was designed were to reform and reconstruct the system of ecclesiastical courts of the Church of England, to replace with new provisions the existing enactments relating to ecclesiastical discipline and to abolish certain obsolete jurisdictions and fees².

Among the principal features of the Measure are the abolition of criminal jurisdiction over the laity³ and, in the case of the clergy, the creation of a distinction for the purposes of jurisdiction between offences involving and those not involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial⁴.

The obsolete jurisdictions abolished by the Measure included the power of the Queen in Council to hear and determine suits of duplex querela⁵ and the Archbishop of Canterbury's powers to cite a bishop for an ecclesiastical offence⁶ and to cite any other person for heresy⁷. Also abolished were the courts of audience⁸ and archdeacons' courts⁹, all original jurisdiction exercised by the Arches Court of Canterbury and the Chancery Court of York¹⁰, and consistory courts' jurisdiction to hear and determine proceedings for the recovery of tithes or against lay officers of a church¹¹ or by way of suit for perturbation of seat¹². It was further provided that mortuaries (or corse-presents)¹³, synodals¹⁴, procurations¹⁵ and pentecostals¹⁶ should cease to be exigible¹⁷, and that no person should be liable to imprisonment in consequence of being excommunicated¹⁸.

It was declared that nothing in the Measure should affect any prerogative of the Crown¹⁹, or the existing procedure relating to the confirmation of the election of bishops²⁰, or any power of the High Court to control the proper exercise by ecclesiastical courts of their functions²¹, or the mode of appointment, office and duties of vicars-general of provinces or dioceses²², or the visitatorial powers of archdeacons²³, or the mode of appointment, office and duties of the official principal of an archdeacon²⁴, or the jurisdiction of the Master of the Faculties²⁵.

In addition to the repeal of numerous earlier enactments²⁶ it was provided that any canon, constitution, decretal or other like instrument forming part of the law ecclesiastical which was inconsistent with the provisions of the Measure should, to the extent of the inconsistency, cease to have effect²⁷.

1 The Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 was passed on 31st July 1963 and came into operation on 1st March 1965, the day appointed by the archbishops jointly under s 88: see London Gazette, 22nd February 1965. The Measure does not extend to the Channel Islands, which for this purpose are deemed not to be included in the diocese of Winchester (s. 84; see PARA 402 ante), but it may be extended to the Isle of Man by Act of Tynwald (s. 85).

2 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, long title. The Measure has had the effect of removing many of the former grounds of complaint (see PARA 1265 ante), but it seems doubtful whether the need emphasised by the Archbishops' Commission for a drastic reduction in the number of existing courts and in the varieties of procedure has been adequately met (see the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts (SPCK 1954) 50, and PARA 1265 ante). 3 See PARA 308 ante, 1350 post.

4 See the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 14, and PARA 1352 et seq post. The two categories of offences are commonly referred to as 'reserved cases' and 'conduct cases' respectively (see the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts (SPCK 1954) 48, 80), but while the latter category is exclusive of questions of doctrine, ritual and ceremonial the former is not necessarily restricted to such questions: eg doctrinal issues might be involved in a case where the ostensible ground of complaint was failure to baptise on demand (see PARA 993 ante). A similar distinction applies to faculty proceedings. When proceedings are instituted, the choice of court and procedure will depend upon the category to which the case belongs: see PARA 1293 et seq post. One of the new courts established by the Measure, the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved, is especially concerned with cases involving matter of doctrine, ritual and ceremonial: see PARAS 1289, 1290 post.

9 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, ss 82 (2) (a), 83. Archdeacons' courts, formerly of considerable importance, had virtually ceased to perform any functions apart from visitations. The visitatorial powers of archdeacons are not affected by the Measure (see s 83 (2) (e), and PARA 500 ante); there is a saving also in respect of the official principal whom an archdeacon was by custom generally entitled to appoint to preside in his court (see s 83 (2) (f), and PARA 1273 note 11 post).

10 Ibid s 82 (2) (b). As to the Arches and Chancery Courts, which continue as appellate courts, see PARAS 1285, 1287 post.

11 Ibid s 82 (2) (c). This provision would seem to apply to any proceedings against lay officers which are (in a wide sense) of a disciplinary nature; eg proceedings for the removal from office of a churchwarden on the ground of misconduct: see PARA 547 ante. Jurisdiction in respect of ecclesiastical offences by lay persons in general has, in effect, been abolished by other provisions of the Measure: see PARA 1351 post.

12 Ibid s 82 (2) (c). As to the courts' present jurisdiction, see PARA 1284 post. As to perturbation of seat, see PARA 555 ante.

13 'Mortuaries' or 'corse-presents' were oblations or gifts to the parish church, which were originally required at the time of a person's death: see Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 685.

14 'Synodals' were payments due to a bishop from his clergy, usually on the occasion of a synod or visitation: Ayl Par 433.

15 See PARA 491 note 10 ante.

16 'Pentecostals' or 'Whitsun-farthings' were oblations associated with the duty of attendance at the cathedral as the mother church of the diocese: see Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 1244.

1267. Status of ecclesiastical courts.

Although the former jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts has been much reduced¹ they remain, within the sphere of their jurisdiction, as unfettered as is the High Court in temporal causes². Accordingly an order of certiorari does not lie from the High Court to an ecclesiastical court³. In appropriate cases, however, the High Court may exercise a measure of control over ecclesiastical courts by orders of prohibition and mandamus⁴.

Ecclesiastical courts are not inferior courts in the sense that the Divisional Court can treat them as such for the purpose of examining their records, and the reason certiorari has never issued is that it would otherwise remove into the Queen's Bench Division proceedings not capable of being determined there: see JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARA 697. Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(1) THE ECCLESIASTICAL JUDICIAL SYSTEM/(ii) Status and Scope of Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction/1268. Prohibition.

If an ecclesiastical court exceeds its jurisdiction and powers by misconstruing a statute¹, or by hearing or determining a question of a freehold or other legal right², or any other matter which is not within its jurisdiction³, or by hearing or determining a matter according to rules which are contrary to the common law of the realm⁴, or by violating the rules of natural justice⁵, it is liable to be restrained from proceeding in the matter⁶ by a prohibition issuing out of the High Court of Justice⁷. It seems that all ecclesiastical courts and appellate bodies, including the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council when exercising its jurisdiction in an ecclesiastical suit, are probably liable to prohibition⁸.

Prohibition is never granted where the ecclesiastical court has clear jurisdiction unless the court is proceeding in a manner contrary to the principles of the common law⁹, nor will it issue where the court has committed an irregularity or error in a matter of practice or a mistake in judgment in a case in which it has jurisdiction¹⁰. Further, it will not be granted where one object of the suit is within the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical court since it is to be presumed that the court will not exceed its jurisdiction¹¹. Again, if in a suit within the cognisance of the ecclesiastical court a temporal matter incidentally arises, that court has a right to determine it and no prohibition goes¹².

In restraining excess of jurisdiction in the ecclesiastical courts the temporal courts are not bound by a decision of even the highest court of appeal in ecclesiastical matters¹³. An order of prohibition can be applied for even after sentence¹⁴, but the order will not be granted on such an application unless the sentence was clearly founded on matters not within the court's jurisdiction¹⁵.

However, it is thought that it would probably be within the jurisdiction of an ecclesiastical court to try a question as to the existence of a custom regulating the number of churchwardens or the manner in which they are chosen: see PARA 543 ante. 1270. Scope of ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

The present jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts is limited to (1) protecting land consecrated to ecclesiastical purposes and everything on or in such land by the grant or refusal of faculties to authorise works in connection with it¹, and by making appropriate orders against persons who execute any such works without a faculty²; (2) adjudicating upon and enforcing some other civil rights in connection with ecclesiastical business and property³; and (3) enforcing the discipline of the clergy⁴.

The jurisdiction of ecclesiastical courts does not, of course, embrace the whole range of ecclesiastical law, part of which falls to be enforced by the temporal courts⁵. Among the matters dealt with by the temporal courts are appeals relating to clergy pensions⁶, certain proceedings where a bishop refuses to admit to a benefice⁷, proceedings to enforce a liability to repair a chancel⁸, and proceedings to enforce an order relating to the deposit of parochial registers and records⁹. Subject matter is, however, no certain test in ascertaining what is the appropriate procedure for enforcement¹⁰. The temporal courts may exercise certain supervisory jurisdiction over ecclesiastical courts and officers¹¹, and on a matter of ecclesiastical law a temporal court is not bound by the decision of the highest ecclesiastical court¹². The temporal courts will, however, be slow to intervene in an ecclesiastical matter in which the ecclesiastical courts have jurisdiction¹³.

1270 Scope of ecclesiastical jurisdiction

NOTE 4--The 1963 Measure similarly applies to deacons in a team ministry to whom the 1983 Measure s 20(3A) (see PARA 870) applies: see now the Pastoral Measure 1983 s 20(9), amended by the Team and Group Ministries Measure s 1(8).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(1) THE ECCLESIASTICAL JUDICIAL SYSTEM/(ii) Status and Scope of Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction/1271. The binding force of precedent.

1271. The binding force of precedent.

The doctrine of the binding force of precedent¹ came to be fully accepted in English ecclesiastical law in the nineteenth century², and statutory recognition of the doctrine is to be found in the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963³. The extent and effect of its application to decisions of the new courts created by that Measure remain to be worked out in practice⁴, but certain general propositions can be formulated, and instances can be given of certain specific applications of the doctrine for which warrant already exists.

In general, courts are bound to follow decisions on questions of law given by higher courts, namely by courts exercising a superior jurisdiction in the area concerned. Thus decisions of the Arches Court of Canterbury and the Chancery Court of York are binding on consistory courts in the provinces of Canterbury and York respectively⁵. The Arches and Chancery Courts in their turn are bound by any applicable decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council⁶.

A decision given by a court of co-ordinate jurisdiction, although it may be of great persuasive value, has no binding force. Thus a decision of the Arches Court does not bind the Chancery Court, nor vice versa; and a consistory court is not bound by a decision of the consistory court of another diocese⁷.

Where an earlier decision of the same court is cited as a precedent there may be some uncertainty as to its binding effect. Where the court concerned is a final court of appeal, the rule of stare decisis may occasionally be relaxed. Thus the Privy Council has been prepared in appropriate cases to examine the reasons for a previous decision and to give effect to a different view of the law⁸. It has been suggested that a similar latitude would be allowable in the Arches Court or the Chancery Court⁹. If that is correct, it is hard to see why the judge of a consistory court (which is a court of first instance only) should be denied the right to reconsider a question of law decided previously in the same court¹⁰, but hitherto the consensus of judicial opinion seems to have been against the existence of such a right¹¹.

The Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 declares that in relation to matters of doctrine, ritual and ceremonial neither the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved nor a Commission of Review is bound by any decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council¹². It is also provided that a decision of a previous Commission of Review will be binding on a commission subsequently appointed in any matter within the jurisdiction of that commission except in regard to a matter on which new information or evidence is adduced which was not before the commission on the previous occasion¹³.

1 As to the doctrine of the binding force of precedent as applied in the civil courts, see Cross, Precedent in English Law (2nd Edn), and see PARAS 955-958 ante. There is reason to think that cases cited as authorities in writings on ecclesiastical law have sometimes been given undue weight, partly through failure to observe the distinction between the ratio decidendi and an obiter dictum, and partly because the decision of a single court of first instance has been treated as establishing a rule of general application.

2 Among the factors held to have contributed to this development were the influence of Sir William Scott (Lord Stowell), the systematic reporting of ecclesiastical cases, the substitution in 1832 of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council for the High Court of Delegates as the final court of appeal in ecclesiastical matters, and (especially after the dissolution of Doctors' Commons under the Court of Probate Act 1857: see PARA 1298 note 1 post) the growing influence of common lawyers at the expense of those who had been trained according to the tradition of the civil and canon laws (see the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts (SPCK 1954) 13, 27, 28; Kemp, An Introduction to Canon Law in the Church of England (1957) 73 et seq.). See also PARA 1264 ante.

3 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, ss 45 (3), 48 (5), (6): see notes 12, 13 infra.

4 An example of a novel question which might arise would be whether a decision of the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved, sitting as a court of first instance for the trial of a person charged with an offence involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial, would be binding on a consistory court in a faculty case involving matter of doctrine etc. in which appeal would lie to the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved in its capacity as an appellate court. See also note 6 infra. As to the courts mentioned in this note, see PARA 1272 et seq post.

5 In Stephenson v Langston (1804) 1 Hag Con 379 at 381, Sir William Scott described a decision of the Arches Court as binding on the Consistory Court of London, adding that if it was not thought founded on law it must be set right by the superior court. In Re St Mary, Tyne Dock (No. 2) [1958] P 156 at 159, [1958] 1 All ER 1 at 8, 9, Deputy Chancellor Wigglesworth (later Dean of the Arches) observed that a judgment of the Arches Court of Canterbury is not a binding authority in the province of York but is naturally treated with the greatest respect, in particular because the judge of the two provincial courts is required by statute to be the same person: see PARA 1286 post.

6 There are many reported decisions of the Privy Council (given before the commencement of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963) relating to matters of doctrine, ritual and ceremonial, in respect of which the Privy Council no longer has jurisdiction: see PARA 1288 post. Such decisions are not binding on the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved or on a Commission of Review (ss. 45 (3), 48 (5)), but this exemption does not extend to the consistory courts, and it seems that in strict law they are not relieved of the obligation to follow Privy Council decisions when dealing with matters of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial which arise in faculty cases. The Arches and Chancery Courts no longer have jurisdiction in cases involving such matters, but they are empowered to hear faculty appeals not involving such matters (with the possibility of further appeal to the Privy Council): ss 7 (1), 8 (1) (see PARAS 1287, 1288 post). In addition they have the functions of a final court of appeal in disciplinary proceedings against priests and deacons not involving matters of doctrine etc. (see PARA 1370 post) and in certain other proceedings (see PARA 1287 post); and a question might be raised whether, when thus acting as final courts of appeal, they are bound by decisions of the Privy Council as a higher court.

7 See the observations of Chancellor Garth Moore in Rector and Churchwardens of Bishopwearmouth v Adey [1958] 3 All ER 441 at 445, 446, [1958] 1 WLR 1183 at 1189, and in Re Rector and Churchwardens of St Nicholas, Plumstead [1961] 1 All ER 298 at 299, [1961] 1 WLR 916 at 918.

8 Read v Bishop of Lincoln [1892] AC 644 at 654, 655, PC; see also Ridsdale v Clifton (1877) 2 PD 276, PC. It was recognised that any such discretion must be exercised in a manner consistent with respect for interests in property etc. acquired in reliance on the previous decision. Cf. the provisions of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 48 (6): see PARA 1292 post. See also PARA 956 ante.

9 See Re Lapford (Devon) Parish Church [1955] P 205, [1954] 3 All ER 484, CA, an appeal from the Exeter Consistory Court, where Chancellor Wigglesworth had held that he was constrained by a decision of the Arches Court to refuse a faculty which he would otherwise have had no hesitation in granting. In the appeal proceedings the Dean of the Arches (Sir Philip Baker-Wilbraham), in discussing the question of re-opening previous decisions of ecclesiastical courts, expressed the opinion that he was less strictly bound (sc. than the chancellor) and that some latitude might be allowable, although strong reason would be needed to justify him in departing from his predecessor's decision. In the event the appeal was dismissed.

10 It is perhaps relevant to point out that in the High Court a judge is not bound by the decision of another judge (past or present) of that court.

11 In Grosvenor Chapel, South Audley Street (1913) 29 TLR 286, Chancellor Kempe, in the Consistory Court of London, considered himself bound by a decision given by a predecessor in the same court (Chancellor Tristram), although he did not agree with it. In Re Rector and Churchwardens of St Nicholas, Plumstead [1961] 1 All ER 298, [1961] 1 WLR 916, Chancellor Garth Moore, adjudicating on a similar matter, in respect of which he shared the view of Chancellor Kempe, considered that he was not bound by the decision of Chancellor Tristram because it was given in a different consistory court: cf. note 7 supra.

12 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, ss 45 (3), 48 (5). This seems to leave open the question whether decisions of the Privy Council respecting other matters are binding on these courts or either of them. For an indication of the reasons for this provision, see PARA 1265 ante.

13 Ibid s 48 (6). This provision would appear to be more restrictive in its effect than the current practice of the House of Lords, for which see Note [1966] 3 All ER 77, [1966] 1 WLR 1234, HL.

Provision is made in the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 for a number of courts constituted on a permanent basis. The Measure also provides for the appointment, when required, of (a) a commission appointed by the Upper House of the convocation of the relevant province or by the Upper Houses of the Convocations of both provinces⁵, and (b) a Commission of Review appointed by Her Majesty⁶.

1273. Other courts.

The Benefices Act 1898 provides for the hearing of appeals against a bishop's refusal (otherwise than on the grounds of doctrine or ritual) to institute or admit a presentee to a benefice by a court consisting of the archbishop of the relevant province and a judge of the Supreme Court nominated by the Lord Chancellor¹. If the issue is an archbishop's right to refuse to institute or admit, the court is constituted of the other archbishop and the judge². The court is a court of record and is held in public³. It has the same powers as the High Court has of administering oaths, requiring the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents and as to the payment and recovery of costs⁴.

The Pastoral Measure 1968 provides for the constitution and jurisdiction of an appeal tribunal for each of the two provinces, having jurisdiction in cases concerning compensation payable to the clergy for loss suffered in consequence of pastoral reorganisation⁵.

The Court of Faculties⁶ of the Archbishop of Canterbury⁷ has jurisdiction over the appointment and removal of notaries public⁸ and the issuing of such faculties and licences as the archbishop can grant in the province of York as well as in his own province⁹. The officer who presides over it is called the Master of the Faculties, and is the same individual as the Dean of the Arches¹⁰.

Archdeacons' courts have been abolished¹¹.

2 Ibid s 3 (6).

3 Ibid s 3 (1). The court fees are paid over to the Church Commissioners' general fund (as to which see PARA 1234 ante), and out of that fund the commissioners defray the court's expenses: see s 11.

5 See the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 25, Sch. 4 para 14, and PARA 890 ante.

6 The word 'faculty' signifies a privilege or special dispensation granted to a person by favour and indulgence to do that which by the law he cannot do: Termes de la Ley 324.

The origin of the jurisdiction is apparently to be found in the transfer of legatine powers to the Archbishop of Canterbury by the Ecclesiastical Licences Act 1533. This transfer is also the origin of the Lambeth degrees, as to which see PARA 433 note 5 ante.

11 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 82 (2) (a). However, nothing in the Measure affects the visitatorial powers of archdeacons (see PARA 500 ante) or the mode of appointment, office and duties of the official principal of an archdeacon: s 83 (2) (f). Archdeacons' courts, though formerly of considerable importance, had practically fallen into abeyance, partly owing to the withdrawal of many matters from ecclesiastical jurisdiction (see PARA 1264 ante), and partly because the courts had concurrent jurisdiction with consistory courts, to which an appeal usually lay. Archdeacons were by custom generally entitled to appoint an archdeacon's official principal to preside for them in court: see 1 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 97. See also PARA 1266 note 9 ante.

(ii) Consistory Courts

1274. The court of the diocese.

For each diocese¹ there is a court of the bishop² which is called the consistory court³ (except in the diocese of Canterbury, where it is called the commissary court) of the diocese⁴. The judge of the court is styled the chancellor (or in the diocese of Canterbury the commissary general) of the diocese⁵.

1 'Diocese' means a diocese in the province of Canterbury or a diocese (other than Sodor and Man) in the province of York: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 66 (1). For the purposes of the Measure an extra-diocesan place (including any place exempt or peculiar other than a royal peculiar) which is surrounded by a diocese is deemed to be situate within that diocese, and an extra-diocesan place which is surrounded by two or more dioceses is deemed to be situate within such one of them as the relevant archbishop may direct: s 66 (3).

2 In relation to the diocese of an archbishop 'bishop' means archbishop: Interpretation Measure 1925, s 3. During a vacancy in a see the court's jurisdiction is unaffected: see PARA 1277 note 4 post.

3 The name is derived from the time when the bishop presided in the court with some of his clergy as assessors and assistants: 2 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 12.

1275. The office of chancellor.

As judge of the consistory court the chancellor acts in the capacity of official principal¹ of the bishop, who appoints him to the office by letters patent². Although the power of nomination and appointment resides in the bishop³, the chancellor's authority is derived from the law⁴. He is a Queen's judge, in one of the Queen's courts. He acts in the court as an Ordinary⁵, that is to say, as an independent judge, uncontrolled by the bishop, and with no special instructions from him⁶. There is no appeal from the chancellor to the bishop⁷. The chancellor, being a judge independent of the bishop, may hear and determine in the consistory court a cause in which the bishop is himself interested⁸.

The processes of the consistory court generally run in the name of the bishop of the diocese; they may, however, run in the name of the chancellor as official principal of the bishop. In either case they are issued under the chancellor's seal⁹.

1 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 13 (2). The person holding the office of chancellor is also vicar-general of the diocese. As to the historical distinction between the offices of official principal and vicar-general, see Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 928. Like an archdeacon, he is oculus episcopi: Godolphin's Repertorium Canonicum 85. As vicar-general the chancellor has certain functions in non-contentious matters, eg the granting of marriage licences, in respect of which he may act through a deputy, who is called a surrogate (see PARA 1024 ante), and the admission of churchwardens in the year of the bishop's visitation (see PARA 546 note 1 ante). See also Ayl Par 160; Thorpe v Mansell (1810) 1 Hag Con 4n. As to provincial vicars-general, see PARA 430 note 3 ante.

The chancellor is an ex officio member of the diocesan synod (see PARAS 505, 506 ante), and is the principal lay officer of the diocese. He frequently acts as the bishop's adviser when legal or other questions arise in the administration of the diocese, although in the first instance these are generally referred to and dealt with by the diocesan registrar (see PARA 1281 post) or the bishop's legal secretary (see PARA 1281 note 2 post); in many cases he also advises the clergy of the diocese: Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/13.

1276. Qualifications of chancellor.

A person appointed¹ to be chancellor of a diocese must be at least thirty years old and either a barrister of at least seven years' standing or a person who has held high judicial office². Before appointing a layman³ the bishop⁴ must satisfy himself that the person to be appointed is a communicant⁵. The chancellor must, before entering on the execution of his office, take and subscribe the oath of allegiance⁶ and the appropriate judicial oath⁷, either before the diocesan bishop in the presence of the diocesan registrar⁸ or in open court in the presence of that registrar, and if he is a layman he must also make and subscribe, in the same circumstances, the appropriate declaration of assent⁹. The diocesan registrar must record the taking and subscription of the oaths¹⁰.

2 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 2 (2); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon G2 para 2. 'High judicial office' has the meaning assigned to it by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876, s 25 (ie the office of Lord Chancellor, member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, Lord of Appeal or judge of the Supreme Court): Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 66 (1). Previously an ecclesiastical judge, while not necessarily a member of the legal profession, was required to be 'learned in the civil and ecclesiastical laws and at the least a master of arts or bachelor of law, and reasonably well practised in the course thereof': Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 127 (revoked). As to the history of the appointment and qualifications of ecclesiastical judges, see the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts (SPCK 1954) 9-13.

3 In pre-Reformation times the chancellor was always in orders, although not necessarily a priest. At the Reformation laymen became qualified to hold office: see PARA 1261 ante. In spite, however, of the fact that membership of Doctors' Commons was confined to laymen (R v Archbishop of Canterbury (1807) 8 East 213), clergymen were still often appointed to chancellorships (see PARA 1278 note 1 post). In view of the qualifications now required (see the text to note 2 supra) it seems likely that the number of clerical chancellors will remain comparatively small, notwithstanding the fact that a barrister may now be in holy orders. The former requirement of the Consolidated Regulations of the Inns of Court 1955, regs. 9, 41, that a student before being called to the Bar should declare that he was not (inter alia) in holy orders has been abolished. As to the modern call declaration, see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 66 (2009) PARA 1077.

4 During a vacancy in the see anything required or authorised by the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 to be done by, to or before a bishop must be done or, as the case may be, may be done by, to or before the guardian of the spiritualities (s. 68 (1)) or, where a dean and chapter are guardian, by, to or before a commissary appointed by the dean and chapter for the purpose (s. 68 (2)), although s 68 (2) does not apply to anything required or authorised to be done by virtue of s 23 (1) (a) or s 46 (1) proviso (see s 68 (3)). In s 68 (3) the Measure in fact refers to 'paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of section twenty' (which does not exist): it is submitted that s 23 (1) (a) is intended. For s 23 (1) (a), see PARA 1363 post; for s 46 (1) proviso, see PARA 1278 post.

5 Ibid s 2 (2). 'Communicant' means a person who has received communion according to the use of the Church of England, or of a church in communion with it, at least once within the twelve months preceding the date of his declaration that he fulfils that requirement or (if a declaration is not required of him) the date upon which he is offered the appointment or requested to act in a capacity for which that qualification is required: s 66 (1).

1277. Chancellor's tenure of office.

The appointment of a chancellor under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963¹ is without limit of time², save that it will cease to have effect upon the termination of a vacancy in the see unless it has been previously confirmed by the capitular body³ of the cathedral church of the diocese⁴. A chancellor may resign his office by instrument in writing under his hand addressed to and served on the bishop of the diocese⁵, and he may be removed by that bishop if the Upper House of the convocation of the relevant province resolves that he is incapable of acting or unfit to act⁶.

1 Any judge or registrar of an ecclesiastical court appointed to office before the commencement of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 on 1st March 1965 continues in his office as if he had been appointed under the Measure, nothing in which affects the terms and conditions of his appointment: s 83 (1). An appointment made before the commencement of the Measure, if confirmed by the capitular body of the cathedral (ie the dean and chapter or, as the case may be, the cathedral chapter: see PARA 636 ante) usually gave the chancellor a freehold for life, subject to due qualification: Gib Cod xxv; Godolphin's Repertorium Canonium 83; Dr Sutton's Case (1627) Litt 22; Jones v Bishop of Llandaff (1693) 4 Mod Rep 27.

Where the bishop considers it desirable in the interests of the diocese to retain the chancellor in office after the time at which he would otherwise retire, he may authorise the chancellor's continuance in office until such date, not being later than the date on which the chancellor attains the age at which a puisne judge of the High Court is obliged to vacate that office, as he thinks fit: 1963 Measure s 2(4A); 1991 Measure Sch 4.

1278. Bishop's reservation of right to sit.

In some dioceses it has been the custom for the bishop, in the letters patent appointing the chancellor, to reserve to himself the right to exercise his ordinary jurisdiction, either by himself or in conjunction with his chancellor, in as ample a manner as if the grant had not been made to the chancellor¹. Such reservations have legal effect only insofar as they are not in conflict with the statute law. The position is now governed by the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, with the result, it seems, that such a reservation can be legally effective only in faculty proceedings; these may be heard and disposed of by the bishop alone or with the chancellor if, and insofar as, provision in that behalf is made in the letters patent by which the chancellor is appointed². Subject to that exception, the consistory court is to be presided over by a single judge, who is the chancellor³. In certain cases he is required to sit with assessors⁴; otherwise he sits alone to hear and dispose of the case⁵.

1 R v Tristram [1902] 1 KB 816, CA. See also the Report of the Ecclesiastical Courts Commission 1883, pp. 688 et seq. (returns from dioceses giving texts of patents of official principals etc.), from which it appears that at that date an appreciable number of chancellorships were still held by clergymen, that in most cases the appointments had been confirmed by the capitular body of the cathedral, and that in sixteen dioceses the bishop had reserved his right to sit in the consistory court.

2 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 46 (1) proviso. As to the position during a vacancy in the see, cf. para 1276 note 4 ante. See also the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967, S.I. 1967 No. 1002, r 16, and PARA 1330 post.

4 Assessors are required at the trial of a priest or deacon for an offence under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 not involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial: see s 28 (e), and PARA 1367 post. In such cases, although the bishop is not entitled to sit in the consistory court, provision is made for an extra-judicial procedure whereby he may pronounce sentence by consent, thus disposing of the matter of the complaint without the necessity of a trial in the consistory court: see s 31, and PARA 1363 post.

TEXT AND NOTE 1--1963 Measure s 4(1) amended so as to provide for the appointment of a deputy having all the powers and duties of the office of chancellor for the period where the chancellor is for any reason unable to act as such, or where the office of chancellor is vacant: Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 Sch 4 para 4.

Any chancellor may, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, appoint, in writing, a fit and proper person to act as deputy chancellor of the diocese and any person so appointed will have all the powers and perform all the duties of the office of chancellor: 1963 Measure s 4(1B) (added by Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2006 s 7(5)). The appointment of a deputy chancellor appointed under the 1963 Measure s 4(1B) will continue so long as the chancellor who appointed the deputy chancellor continues in office and, thereafter, for the period of three months beginning with the date on which the chancellor ceases to hold office or until the deputy chancellor attains the age at which the chancellor would be required to vacate the office of chancellor under s 2(4), whichever is sooner, but a deputy chancellor (1) may resign the office of deputy chancellor by notice in writing addressed to the chancellor, (2) may be removed by the chancellor, after consultation with the bishop, if the chancellor considers that the deputy is incapable of acting or unfit to act, and (3) may continue to act as chancellor for the purpose of any proceedings or cause of faculty in the consistory court of the diocese during the course of which the deputy chancellor attains the said age or, as the case may be, the three months period referred to above expires, as if the date of the conclusion in the court of those proceedings or that cause, as the case may be, were the date on which that age is attained or, as the case may be, that period has expired: s 4(1C) (as so added).

If the chancellor is of opinion for any reason that, for the purposes of any proceedings against a priest or deacon for an offence under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, it is expedient that he should not himself preside over the consistory court, he may so certify in writing to the bishop and may, with the bishop's written consent, appoint another person who, in the chancellor's opinion, possesses sufficient experience in criminal law and procedure and consents to the appointment, to preside over the court for the purpose of those proceedings, being a person who is himself qualified for appointment as chancellor and who satisfies the bishop that he is a communicant¹.

Requirements as to oaths and declaration of assent, as well as qualifications, are the same as for a chancellor: s 27 (2); Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 6 (3), Sch. 2; Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon G 2 para 3 (amended by Amending Canon No. 4). TEXT AND NOTES--Repealed: Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 Sch 2. As to disciplinary proceedings for misconduct under the 2003 Measure see PARA 1350A et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(2) CONSTITUTION AND JURISDICTION OF ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS/(ii) Consistory Courts/1281. Registrar of consistory court.

1281. Registrar of consistory court.

The functions of registrar of the consistory court and those of registrar of the diocese are exercisable by the same person, who is designated 'registrar of the diocese and its consistory court'¹. In most dioceses the office is held in conjunction with that of legal secretary to the bishop².

The registrar is appointed by the bishop of the diocese³ and, subject to confirmation of the appointment by the capitular body of the cathedral⁴, has a freehold for life⁵. The person appointed must be a solicitor learned in the ecclesiastical laws and the laws of the realm⁶, and the bishop must satisfy himself that he is a communicant⁷. Before entering on the execution of his office the registrar must take the same oaths and make the same declaration as a chancellor⁸.

The appointment of a deputy registrar is not specifically authorised by any provision of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963⁹, but the possibility of such an appointment is implied in rules made under the Measure¹⁰. In the absence of express provision some doubt exists as to the circumstances in which a deputy registrar may be appointed, the mode and conditions of his appointment and the extent of his functions¹¹.

1 See the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon G4 para 1. In practice he is normally referred to as the diocesan registrar. In addition to his functions in connection with consistory court proceedings he has duties and responsibilities relating to such matters as the issue of marriage licences (see PARA 1025 ante), the appointment of sequestrators (see PARA 892 et seq ante), the consecration of churches and burial grounds (see PARA 1071 ante) and the maintenance of episcopal and diocesan registers: see the Report on the Church's Legal Officers, GS 149 (1973) 4, 5. He is also the registrar of the diocesan synod (see PARA 503 ante), but is not qualified for election to a deanery synod or parochial church council in the diocese of which he is registrar (see the Church Representation Rules, r 9 (1) proviso, contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865), and PARAS 529, 566 ante).

2 See the Report on the Church's Legal Officers, GS 149 (1973) 5. The office of legal secretary is described as a comparatively modern office, always held by a solicitor, and not a freehold. The legal secretary's duties, the extent of which is not precisely laid down, include advising and assisting the bishop in legal matters which affect his episcopal jurisdiction and office, eg the formalities connected with ordination, the filling of vacant benefices, the suspension of presentation, institutions, inductions, licences to officiate etc. The office is held in plurality by the registrar in thirty-eight out of forty-three dioceses: Church of England Year Book 1975.

3 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon G 4 para 1. The bishop cannot make an appointment subject to conditions as to fees or work etc.; nor can he delegate the registrar's duties to anyone without actually appointing him to the office, although an acting registrar could be appointed temporarily: Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/41. As to the possibility of the appointment of a deputy registrar, see infra.

4 See PARA 1277 note 3 ante.

5 Ballard v Gerard (1702) 12 Mod Rep 608. See Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/41; and the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts (SPCK 1954) 13, where it is stated that in the seventeenth century registrars began to be appointed for life under letters patent from the bishop, confirmed by the dean and chapter. If the appointment is not confirmed by the capitular body it will presumably cease to have effect on the termination of a vacancy in the see. There is, it seems, no statutory provision, such as exists in the case of a chancellor (see PARA 1277 ante), for termination of a registrar's appointment.

6 It is not certain whether he could be deprived for lack of learning: see Jones v Bishop of Llandaff (1693) 4 Mod Rep 27, where the question related to a somewhat similar provision of the Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 127 (revoked) affecting a chancellor: see PARA 1276 note 2 ante.

7 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon G4 para 2. For the meaning of 'communicant', see PARA 1276 note 5 ante. A registrar of an ecclesiastical court appointed to office before 1st March 1965 was to continue in office as if he had been appointed under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, and nothing in that Measure affects the terms and conditions of his appointment: s 83 (1). The Measure itself, although it mentions the diocesan registrar (eg in s 2 (5) (a)), makes no provision for his appointment or qualifications; see however s 65 (1) (b), which provides for the making of rules regulating inter alia the appointment and duties of officers of the courts; and see the definitions of 'registrar' in the rules made thereunder (see PARA 1323 note 1 post (faculty proceedings), and PARA 1362 note 2 post (disciplinary proceedings)).

8 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon G4 para 3. See PARA 1276 ante.

9 The Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 65 (1) (b), provides for the making of rules regulating the appointment and duties of officers of the courts, but rules hitherto made have contained no provision respecting the mode or conditions of appointment of deputy registrars. The power to appoint a deputy registrar which is conferred on the diocesan registrar by the Church Representation Rules, r 28 (2), appears to apply only to functions exercisable by him in the capacity of registrar of the diocesan synod: see PARA 503 ante.

10 See the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Discipline) Rules 1964, S.I. 1964 No. 1755, r 2 (1), and the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967, S.I. 1967 No. 1002, r 2 (1), where 'registrar' is defined as including any person appointed to act as deputy registrar.

11 It is uncertain, for example, whether the appointment should be dealt with on the analogy of the provisions relating to deputy chancellors (see PARA 1279 ante), what limitations (if any) are applicable to the exercise of the registrar's functions by a deputy registrar, and in what respects a deputy registrar is to be distinguished from an acting registrar (see note 3 supra).

1281 Registrar of consistory court

TEXT--There is a registrar of the diocese for every diocese. He is legal adviser to the bishop: Ecclesiastical Judges and Legal Officers Measure 1976 s 4(1). He performs the functions conferred on the registrar of the diocese or the registrar of the consistory court and the functions previously performed by the bishop's legal secretary: s 4(2). He is appointed by the bishop after consultation with the bishop's council and standing committee of the diocesan synod: s 4(3). The registrar has power to appoint, with the consent of the bishop, a deputy registrar: see 1976 Measure s 4(5A)-(5D); Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 Sch 5 para 3.

Regulations may limit the number of registrarships held by any one person: 1976 Measure s 5(1). The office is vacated when the registrar attains the age of seventy or such earlier age as may be prescribed by regulations: s 5(3). He may resign his office and his appointment may be terminated by the bishop with the consent of the archbishop: s 5(5)-(7) (s 5(5) amended by the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 44(3)).

NOTE 1--The registrar must register any order made by the bishop under the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 in the diocesan registry: ibid s 28. A fee authorised by an order made under the Ecclesiastical Fees Measure 1986 Pt II is payable to the registrar for registering any order under the 1991 Measure and for permitting searches for and inspection and furnishing copies of any such order: s 29.

TEXT AND NOTE 5--The appointment of a person to be registrar of a diocese does not cease to have effect by reason only that a vacancy in the see is terminated and the appointment has not been previously confirmed by the cathedral chapter of the cathedral church of the diocese: Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1992 s 12.

NOTES 7, 9--Rule 28(2) renumbered as r 28(3): SI 1980/178. 1963 Measure s 65 repealed: 1991 Measure Sch 8 (see PARA 1296A).

1282. Examiners.

For the purpose of making examiners available to hold preliminary inquiries into complaints respecting offences under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 which are triable by the consistory court¹, provision is made for the establishment of a panel of not less than three persons, being communicants², who are either barristers or solicitors and who possess such experience as the chancellor considers appropriate³. The responsibility for establishing the panel is laid on the diocesan synod⁴.

1 See PARA 1363 post.

3 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, ss 23 (1) (b), 24, 30 (1), Sch. 2 para 1 (1).

4 The diocesan synod for each diocese (see PARA 503 et seq ante) must appoint a committee to draw up, with the synod's approval, and from time to time to revise, with the synod's approval, a panel of examiners: ibid Sch. 2 para 1 (1); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4 (7). Each examiner's term of office is determined by the synod before his appointment: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, Sch. 2 para 1 (2); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4 (7). If the examiner's term of office expires during the course of an inquiry he continues to act until he has completed his duties under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 24: Sch. 2 para 3. If a panel member ceases to be qualified or resigns, dies or becomes incapable of acting, the diocesan bishop must declare a vacancy and may direct the committee to appoint a qualified replacement for the remainder of the term of office of the member he replaces: Sch. 2 para 4.

1283. Assessors.

For the purpose of providing assessors to sit with the chancellor in the consistory court upon the trial of a priest or deacon for an offence under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963¹ the diocesan synod must arrange for the establishment of a panel of six priests and a panel of six laymen². The four assessors required at a trial are to be selected from the two panels in equal proportions³.

1 See PARA 1367 post.

2 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, ss 28 (e), 30 (2), Sch. 2 para 5 (1); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4 (7). For this purpose the synod appoints a committee to appoint and from time to time revise, with the synod's approval, the two panels: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, Sch. 2 para 5 (1). Before appointing a layman the body appointing him must satisfy itself that he is a communicant (defined in PARA 1276 note 5 ante): Sch. 2 para 5 (2). A panel member's term of office is such period not exceeding six years as is determined before his appointment: Sch. 2 para 5 (3). An assessor whose term of office expires during a trial at which he is acting continues to act until the conclusion of the trial: Sch. 2 para 9. If a panel member resigns, dies or becomes incapable of acting the diocesan bishop must declare a vacancy and direct the committee to appoint another priest or layman for the remainder of the term of office of the member he replaces: Sch. 2 para 10.

1284. Jurisdiction of consistory courts.

The consistory court of a diocese has original jurisdiction to hear and determine:

- 21 (1) proceedings in which a priest or deacon is charged upon articles with an offence under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, not being an offence involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial, where the priest or deacon, when the offence was alleged to have been committed or when the proceedings were instituted, held preferment in the diocese or resided there¹;
- 22 (2) a cause of faculty² for authorising any act relating to land within the diocese, or to anything on or in such land, being an act for the doing of which a faculty is needed³, or the sale of books comprised in a library within the diocese, being a library to which the Parochial Libraries Act 1708 applied⁴;
- 23 (3) proceedings upon any jus patronatus awarded by the diocesan bishop⁵;
- 24 (4) certain proceedings under the Pluralities Act 1838⁶; and
- 25 (5) any other proceedings which immediately before 31st July 1963⁷ it had power to hear and determine, not being proceedings jurisdiction to hear and determine which was expressly abolished by the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963⁸.

1 See the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 6 (1) (a), and PARA 1350 et seq post. No proceedings by way of a criminal suit, other than those authorised by Parts IV-VI (ss. 22-45) are to be instituted against any person in a consistory court or in the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved (see PARAS 1289, 1290 post), and no proceedings so authorised are to be instituted except in accordance with those Parts: s 69.

2 This provision does not extend the court's jurisdiction in faculty matters to any land or anything on or in such land in respect of which the court had no jurisdiction immediately before 31st July 1963: ibid s 6 (2). Nothing in s 66 (definitions) prejudices or affects the provisions of s 6 (2): s 66 (4).

The consistory court has jurisdiction only in non-disciplinary matters: 1963 Measure ss 1(1), 6(1)(a) (amended and repealed respectively by the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 Sch 1 para 2, Sch 2). As to disciplinary proceedings see PARA 1350A et seq.

(iii) Arches and Chancery Courts

1285. Constitution of the courts.

For each of the two provinces of Canterbury and York there is a court of the archbishop, having appellate jurisdiction¹ and called the Arches Court of Canterbury² and the Chancery Court of York respectively³.

The judges of each of these courts are five in number⁴. One of them, the Dean of the Arches and Auditor, is a judge of both courts⁵. Of the other judges of each court two are persons in holy orders appointed by the prolocutor of the Lower House of the convocation of the relevant province⁶, and two are laymen, possessing such judicial experience as the Lord Chancellor thinks appropriate, appointed by the chairman of the House of Laity of the General Synod after consultation with the Lord Chancellor⁷.

The appointment of any person to be a judge of either court is without limit of time⁸, but provision is made for resignation and for removal from office in cases where a judge is incapable of acting or unfit to act⁹.

Proceedings in the Arches or Chancery Court by way of appeal from a judgment of a consistory court in which a priest or deacon is charged with an offence under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, not being an offence involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial¹⁰, must be heard and disposed of by all the judges of the court, and any other proceedings must be heard and disposed of by the Dean of the Arches and Auditor¹¹.

Each of the two courts has its registrar, who is appointed by the archbishop of the province concerned and is designated registrar of the province and of the provincial court¹².

1 All original jurisdiction formerly exercisable by these courts was abolished by the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 82 (2) (b). This original jurisdiction included cases referred on letters of request from consistory courts on the ground of their importance (see the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Act 1531, s 1 (repealed)), disciplinary cases referred on letters of request (see the Church Discipline Act 1840, s 13 (repealed)), and cases concerning ornaments where the parties were not willing to accept the bishop's directions (see the Public Worship Regulation Act 1874, s 9 (repealed)). As to the courts' appellate jurisdiction, see PARA 1287 post.

2 The court is so called because it was formerly held in Bow Church (Ecclesia Beatae Mariae de Arcubus) in the City of London, which derived its name from the fact that its steeple was raised on stone pillars archwise: see Gib Cod 1004; 1 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 97.

A person so appointed is subject to the same requirements in respect of oaths and the declaration of assent as apply to the Dean of the Arches and Auditor if he is a layman: s 3 (7), (8), Sch. 1, Part I; Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 6 (3), Sch. 2; Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon G3 paras 5 (amended by Amending Canon No. 4), 6: see PARA 1286 post.

12 See the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon G 4 para 1. Provisions as to qualifications and the oaths and declaration required on taking office are the same as for diocesan registrars: see Canon G4 paras 2, 3, and PARA 1281 ante. Numerous references to provincial registrars are to be found in the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 (eg in ss 3 (6)-(8), 18 (1), 64 (1), 78), and in the rules made thereunder. He is appointed by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York jointly, with the Queen's approval signified by warrant under the sign manual⁴. He must be either a barrister of at least ten years' standing or a person who has held high judicial office, and before appointing a layman the archbishops must satisfy themselves that he is a communicant⁵. Before entering on the execution of his office he must take and subscribe the oath of allegiance and the appropriate judicial oath either before each of the archbishops in the presence of the provincial registrar or in open court in each province in the presence of the provincial registrar⁶. If the person appointed is a layman he must also make and subscribe in the same circumstances the appropriate declaration of assent⁷.

The appointment is without limit of time⁸, but the person appointed may resign his office by instrument in writing under his hand, addressed to and served on both archbishops⁹, and he may be removed by them jointly if the Upper House of each convocation resolves that he is incapable of acting or is unfit to act¹⁰.

In the event of the illness or temporary incapacity of the Dean of the Arches and Auditor the Archbishops of Canterbury and York may appoint a fit and proper person to act as Deputy Dean of the Arches and Auditor during the illness or incapacity, and a person so appointed has the same powers and duties as the Dean¹¹.

1289. Constitution of the court.

The Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved, which has both original and appellate jurisdiction covering both provinces¹, was brought into being by the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963². It is constituted of five judges appointed by the Queen, of whom two must be persons who hold or have held high judicial office³ and who make declarations that they are communicants⁴, and three must be persons who are or have been diocesan bishops⁵.

When trying a person charged with an offence the court must sit with not less than three nor more than five advisers selected by the Dean of the Arches and Auditor from a panel of eminent theologians and liturgiologists⁶.

1 As to the court's jurisdiction, see PARA 1290 post.

2 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 1 (3) (b); Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon G1 para 3 a. Its creation had been recommended in the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts (SPCK 1954) 53: see PARA 1265 ante.

1290. Jurisdiction of the court.

The Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved has original jurisdiction to hear and determine proceedings in which a priest or deacon or an archbishop or bishop is charged upon articles with an offence against the laws ecclesiastical involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial¹, and all suits of duplex querela². Its appellate jurisdiction is exercisable in respect of appeals from judgments, orders or decrees of consistory courts in causes of faculty involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial³. The court is not bound by any decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in relation to matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial⁴.

In the case of an archbishop, the commission is to be appointed by the Upper Houses of the convocations of both provinces³; in the case of a bishop, by the Upper House of the convocation of the relevant province⁴.

1292. Constitution and jurisdiction of Commissions of Review.

The Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 makes provision for the appointment of commissioners to review the findings of the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved and of any commission of convocation¹. It is open to any party to the proceedings to apply for a review on a question of law or of fact², save that in proceedings upon articles charging an offence against the laws ecclesiastical it is only the defendant who may apply for review on a question of fact³. Application is made by a petition addressed to the Queen⁴. Upon a petition being lodged, a commission is directed under the Great Seal to five persons nominated by the Queen to review the findings⁵. Of these persons, collectively described as a Commission of Review, three must be lords of appeal⁶, who make a declaration that they are communicants⁷, and two must be lords spiritual sitting as Lords of Parliament⁸. When a question of doctrine is involved a Commission of Review must sit with five advisers selected by it from a panel appointed for this purpose⁹.

The judgment of the commission is to be according to the opinion of the majority of its members, each of whom is required to state his own opinion¹⁰. The commission is not bound by any decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in relation to matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial¹¹; a decision of a previous Commission of Review is, however, binding on it, except in regard to a matter on which new information or evidence is adduced which was not before the commission on the previous occasion¹².

The summaries in the following paragraphs¹ show the broad outline of the course of proceedings² in respect of each category of cases heard in ecclesiastical courts, including proceedings in the appellate courts and on review. ² As to the procedure for instituting and conducting proceedings, see PARA 1322 et seq post (faculty proceedings) PARA 1345 et seq post (other civil proceedings), and PARA 1362 et seq post (disciplinary proceedings).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(3) PROCEDURE AND PRACTICE OF ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS/(i) In general/1296. Procedure and practice in general.

1296. Procedure and practice in general.

The procedure and practice of the ecclesiastical courts today are governed to a large extent by rules made under the relevant modern enactments¹. Comprehensive provision is thus made in respect of faculty proceedings² and disciplinary proceedings³. In other proceedings the customary rules of the ecclesiastical courts are, with some modifications, still applicable⁴. The proceedings in ecclesiastical courts are not governed by the rules of common law or by any analogies which those rules furnish⁵, save where express provision is made to that effect⁶.

Any court or commission established under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963⁷ has the same powers as the High Court in relation to the attendance and examination of witnesses and the production and inspection of documents⁸.

1 Under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 there is a rule committee consisting of (1) the Lord Chancellor; (2) the two archbishops, or members appointed by each of them from the Upper House of the convocation of the province; (3) two persons appointed by the Lord Chancellor of whom at least one holds or has held high judicial office (for the meaning of which see PARA 1276 note 2 ante); (4) the Dean of the Arches and Auditor; (5) the prolocutors of the Lower House of each convocation or a member from each Lower House appointed by its prolocutor; (6) the two provincial registrars; and (7) a chancellor and a diocesan registrar from each province, appointed by the archbishop of that province: see s 64 (1). The chairman is the Lord Chancellor (s. 64 (1)), but if he is absent his place is taken by a person who holds or has held high judicial office appointed a member of the committee by the Lord Chancellor (s. 64 (3)). Any five members of the committee, one of whom is the Lord Chancellor or a person appointed by him, may exercise the powers of the rule committee: s 64 (2).

The committee has power to make rules for carrying the Measure into effect and for all matters not otherwise provided for, incidental to or connected with the administration of justice under the Measure, and in particular for regulating, inter alia, the procedure and practice of all courts, commissions, committees and examiners including courts of appellate jurisdiction (so far as rules made by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council do not extend): s 65 (1) (a); see also notes 2, 3 infra.

Under the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964 a rule committee may make rules for regulating all matters of procedure and practice within the cognisance of the faculty jurisdiction of all courts, and otherwise for carrying the Measure into effect: s 14 (1); see also note 2 infra.

The rule committee consists of (a) a diocesan bishop nominated by the two archbishops; (b) the vicars-general of each province; (c) the chancellor of the diocese of London; (d) one diocesan registrar, not being a provincial registrar, nominated by the two archbishops; and (e) one clerical member and one lay member nominated by the Council for Place of Worship (as to which see PARA 1321 post): s 15, Schedule para 1. Any three members of the committee, two of them holding any office in classes (b)-(d) supra, may exercise all the powers of the committee: Schedule para 2.

Every rule made under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 65, or the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 14, must be laid before the General Synod and does not come into operation until it has been so approved: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 65 (2); Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 14 (3); Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 2 (2). When it is so approved the Statutory Instruments Act 1946 applies to it as if it were a statutory instrument, made when approved, and as if the Measure under which it was made provided that the rule should be subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 65 (3); Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 14 (4).

2 See the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967, S.I. 1967 No. 1002 (amended by S.I. 1965 No. 135); Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Faculty Appeals) Rules 1965, S.I. 1965 No. 251; and PARA 1322 et seq post.

3 See the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Discipline) Rules 1964, S.I. 1964 No. 1755; and see PARA 1362 et seq post. See also the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Legal Aid) Rules 1964, and PARA 1305 post.

1296A. Rule Committee.

A rule committee consisting of (1) a diocesan bishop nominated by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York; (2) the Dean of Arches and Auditor; (3) one archdeacon nominated by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York; (4) two diocesan chancellors nominated by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York; (5) two diocesan registrars nominated by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York; (6) one person nominated by the Council for the Care of Churches; (7) two persons nominated by the Standing Committee of the House of Laity from among the members of that house, together with eleven other persons nominated for particular purposes, has been established¹. The members nominated for particular purposes are (i) for making rules relating to proceedings in the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved or a commission of review², one person who holds or has held high judicial office nominated by the Lord Chancellor; (ii) for making rules relating to cathedral churches, one member of the administrative body of a cathedral church nominated by the Appointments Committee of the General Synod, three persons having special knowledge of the conservation of cathedrals nominated by the Cathedrals Fabric Commission from among its members, and three persons nominated by the Association of English Cathedrals; (iii) for making rules relating to proceedings in respect of offences cognisable under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 s 14 or disciplinary proceedings under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003, a second diocesan bishop nominated by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Prolocutor of the Lower House of the Convocation of Canterbury or a member nominated by him, and the Prolocutor of the Lower House of the Convocation of York or a member nominated by him³. The quorum of the committee is five members, but a member nominated for a particular purpose must not be included in a quorum for any other purpose⁴. The chairman of the committee must be the Dean of Arches and Auditor, unless he declines or is unable to act, when the chairman will be such other member of the committee as may be nominated by the Dean of Arches and Auditor after consultation with the Archbishops of Canterbury and York⁵. Subject to the provision as to its quorum, the committee may act notwithstanding any vacancy in its membership and may regulate its own procedure⁶.

The rule committee may make rules for carrying into effect the provisions of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990, the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991, the Care of Cathedrals (Supplementary Provisions) Measure 1994, the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 and the Care of Places of Worship Measure 1999⁷.

Any rule made under the former provisions continues in force and is deemed to have been made under the new provisions⁸. Any rules made under the new provisions must be laid before the General Synod and must not come into force until approved by it, whether with or without amendment⁹. Where the Business Committee determines that the rules do not need to be debated by the General Synod then, unless notice is given by a member of the Synod in accordance with its standing orders that he wishes the rules to be debated, or notice is so given by any member that he wishes to move an amendment to the rules, the rules are deemed to have been approved without amendment¹⁰.

1298. Rights of audience.

In proceedings in the ecclesiastical courts a party may be legally represented, and rights of audience are accorded both to barristers¹ and solicitors². Provision is made for the right of either party to be represented by a friend or adviser in disciplinary proceedings³.

¹ See Mouncey v Robinson (1867) 37 LJ Eccl 8, and LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 66 (2009) PARA 1109 et seq. Barristers are in this respect successors of the advocates formerly admitted to the Doctors' Commons Bar. Persons who had taken a doctor's degree in law in the University of Oxford or Cambridge and had studied the canon and civil law for five and latterly for three years were admitted by the Archbishop of Canterbury to the Doctors' Commons Bar to practise as advocates in the ecclesiastical courts: Ayl Par 53 et seq, 1 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 2-4. The college of advocates which became known as Doctors' Commons had been formed in 1511; it was incorporated in 1768 and existed until the middle of the nineteenth century when, on the creation of the Court of Probate and the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes in 1857 (Court of Probate Act 1857, s 4 (repealed); Matrimonial Causes Act 1857, s 6 (repealed)), power was given to the college to dispose of its property and surrender its charter: see the Court of Probate Act 1857, ss 116, 117 (repealed). Only laymen could belong to Doctors' Commons: R v Archbishop of Canterbury (1807) 8 East 213. See also PARA 1276 note 2 ante.

² See the Solicitors Act 1974, s 19 (1) (c), and LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 729 et seq. Before solicitors were admitted to practise in ecclesiastical courts the practitioners who had the management of causes before ecclesiastical courts were called proctors: see Ayl Par 421 et seq; 3 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 198-201; Burch v Reid (1873) LRA & E 112. A proctor or procurator was one who had the management committed to him of the law concerns of another, who stood to him in the relation of client or principal: Ayl Par 421; 3 Bl Com (14th Edn) 25. A party appointed his proctor to appear and act in a cause for him by a warrant under his hand called a proxy: 3 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 376; Prankard v Deacle (1828) 1 Hag Ecc 169 at 185 et seq, Fry and Greata v Treasure (1865) 2 Moo PCCNS 539. 1301. Taxation and recovery of costs.

In disciplinary proceedings costs are taxed by the registrar, who may require the attendance of witnesses and the production of necessary documents¹. Taxation proceedings are commenced by lodging with the registrar an application for taxation, together with the bill of costs and all necessary papers and vouchers, and serving copies on the other party, whereupon the registrar must fix a day for the taxation and give notice of it to the parties². In deciding the amount of the costs to be allowed the registrar has regard to the current High Court scales³. Any party or his solicitor may apply to tax the costs on the common fund basis⁴.

Any party to the taxation who is dissatisfied with any decision of the registrar may within seven days after the decision lodge with him and serve on the other party an application for a review of the taxation by the judge, who must fix a time and place for the review and require the registrar to give notice to both parties⁵. Unless the judge otherwise directs, no further evidence may be received on the review and no ground of objection may be raised which was not set out in the application⁶. On the review the judge may exercise all powers and discretions vested in the registrar⁶.

Costs ordered to be paid in any proceedings under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 may be recovered as if the sum due were a contract debt, by action in the county court for the district in which the award was made or, if the sum recoverable exceeds that court's jurisdiction, in the High Court⁷. In recovery proceedings a certificate purporting to be signed by the registrar is conclusive evidence of the sum due to be paid by the person mentioned in it⁸.

The General Synod must constitute and maintain a legal aid fund to which the synod and the Church Commissioners may contribute such sums as they from time to time decide, and which is held on behalf of the synod by the Central Board of Finance¹. The Standing Committee of the General Synod² appoints a Legal Aid Committee charged with the administration of the fund and, subject to and in accordance with rules³ made by the synod, the board may pay out of the fund in accordance with the Legal Aid Committee's written certificate the whole or such part as the certificate may authorise of the costs of any complainant or accused person in or in relation to or directly or indirectly arising out of any legal proceedings authorised, taken or contemplated before any commission, committee or examiner (and notwithstanding that proceedings are not eventually taken) in respect of any offence under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963⁴.

A written application for legal aid⁵ may be made by any complainant in respect of the whole or part of any costs properly incurred up to the time of the nomination of a promoter⁶ or by an accused person in respect of the whole or part of any costs properly incurred up to and including the trial or pursuant to any appeal or review⁷. The committee may not refuse an application without affording the applicant the opportunity of making oral representations to it in person or by solicitor or counsel⁸. The secretary must notify the applicant in writing of the committee's decision⁹, which may be limited to the costs incurred up to a specified stage of the proceedings or to a specified proportion of his costs or to a specified sum¹⁰. If legal aid is granted a certificate is issued, which may in certain circumstances be cancelled, revoked or discharged¹¹.

If it appears necessary to the assisted person's solicitor to lodge an appeal, to instruct more than one counsel, to obtain or tender expert evidence, to bespeak a transcript or to do any unusual act or one which involves unusual expenditure and for which the certificate does not already provide he must apply to the committee for authority to take the step in question¹².

The payment of legal aid is limited to the amount of the assisted person's taxed costs¹³, although in certain circumstances the committee may authorise the payment of a fair remuneration for work actually and reasonably done¹⁴.

1305 Legal aid

TEXT AND NOTES--Replaced: Church of England (Legal Aid) Measure 1994.

The synod will continue to maintain a legal aid fund to which the synod and the Church Commissioners may contribute such sums as each shall from time to time decide¹. The fund will be administered by a Legal Aid Commission, appointed by the Appointments Committee of the General Synod², and held by the Central Board of Finance on behalf of the synod. The Board may only make such payments out of the fund as are authorised by a certificate in writing issued by the Legal Aid Commission³.

Applications may be made to the Commission by specified persons for financial assistance in respect of costs incurred by them in connection with certain specified proceedings⁴, whereupon the Commission may issue a certificate authorising payment out of the fund of the whole or part of the costs incurred by the applicant after the date of the issue of the certificate⁵. In deciding whether to grant legal aid, the Commission must have regard to all the circumstances of the case and, in particular, must consider the financial resources of the applicant (including the financial resources of the spouse or civil partner of the applicant)⁶. Legal aid should not be granted if it appears that the applicant could afford to proceed without it⁷ and the applicant must show that he has reasonable grounds for taking, defending or being a party to, the proceedings⁸. Where a certificate is issued for the payment of the costs or part of the costs of any person the payment must be made to the solicitor who has acted for that person⁹. The grant of legal aid does not affect the relationship between, or rights of, counsel, solicitor and client or any privilege arising out of that relationship or the rights or liabilities of other parties to the proceedings, or the principles on which the discretion of any court or tribunal is normally exercised, except as expressly provided by rules¹⁰.

The Archbishops' Council is empowered to make such rules as it considers necessary or desirable for giving effect to, or for preventing abuses of, these provisions¹¹. Such rules may make particular provision as to the procedure for applications for legal aid¹², as to the information to be furnished by any person applying for or receiving legal aid and the provision of information by solicitors or counsel¹³, for the amendment, revocation or discharge of certificates¹⁴, for regulating the procedure in legal aid proceedings, particularly with regard to costs¹⁵, for the enforcement of any order or agreement for costs made in favour of a person to whom legal aid is granted¹⁶, to enable the chairman or a specified officer of the Commission, in specified circumstances, to issue an interim certificate on behalf of the Commission for the payment of the costs, or part of the costs, incurred by any person before the determination of that person's application¹⁷, and to enable the Commission to appoint committees to carry out certain of its functions¹⁸.

The 1994 Measure contains transitional provisions¹⁹ and extends to the whole of the provinces of Canterbury and York except the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, but may be applied to the Channel Islands and may extend to the Isle of Man²⁰.

(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO FACULTIES

(i) In general

1306. The faculty jurisdiction in general.

A faculty is a special licence or dispensation granted by an Ordinary¹ authorising a person to do something which otherwise could not lawfully be done². In English ecclesiastical law the term has come to be applied mainly to the authorisation of works and purposes involving alterations³ to the fabric or contents of churches, to churchyards or (in some measure) to consecrated burial grounds other than churchyards⁴. The necessity for obtaining a faculty for the execution of such works or purposes is in most cases associated with the legal effects of consecration⁵. The consecration of a piece of land has the effect of bringing it and everything on it within the jurisdiction of the Ordinary, whose permission is thereafter generally necessary before any alteration can be lawfully effected⁶. The jurisdiction of the Ordinary is normally exercised by the chancellor of the diocese as judge of the consistory court⁷. Its main purposes are to protect the interests of succeeding generations of parishioners, to settle disputes between interested parties and to provide safeguards against illegality and ill-considered change⁸. A duty is imposed on ministers and church wardens to comply with the requirements of the faculty jurisdiction⁹.

1 For the meaning of 'Ordinary', see PARA 458 ante. See also PARA 1275 text and note 5 ante.

2 See PARA 1273 note 6 ante.

3 In this context 'alteration' has an extended meaning and includes the addition of something that was not there before, and the removal, repair, renovation or alteration of something already there.

4 As to faculties for the disinterment of bodies, see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1125 et seq.

5 See PARA 1068 et seq ante. The unconsecrated curtilage of a church is however, within the faculty jurisdiction, and a licensed chapel may by order of the bishop be made subject to the faculty jurisdiction, even though it has not been consecrated (see PARA 1308 post): see also the Report of the Church Assembly Commission on Fees and Faculties (CIO 1959) 52, where the suggestion of a necessary connection between the faculty jurisdiction and consecration is said to have no real historical basis.

7 See PARA 1275 ante. Faculty proceedings may, however, be heard and disposed of by the bishop (sitting, alone or with the chancellor) if and insofar as provision in that behalf is made in the letters patent appointing the chancellor: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 46 (1) proviso: see PARA 1278 ante. All faculty proceedings, including those which involve matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial, are cognisable at first instance by the consistory court. As to appeals, see PARAS 1287, 1290 ante. In certain cases of repair, redecoration or alternation to an existing heating system, permission may, in the absence of opposition, be granted by an archdeacon's certificate instead of a faculty: see PARA 1331 post.

The memorandum is quoted at length in Cripps, Law of Church and Clergy (8th Edn) 147 et seq. See also the Report of the Church Assembly Commission on Fees and Faculties (CIO 1959) 48.

1307. History of the faculty jurisdiction.

There is evidence of the assertion of the bishop's power of control over the fabric of churches in his diocese as long ago as the thirteenth century¹, but it seems likely that in mediaeval times this control was exercised mainly through the process of visitation. Even when recourse to the consistory court became more common, faculty proceedings appear to have been largely concerned with rights and privileges, for example question concerning rights to pews. It was not until the nineteenth century that the faculty jurisdiction in its present form and extent became fully effective. Controversies over such matters as the introduction of ornaments² contributed to a general recognition of the legal obligation to obtain a faculty for any alterations affecting a church or its contents. For many years past that obligation has been regarded as unquestionably binding in law, and it has been widely, though perhaps not universally, observed in practice³. The faculty jurisdiction is now, in many of its aspects, the subject of legislation⁴.

1 A constitution of Otho, legate of Gregory IX, made in a national synod in 1237 contained the following injunction: 'We stricly forbid rectors of churches to pull down ancient consecrated churches without the consent and licence of the bishop of the diocese, under pretence of raising a more ample and fair fabric. Let the diocesan consider whether it will be more expedient to grant or deny a licence': 2 Johnson's Ecclesiastical Laws 1237.

2 See PARA 953 et seq ante.

4 See eg in addition to the relevant provisions of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967 S.I. 1967 No 1002, and the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Faculty Appeals) Rules 1965, S.I. 1965 No. 251.

The Channel Islands, though forming part of the diocese of Winchester, are excluded from the jurisdiction exercisable by the consistory court of that diocese (see the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, ss 1 (1), 84); nor are they subject to the provisions of the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964 (s. 17). The authorities responsible for exercising a corresponding system of control are the Deans of Jersey and Guernsey.

The Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 does not at present extend to the Isle of Man, but provision may be made for such extension by an Act of Tynwald, subject to such modifications as may be specified in the Act: ss 66 (1), 85. The Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964 does not apply to the Isle of Man: s 17 (1).

1308. Places within the faculty jurisdiction.

Despite the relevance of consecration for purposes of the faculty jurisdiction¹, consecrated and land subject to the faculty jurisdiction are not co-extensive categories. In some cases unconsecrated land and buildings are, or may be made, subject to the faculty jurisdiction. On the other hand, consecrated land and building are in some cases excluded by law from the jurisdiction of the bishop as Ordinary, while in some other cases they may be treated in practice as though they were not subject to it².

When unconsecrated land forms, or is part of, the curtilage³ of a church within the jurisdiction of a court, that has the same jurisdiction over the land as over the church⁴. In the case of a building licensed for public worship, the bishop of the diocese may be order direct that it shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the consistory court, if he considers that circumstances have arisen which make this desirable⁵; the building will then, for the period specified in the order, be subject, together with its furnishings and contents, to the jurisdiction of the court as though it were a consecrated church⁶. Guild churches are within the faculty jurisdiction⁷.

2 See PARA 1309 post.

3 The curtilage is in effect an integral part of the church: it is such part of the churchyard which physically adjoins the church as is required to form some necessary or useful purpose of the church building: Re St George's church, Oakdale [1975] 2 All ER 870. Church and curtilage must be occupied together and must belong together in a physical sense: Re St John's Church, Bishop's Hatfield [1967] P 113, 2 All ER 403.

4 Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 7 (1). This provision, which was expressed to be for the avoidance of doubt, did not render unlawful any act done or proceedings taken in good faith before the passing of the Measure (i.e on 15th April 1964), nor did it require the issue of faculties confirming such acts: s 7 (2). As to the principles on which the jurisdiction should be exercised in relation to an unconsecrated curtilage, with particular reference to proposals for secular user, see Re St Peter's, Bushley Heath [1971] 2 All ER 704, [1971] 1 WLR 357, where the opinion was expressed by Chancellor Newson that the court has a greater, if undefined, latitude than in the case of consecrated land. 6 Ibid s 6 (2). Every such order must be registered in the diocesan registry (s. 6 (3)), and is revocable by the bishop at any time (s. 6 (4)). The growing number of instances in which places of worship are dedicated, not consecrated, gives added importance to this provision: see the Report of the Church Assembly Commission on Fees and Faculties (CIO 1959) 55.

7 The Faculty Jurisdiction Measures 1964 applies to guild churches mutatis as it applies to parish churches: City of London (Guild Churches) Act 1952, s 26 (2). As to persons having an interest in faculty proceedings relating to guild churches, see PARA 607 ante.

UPDATE

1308 Places within the faculty jurisdiction

TEXT AND NOTES--Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 11(1) declares that, for the avoidance of doubt and without prejudice to the jurisdiction of consistory courts under any enactment or rule of law, the jurisdiction of the consistory court of a diocese applies to all parish churches in the diocese and the churchyards and articles appertaining to them.

A building licensed by the bishop for public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England and all articles appertaining to it is subject to the jurisdiction of the consistory court as though the building were a consecrated church: ibid s 11(2). However, where, after consultation with the advisory committee, the bishop considers that any licensed building should not be subject to the faculty jurisdiction he may by order direct accordingly: ibid s 11(3).

Where the bishop, after consultation with the advisory committee, considers that any article appertaining to a licensed building, in respect of which an order directing that it should not be subject to the faculty jurisdiction is in force, should be subject to the faculty jurisdiction by reason of its being (i) of outstanding architectural, artistic, historical or archaeological value, or (ii) of significant monetary value, or (iii) at special risk of being stolen or damaged, he may by order direct that the article must be subject to the jurisdiction of the consistory court during a period specified in the order: ibid s 11(4). Any article in respect of which an order is in force must, during the specified period, be subject to the jurisdiction of the court as though it were an article appertaining to a consecrated church: ibid s 11(5).

Orders under ibid s 11(3) or (4) may be varied or revoked by an order made by the bishop after consultation with the advisory committee: ibid s 11(6). An order subjecting an article to the faculty jurisdiction does not render unlawful any act done before the making of the order nor require the issue of faculties confirming such acts: ibid s 11(7).

The chancellor of a diocese must give written guidance to all parochial church councils, ministers and churchwardens in the diocese as to those matters within the jurisdiction of the consistory court which he for the time being considers, after consultation with the advisory committee, to be of such a minor nature that they may be undertaken without a faculty: ibid s 11(8).

The bishop must send every order made under the above provisions to the diocesan registrar, who must register the order in the diocesan registry: ibid s 28.

NOTES 3, 4--See also Re St Mary Magdalene, Paddington [1980] 1 All ER 279.

TEXT AND NOTE 5--1964 Measure s 6(1) amended to refer only to orders made prior to the coming into force of the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 11: ibid Sch 7.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO FACULTIES/(i) In general/1309. Restrictions upon the exercise of the faculty jurisdiction.

1309. Restrictions upon the exercise of the faculty jurisdiction.

Any places where the bishop is not the Ordinary¹, such as cathedrals², peculiars³ and the chapels of colleges at Oxford and Cambridge⁴, are outside the faculty jurisdiction and in most cases can be said to grant their own permission, as Ordinary⁵, although where the bishop is visitor he may, in the exercise of his visitatorial powers, order the removal of anything unlawful⁶.

The position of consecrated chapels in cemeteries, schools, hospitals and other institutions or in private houses is not sufficiently clear to justify any general statement of the law⁷. The applicability of the faculty jurisdiction may depend to some extent on whether the chapel was consecrated for the purpose of public worship⁸. In any case it seems that in practice applications for faculties are not usually made in respect of such chapels⁹.

There has been uncertainty also about the exercise of control over alterations to a private chapel or private aisle which forms part of a parish church. With a view to meeting the difficulty, provision has been made whereby, on the application of an incumbent or parochial church council, a faculty may be granted vesting any privately owned part of a church¹⁰ in the person or body in whom the church is vested¹¹. This would remove any doubt as to whether the part so vested was within the faculty jurisdiction.

A building or part of a building which, in a parish without a parish church, is designated by the bishop as the parish center of worship¹² is not by virtue of that designation made subject to the faculty jurisdiction¹³.

Consecrated burial grounds not belonging to a church (for example, the consecrated part of a local authority cemetery) are recognised as being subject in principle to the faculty jurisdiction¹⁴, but it seems that in practice the jurisdiction is exercised for limited purposes only, as in cases of exhumation¹⁵ and perhaps also of the removal of monuments¹⁶.

Land and building which have been subject to the faculty jurisdiction may in certain circumstances, by virtue of statutory provisions, cease to be so subject. This will normally occur in cases where, under a pastoral scheme or a redundancy scheme, consecrated buildings or land are vested in the Church Commissioners or are appropriated to a use or uses specified in the scheme¹⁷. The vesting of consecrated buildings or land in the Redundant Churches Fund will have a similar result¹⁸. Further, where consecrated land is compulsorily, acquired by a purchasing authority, the obligations and restrictions imposed by ecclesiastical law in respect of the use of the land will, subject to compliance with certain conditions, cease to be applicable¹⁹.

The ecclesiastical courts have only limited power to authorise by faculty the use or the disposal of consecrated land or building for secular purposes²⁰.

3 See PARAS 454, 492 ante.

5 In the case of a parish church cathedral provision must be included in the constitution and statutes for conferring, on a specified body, powers similar to those exercisable with respect to the fabric, monuments, ornaments and churchyard by the dean and chapter in a dean and chapter cathedral: Cathedrals Measure 1963, s 10 (2) (c); see PARA 621 ante.

7 Episcopal chapels would seem in any case to be clearly outside the faculty jurisdiction and subject only to the visitatorial powers of the archbishop.

8 See the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 3 (1), which (in making provision for faculties affecting monuments) implies that there may be consecrated buildings other than churches or chapels which have been consecrated for the purpose of public worship according to the rites of the Church of England; cf. the definition of 'church' in the Interpretation Measure 1925, s 3, and see note 10 infra.

9 See the Report of the Church Assembly Commission on Fees and Faculties (CIO 1959) 52.

10 'Church' in the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964 must be interpreted as meanings any church or chapel which has been consecrated for the purpose of public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England: Interpretation Measure 1925, s 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO FACULTIES/(i) In general/1310. Principles and practice of the faculty jurisdiction.

1310. Principles and practice of the faculty jurisdiction.

Ecclesiastical law, as administered in England until the middle of the nineteenth century, had a tradition of flexibility¹. This tradition, through modified by acceptance of the binding force of precedent² and by the inroads of legislation, has not been altogether lost, and evidence of its survival is to be found in many judgments of recent times. In faculty proceedings in particular (which now constitute most of the business of the ecclesiastical courts) emphasis has frequently been laid on the discretionary character of the jurisdiction³.

The court has a discretion either to refuse a faculty or to grant one for any purpose consistent with the existing law⁴. While the wishes of the incumbent, churchwardens and parochial church council carry great weight⁵, neither those wishes nor the views of the majority of parishioners are conclusive⁶; but proprietary rights are not to be ignored⁷.

The discretionary aspect of the jurisdiction is exemplified in the accepted practice of relaxing the strict requirements of the law in matters of minor importance. The court, it has been said, is not hungry after jurisdiction in really small matters of no general moment or significance⁸. Hence, although strictly speaking no alteration whatever should be made to the fabric or furnishings of a church without the authority of a faculty⁹ or, in appropriate cases, of an archdeacon's certificate¹⁰, the court does not in practice require application to be made for such items as hassocks and book-boxes¹¹ or minor current repairs¹².

In the case of a churchyard, the incumbent's permission is normally treated in practice as a sufficient authority for the erection of a monument and, provided that the proposed monument does not offend against such general directions as the chancellor may have laid down for the diocese, the requirement of a faculty is dispensed with¹³.

In cases where a need is shown for a provisional or interim authorisation of alterations in a church, chancellors have frequently thought it appropriate to issue a 'letter of licence', on the understanding that the full requirements of the faculty procedure will, so far as may be necessary, be complied with in due course¹⁴.

In exercising its discretion as to whether or not to grant a faculty the court is influenced by a number of factors, including doctrinal, legal, liturgical and artistic considerations and the wishes of interested or affected persons¹⁵. It is entitled to the advice of the diocesan advisory committee for the care of churches¹⁶, and may refer such advice to the Council for Places of Worship¹⁷.

The court's discretion is exercisable only within the bounds of the existing law. Thus, it cannot authorise the introduction of an illegal ornament¹⁸, and it must observe the restrictions imposed by statute or otherwise in respect of such matters as the erection of buildings on a disused burial ground¹⁹ or the use of consecrated ground for secular purposes²⁰.

In the case of every parochial church and chapel a record of all alterations, additions, removals or repairs must be kept in a book provided for the purpose, and the record must indicate where specifications and plans may be inspected if they are not deposited with the book²¹.

1 It was described by Sir Robert Phillimore as a flexible system of jurisprudence: see the Study of the Civil and Canon Law in its relation to the State, the Church and the Universities (1843) 52 et seq, quoted in Kemp, Introduction to Canon Law in the Church of England (1957) 76.

2 See PARA 1271 ante.

3 See eg Re St Mary, Tyne Dock (No. 2) [1958] P 156 at 165, 166, [1958] 1 All ER 1 at 6, 7, where Deputy Chancellor Wigglesworth, in discussing the principles which govern the exercise of the faculty jurisdiction, quoted with approval the observations of Chancellor Kempe in St Luke's, Newcastle (1912) (unreported) to the effect that the granting of a faculty such as the petitioners were seeking was a matter entirely in the discretion of the judge, who in the exercise of that discretion was bound to consider not only the interests of the parties to the suit before him but also those of present and future parishioners. As to flexibility in the application of the rubrics of the Book of Common Prayer, see PARA 955 ante.

4 A faculty is by definition a licence to do something which otherwise could not lawfully be done (see PARA 1273 note 6 ante), but it cannot sanction an illegality (see note 7 infra).

These cases refer to the powers of the vestry, which have been transferred to the parochial church council (see PARA 575 ante), which has, apparently, the same right to be heard as the vestry formerly had: St Magnus-the-Martyr Parochial Church Council v Chancellor of the Diocese of London [1923] P 38 at 45, per Sankey J. An irregularity in the proceedings of a parochial church council is not necessarily fatal: see Thomas v Morris (1823) 1 Add 470. For a case where a faculty for the erection of a gallery in a church was granted notwithstanding the vicar's opposition, see Tattersall v Knight (1811) 1 Phillim 232; and for a case relating to a churchyard in which the incumbent's objection was overruled, see Re Little Gaddesden Churchyard, ex parte Cuthbertson [1933] P 150.

In Walter v Mountague and Lamprell (1836) 1 Curt 253 at 260, Dr Lushington said 'I do not say whether or not if the rector be called upon to show cause and he obstinately opposes a faculty, the court may grant it'. But a rector cannot claim, as a matter of right, to make a vault under a chancel or affix a tablet on the walls: Rich v Bushnell supra at 171. If a faculty for work in the chancel, for which the rector's consent is necessary in law, is granted without that consent, the remedy lies not in prohibition, but in appeal: Bulwer v Hase (1803) 3 East 217. If the work is carried on without his consent, he can, in spite of the faculty, maintain an action of trespass against the party executing it: see at 220. As to fittings in the chancel, see Nickalls v Briscoe [1892] P 269 at 276.

8 See Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 1419, quoting Lord Stowell, and cf. the statement of Sir Alfred Kempe in the memorandum cited in PARA 1306 note 8 ante, where he said that the churchwardens are bound to exercise constant vigilance with regard to the state of the church and to execute necessary repairs without obtaining a faculty; the ecclesiastical courts repose confidence in the incumbent and churchwardens, and in matters of small moment will not censure them for having acted without the express authority of a faculty. The courts are not eager for jurisdiction in such cases, but if any doubt exists inquiry should be made of the registry whether it is safe to proceed without a faculty. This statement is quoted in Cripps, Church and Clergy (8th Edn) 148, 149. At the time Kempe was writing the churchwardens' legal responsibility for the care and maintenance of the church fabric etc. had not been transferred to the parochial church council: see PARA 576 ante.

13 In many dioceses directions have been issued as to the material, style and dimensions of monuments, with an intimation from the chancellor that he will not require a faculty to be sought provided the proposed monument complies with those requirements. See PARA 1316 post.

14 This practice has been frequently resorted to in recent years in order to facilitate the experimental rearrangement of church furnishings to meet new liturgical needs. In such cases it has been usual for the chancellor to give an informal temporary licence by letter on condition that (1) if after a limited specified period the parish wished to abandon the experiment the status quo would be restored; and (2) if the experiment proved to be a success application would be made for a faculty confirming the rearrangement. It is implied that no irreversible alteration may be made without a faculty.

UPDATE

1310 Principles and practice of the faculty jurisdiction

TEXT AND NOTES--All faculty matters must, except as provided otherwise (see PARA 1331A), be dealt with by the chancellor: Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 2000, SI 2000/2047, r 12(1). Any faculty granted by the chancellor in unopposed proceedings must (subject to r 36: see PARA 1330) be issued by the registrar in App C Form 5 together with a certificate in App C Form 6 to be completed in accordance with the requirement in the faculty: r 12(2).

NOTES--Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3, see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

NOTE 6--In considering the effect on a parish of granting a faculty, the court cannot take into account the subjective reasons of parties opposing it: Re St Peter and St Paul, Upper Teddington and St Michael and St George, Fulwell [1993] 1 WLR 852.

NOTE 15--The court should be reluctant to grant faculties to the detriment of private property, and should do so only when compelled by necessity or duty: Re St Peter and St Paul, Upper Teddington and St Michael and St George, Fulwell. See also Re St Luke the Evangelist, Maidstone [1995] 1 All ER 321 (faculty sought for reorientation of liturgical worship and replacement of pews with chairs in listed building church but granted only in respect of latter). Necessity and necessary means 'something less than essential, but more than merely desirable or convenient; in other words, something that is requisite or reasonably necessary': Re St John the Evangelist, Blackheath (1998) 5 ELJ 217. When considering whether to grant a faculty, the court should consider requirements under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, which will have future application to churches: Re Holy Cross, Pershore [2001] 3 WLR 1521. See also Re All Saints, Hough on the Hill (2002) Times, 31 January (effect on bats).

TEXT AND NOTE 16--The chancellor must now seek the advice of the advisory committee before making a final determination in any cause of faculty, unless the action proposed relates exclusively to exhumation or the reservation of a grave space or he is satisfied that the matter is sufficiently urgent to justify the grant of a faculty without obtaining the committee's advice: see the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 15(1) and SI 2000/2047 r 14. Where the advisory committee supplied a certificate in the prescribed form under r 3(5) (see PARA 1323) in respect of the same works or purposes as are the subject of the petition not more than 12 months prior to the lodging of the petition the advisory committee may, if appropriate, confirm that they do not wish to alter the certificate: r 14.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO FACULTIES/(i) In general/1311. The legal effect of a faculty.

1311. The legal effect of a faculty.

A faculty, as its name indicates, confers liberty on a person to do something; it does not command him to do anything¹. If it has been obtained surreptitiously or fraudulently it may be revoked², but in general it is irrevocable, even though granted in error³, unless the court has reserved to itself power in that behalf⁴. A faculty may be granted 'until further order'; the insertion of these words enables the court to retain control of the subject matter of the faculty and to recall the faculty if, for instance, there is a change in the relevant circumstances, or a condition attached to the faculty has not been observed⁵, or the subject matter of the faculty becomes an object of unlawful ceremonial use or of superstitious use or reverence⁶.

A faculty may be granted in appropriate cases for the purpose of regularising a situation resulting from omission to obtain a faculty. In such a case what was wrongfully done cannot be undone without a faculty; so that, for example, a faculty will be required for the removal of an article unlawfully introduced⁷. Alternatively, an act done without a faculty may be legalised by the grant of a confirmatory faculty⁸, and sometimes an article which has been introduced without a faculty becomes the subject of crosspetitions for its removal or confirmation.

5 The court has power to grant a faculty subject to conditions (St Jude's, Hampstead (1909) Times, 6th August), one of which may be that the work is to be carried out under the supervision of the archdeacon or some other person nominated by the court: see PARA 1327 post.

1311A. Injunctions and restoration orders.

1. Applications

Where it appears to the consistory court that a person intends to commit or continue to commit, or cause or permit the continuance of, any act in relation to a church or churchyard or any article appertaining to a church which would be unlawful under ecclesiastical law, it may issue an injunction restraining that person from doing so¹. Where it appears to the consistory court that a person has committed, or caused or permitted the commission of, any such act, it may make a restoration order requiring that person to take such steps as the court may consider necessary, within such time as the court may specify, to restore the position so far as possible to that which existed immediately before the act was committed². An injunction may be issued and a restoration order may be made on an application by the archdeacon or any other person appearing to the court to have a sufficient interest in the matter or on its own motion³.

The chancellor must seek the advice of the diocesan advisory committee before issuing a permanent injunction or making a restoration order, unless the action proposed relates exclusively to exhumation or the reservation of a grave space or he is satisfied that the matter is sufficiently urgent to justify the issue of an injunction without obtaining the committee's advice⁴. Failure to comply without reasonable excuse with any requirement of an injunction issued or a restoration order made by any court is a contempt of the court⁵.

1 Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 13(4). Section 13 is wide enough to apply to the consecrated parts of a municipal cemetery: Re West Norwood Cemetery [1994] 3 WLR 820. Cf. Re Welford Road Cemetery, Leicester [2006] All ER (D) 244 (Oct)

2 1991 Measure s 13(5). The court must not make a restoration order in respect of any act unless it is satisfied that less than six years have elapsed since the act was committed: s 13(8). Where an application for a restoration order is made by an archdeacon and any fact relevant to the making of the application has been deliberately concealed from him, the period of six years does not begin to run until the archdeacon has discovered the concealment or could with reasonable diligence have done so: s 13(9). Deliberate commission of a breach of duty in circumstances in which it is unlikely to be discovered for some time amounts to deliberate concealment of the facts involved in the breach: s 13(10).

3 Ibid s 13(6).

5 Ibid s 13(11).

2. Procedure

An application for an injunction or for a restoration order may be made by the archdeacon concerned or by any other person appearing to the registrar or the chancellor to have a sufficient interest in the matter¹. The application must be made in writing in the prescribed form² and must be accompanied by an affidavit of the applicant, or of a person acting on his behalf, giving details of the facts and matters relied on in support of his application³. An affidavit may contain statements of information or belief with the sources and grounds thereof⁴. An application must not be served on any person unless it contains details of a date of hearing, which must be provided by the registrar who issues the application⁵.

The application must be served (1) on any person against whom the applicant is seeking an injunction or restoration order; and (2) where faculty proceedings have been instituted in relation to or concerning the subject matter of the application, on each of the petitioners and any other parties to the proceedings; and (3) if it appears to the court impracticable to serve the application on all or any of the persons in (1) and (2) above, the court may make an order giving leave for steps to be taken to bring the application to the notice of any person to be served⁶. Unless the court otherwise directs, service must be effected not less than two clear days before the hearing date⁷. A copy of any application (other than by the archdeacon) must be sent by the applicant to the archdeacon and also to the minister (if he is not the applicant) at the same time as steps are taken to effect service⁸. Before he lays an application before the chancellor, the registrar must satisfy himself that service has been effected and must require by way of proof either an acknowledgement of service signed by the person against whom an injunction or restoration order is sought, or his solicitor, or an affidavit that personal service or service in accordance with any order of the court has been effected⁹.

Any person on whom an application is served is entitled to answer the application by way of affidavit evidence from himself and witnesses on his behalf or, subject to the directions of the chancellor, by oral evidence at the hearing¹⁰. Any affidavit in answer to an application must be served on the applicant within 14 days after service of the application on the person answering, and a copy of the affidavit must at the same time be sent to the registrar¹¹.

The evidence at the hearing of an application must be given by affidavit (unless leave is given by the chancellor for evidence to be given orally) provided that the makers of affidavits may be required to attend the hearing for cross-examination¹². The chancellor may issue an injunction or make a restoration order on such terms as appear to him to be just and such terms must be set out in an order in the prescribed form¹³. Any order requiring any person to do an act must state the time within which an act is to be done¹⁴. The chancellor must give such directions as to service of the order as he considers appropriate¹⁵. On the hearing of an application the chancellor must give such directions in relation to the institution of faculty proceedings as he considers appropriate¹⁶.

Where an applicant considers it necessary to apply to the chancellor for an injunction without complying with the requirements for service, he may so inform the registrar, who must immediately refer the matter to the chancellor, who may issue an injunction on such terms as may appear to him to be just by way of an order in the prescribed form¹⁷ provided that he (1) requires the applicant immediately to serve an application in the prescribed form¹⁸ on the person against whom the injunction is issued, (2) orders that the injunction continues in force for a specified period of time which, unless he otherwise directs, must be not more than 14 days from the date of the order, and (3) gives directions for the hearing of the application¹⁹. Where as a result of information brought to his attention (whether before or after faculty proceedings have been instituted) the chancellor considers it necessary to issue an injunction against any person without any application having been made, he may of his own motion issue an injunction on such terms as appear to him to be just by way of an order in the prescribed form²⁰ provided that he makes an order that the injunction continues in force for a specified period of time which, unless he otherwise directs, must be not more than 14 days from the date of the order²¹.

Where no application has been made, but it appears to the chancellor as the result of information brought to his attention (whether before or after faculty proceedings have been instituted) that there are grounds on which he might make a restoration order, he cannot make such an order of his own motion by way of an order in the prescribed form²² without first considering the desirability of (1) directing that a special citation be served on any person against whom such a restoration order might be made requiring the attendance of such person before the court and place specified in the citation, and (2) giving that person an opportunity to be heard as to whether or not a restoration order should be made²³.

Any injunction or restoration order may be varied, extended or discharged by the chancellor as he thinks fit²⁴. At any stage of any proceedings, the chancellor must give such directions as appear to him to be necessary to enable the proceedings to be expeditiously and justly determined, and he may adjourn the hearing of any application or other proceedings from time to time on such terms as he considers just²⁵. The chancellor may make such orders for costs in respect of any application for an injunction or restoration order as he considers just²⁶.

(ii) Matters within the Faculty Jurisdiction

1312. Faculties relating to church buildings.

Any works affecting the fabric or fixtures of a church will generally require a faculty or, where appropriate¹, an archdeacon's certificate². This requirement will normally apply to any structural addition, alteration, demolition, renovation or repair, although in practice an exception is made in the case of minor current repairs³. It will apply also to works of decoration or redecoration, to the installation or alteration of lighting or heating systems, to the moving of, for example, a pulpit, font, organ⁴, stalls or pews to new positions⁵, and to the erection of monuments, including memorial tablets on the walls⁶.

If planning permission under the general law is required in respect of additions or alterations to a church building the necessity for obtaining a faculty from the ecclesiastical court will not be affected⁷.

If a faculty is sought for works designed to convert a church into a dual-purpose building (for example by providing accommodation for social activities in addition to worship) it may be considered necessary to impose conditions to ensure that the new uses will not be inconsistent with the character of a consecrated building⁸.

There is no legal impediment to the granting of a faculty for the interment of cremated remains under the floor of a church⁹, but in practice such faculties are sparingly granted and usually, it is thought, only in cases where the deceased person was a priest, and in particular where he had been the incumbent of the parish concerned¹⁰.

At one time faculties were granted for the appropriation of pews, but it would require very special circumstances today to induce such a grant¹¹.

1 For the cases in which the archdeacon's certificate procedure is available, see PARA 1331 post.

2 See PARA 1306 ante, 1310 text to note 9 ante.

3 See PARA 1310 ante.

4 The repair or renovation of an organ is usually considered to require a faculty unless it amounts to no more than routine maintenance.

5 As to alterations affecting movable furnishings and other articles, see PARA 1318 post.

6 See the memorandum of Sir Alfred Kempe cited in PARA 1306 note 8 ante. As to monuments, including mural tablets, and inscriptions on them, see PARA 1316 post.

7 Such cases would usually arise where the proposed additions or alterations were likely to affect a church's external appearance. The requirement of planning permission for development must be distinguished from certain other requirements (eg listed building consent) in respect of which there is an exemption in favour of ecclesiastical buildings for the time being used for ecclesiastical purposes: see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING.

8 As to the use of consecrated ground for secular purposes, see PARA 1073 ante, 1315 post.

9 See Re Kerr [1894] P 284. See also The Disposal of Cremated Remains (CIO 1965) 7, 8. The incumbent's consent is always required. It seems that in current practice a faculty for disposal in the wall (immurement) is seldom if ever granted. One or two instances are known in which permission has been granted for caskets or urns containing cremated remains to be placed in positions in which they are openly visible in the church, but such cases are to be regarded as wholly exceptional. As to the interment of cremated remains in churchyards, see PARA 1315 post.

10 The courts appear to act on a principle similar to that which was applied to the burial of a body by a mediaeval canon which was entitled 'De non sepeliendo in ecclesiis', under the terms of which the privilege was to be reserved for a priest or some holy man who by the merits of his past life might deserve such a peculiar favour: Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 651. As to the history of the practice of burying in churches, see Kennett, Parochial Antiquities 591, 592; Gilbert v Buzzard (1821) 2 Hag Con 333; Rich v Bushnell (1827) 4 Hag Ecc 164 at 171. A faculty was required, unless the right to such burial was prescribed for as belonging to a messuage: Waring v Griffiths (1758) 1 Burr 440; Harvey v Percivall (1909) Co Ent fo. 8, cited in Dawney v Dee (1620) Cro Jac 605; and see 1 Gib Cod 453. The burial of a body in church is now in many instances prohibited by law (see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1013), but even where no such prohibition is in force the granting of a faculty for this purpose would seem today to be justifiable, if at all, only on quite exceptional grounds. As to vaults in churches and petitions for exclusive rights of burial in them, see Rugg v Kingsmill (1868) LR 2 PC 59; Kellett v St John's, Burscough Bridge (1916) 32 TLR 571.

1313. Faculties for vesting privately-owned parts of churches.

In proceedings taken by an incumbent¹ or parochial church council a court may grant a faculty vesting any building or other structure forming part of and physically connected with a church² in the person or body in whom the church is vested³ where the incumbent or council satisfies the court that:

- 32 (1) the person in whom the church is vested is not the owner entitled to possession of the building or that there is reasonable doubt as to the ownership or right to possession of it⁴; and
- 33 (2) the incumbent or council or some other person has taken all reasonable steps since, or shortly before, the commencement of the proceedings to communicate with all persons who may reasonably be supposed to have any rights of ownership or possession, whether absolute or limited, over the building⁵; and
- 34 (3) notwithstanding such reasonable steps there has been no communication with those persons; or all persons with whom communication has been made and who, on reasonable grounds, claim rights of ownership or possession over the building consent to the grant of the faculty⁶; and
- 35 (4) no works of repair, redecoration or reconstruction have been executed upon the building by or on behalf of any person claiming any title to it adverse to the title of the person in whom the church is vested during the seven years immediately preceding the commencement of the proceedings⁷.

Where such a faculty is granted the building specified in it vests, by virtue of the faculty and without any further or other assurance or conveyance, in the person in whom the church is vested as part of the church for all purposes, and thereupon any property rights of any other person in it determine⁸.

1 'Incumbent' means the incumbent of the benefice comprising the parish in which the church concerned is situated: Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 1 (1). For the meaning of 'benefice', see the Interpretation Measure 1925, s 3, and PARA 768 note 1 ante.

1314. Faculties for demolition of churches.

The power of an ecclesiastical court to grant a faculty for the demolition or partial demolition of a church¹, formerly very extensive², is now restricted by provisions specifying the grounds upon which such a faculty may be granted and the procedural requirements which must be fulfilled before the faculty can be granted³.

A court may grant a faculty:

- 36 (1) for the demolition of the whole or part of a church if it is satisfied that another church will be erected on the same site or curtilage, or part of it, to take the place of the existing church⁴;
- 37 (2) for the demolition of part of a church if it is satisfied that the part left standing will be used for the public worship of the Church of England for a substantial period after the demolition⁵;
- 38 (3) for the demolition of part of a church if it is satisfied that the demolition is necessary for the purpose of the repair, alteration or reconstruction of the part to be demolished or of the whole of the church⁶;
- 39 (4) for the demolition or partial demolition of a church if, under specified statutory provisions, an order⁷ has been made in respect of that church by a court of competent jurisdiction or a notice⁸ has been served in respect of it by the appropriate local authority respecting works to be carried out in the public interest⁹.

A petition for the grant of a faculty under these provisions must state which of the grounds are relied on and must give information on various specified matters, including arrangements for the disposal of the fittings and contents of the church¹⁰.

Other statutory provisions enabling the demolition of a church to be authorised by a procedure independent of the faculty jurisdiction have been dealt with elsewhere¹¹.

3 See the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 2, which prohibits the granting of such faculties except on the grounds there specified (see infra) and after fulfilment of such procedural requirements as are applicable (see PARAS 1321, 1323 post). Nothing in s 2 is to be construed as prejudicing or affecting the provisions of the Ancient Monuments Acts 1913 to 1972 or the Town and Country Planning Act 1971: Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 2 (5); Interpretation Act 1889, s 38; Interpretation Measure 1925, s 1.

TEXT AND NOTES--1964 Measure s 2 replaced: Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 ss 17, 18, Sch 8.

NOTES--Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3, see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

TEXT AND NOTES 1-6--1964 Measure s 2(2), (3) now 1991 Measure s 17(2), (3). 1964 Measure s 2(3) proviso s 2(5) not reproduced.

TEXT AND NOTES 7-9--1964 Measure s 2(4) not reproduced. The court cannot grant a faculty for demolition of a church where another church is to be erected on the site, or for demolition of part of a church where the part left standing will continue to be used for worship, if the church is a listed building or in a conservation area unless (i) the registrar has given notice in writing to the Secretary of State, the local planning authority, the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission for England, and the national amenity societies; (ii) the judge of the court has considered the advice tendered by the bodies in (i) above; (iii) the registrar has given notice in writing to the Royal Commission on the Historical Monuments of England and either (a) for one month or more following the giving of the notice reasonable access to the church has been made available to the Royal Commission for the purpose of recording it, or (ii) the Royal Commission have stated in writing that they have completed their recording of the church or that they do not wish to record it: 1991 Measure s 17(5). The court cannot grant a faculty for demolition of part of a church for the purpose of repair, alteration or reconstruction unless (i) it is satisfied, after consultation with the advisory committee, that when the proposed repair, alteration or reconstruction is completed the demolition will not materially affect the external or internal appearance of the church or the architectural, archaeological, artistic or historic character of the church, or (ii) the procedural requirements and, where applicable, the requirements as to churches that are listed buildings or in conservation areas, have been complied with: s 17(6).

Where the chancellor of a diocese is satisfied (i) that the demolition of the whole or part of a church is necessary in the interests of safety or health or for the preservation of the church and, having regard to the urgency of the matter, there is insufficient time to obtain a faculty in respect of it, and (ii) in the case of a church which is a listed building or is in a conservation area, that it is not practicable to secure safety or health or the preservation of the building by works of repair or works for affording temporary support or shelter, and that the works to be carried out are limited to the minimum measures reasonably necessary, he may by an instrument under his hand authorise the carrying out of the demolition without a faculty: s 18(1). This power is without prejudice to the powers exercisable under any rule of law by diocesan chancellors: s 18(1). An instrument (i) may require the person to whom it is issued (subject to his obtaining the necessary faculty) to carry out specified works for the restoration of the church following its demolition or partial demolition, and (ii) in the case of partial demolition of a church which is a listed building or is in a conservation area, must require the person to whom it is issued, as soon as practicable after the works have been carried out, to give the local planning authority written notice describing the works carried out: s 18(2). The chancellor must send a copy of the instrument to the Council for the Care of Churches and the local planning authority: s 18(3).

'Church' includes any building which is licensed for public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England and is subject to faculty jurisdiction: s 19.

Any notice under the above provisions may be given to any person by delivering it to him, or by leaving it at his proper address, or by post: s 30(1). The proper address of such a person is his last known address: s 30(2).

On a petition for a faculty for demolition under s 17, the court must have regard to the pastoral needs and mission of the church: Re St Barnabas, Dulwich [1994] 2 WLR 545. See also Re Christchurch, Sparkbrook (2005) Times, 19 December.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO FACULTIES/(ii) Matters within the Faculty Jurisdiction/1315. Faculties relating to churchyards.

1315. Faculties relating to churchyards.

The faculty jurisdiction extends not only to consecrated churchyards but also to unconsecrated curtilages¹ and to consecrated burial grounds not belonging to a church². In general a faculty is required for any alteration affecting such land, but certain exceptions are recognised. In particular, where a right of burial in a consecrated churchyard exists or the privilege of such burial has been lawfully granted³ the burial may be carried out without a faculty; and in practice there is today no differentiation for this purpose between the burial of a body and the interment of cremated remains⁴. Where, however, it is desired to bury cremated remains in a churchyard closed by Order in Council⁵, authorisation by faculty is required, although for this purpose a general faculty is regarded as sufficient⁶. A right of burial in the churchyard does not imply any right to be buried in a particular position or any right to the exclusive property in a grave; these are privileges which can be obtained only by the grant of a faculty⁷.

A court may issue a faculty granting, enlarging or continuing any right to the exclusive use of any particular part of a churchyard, burial ground or other consecrated land for the purpose of sepulture⁸, but not for any period longer than 100 years from the date of the faculty⁹; and, subject to the terms of any faculty issued after 14th April 1964, any such right, whether absolute or limited and however granted or acquired, ceases 100 years after that date¹⁰.

Burial does not confer a right to place a tombstone or other monument in a churchyard; yard; the matter is within the court's jurisdiction, and the necessary authorisation must be obtained in every case¹¹.

In practice faculties are not required alterations of minor importance¹² or for works of routine maintenance in the churchyard¹³ or, generally speaking, for alterations in a consecrated burial ground not belonging to a church¹⁴. Any substantial alteration in the design or layout of a churchyard must, however, be authorised by faculty¹⁵. This applies, for example, to schemes involving the large-scale levelling of grave mounds and the removal or re-siting of gravestones with a view to easier maintenance¹⁶; it would also apply, in many cases at any rate, to the making of new paths and the removal or diversion of existing ones. If it is desired to set aside a portion of the churchyard exclusively for the interment or deposit of cremated remains application must be made for a faculty.

Except where there is express statutory provision to the contrary¹⁷ a faculty is always required for the exhumation of human remains from consecrated ground¹⁸. The Home Secretary's licence is also required, save where the exhumation is for the purpose of removal from one consecrated burial place to another¹⁹. Numerous grounds, apart from re-interment in a different grave, have been held to justify the grant of a faculty²⁰.

A faculty is required for the erection of any building or other structure (for example an oil storage tank) in a churchyard. Subject to certain statutory restrictions in the case of a disused burial ground²¹ the court may grant such faculties both for ecclesiastical purposes (for example for a church hall) and also, within certain limits, for other purposes which are not inconsistent with the character of consecrated land²². Similar considerations apply to the authorisation by faculty of other forms of user, and in particular to the granting of rights in the nature of easements²³. While faculties are equally necessary for such purposes in the case of unconsecrated curtilages, the courts are disposed to exercise greater latitude in granting them²⁴.

1 References in this paragraph to churchyards are, unless otherwise to be understood as including references to consecrated burial grounds belonging to a church (whether or not they are immediately adjacent to it) and also to unconsecrated curtilages, as to which see PARA 1308 ante.

3 Parishioners and persons who die in the parish have (through their personal representatives) the right to such burial if there is room in the churchyard and burials there have not been stopped through closure by Order in Council: see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1059. In respect of other persons special permission for burial may be granted by the incumbent with the assent of the parochial church council or at least of the churchwardens: see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1061.

4 While the legal right strictly relates to the burial of a body and not of cremated remains, this distinction seems now to be of little practical importance in view of the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B 38, which provides that, save for good and sufficient reason, the ashes of a cremated body should be interred or deposited in consecrated in consecrated ground (Canon B 38 para 4 b), and imposes on ministers an obligation not to refuse burial expressed in terms which apply equally to a corpse and to ashes (Canon B 38 para 2): see PARAS 1041, 1043 ante.

5 While the effect of a closing order is to prohibit, subject to possible exceptions, the further burial of bodies (see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1134), the burial of cremated remains may properly continue (see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/9).

6 Cf. Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/30. See also the Parochial Fees Order 1972, S.I. 1972 No. 177, Schedule, Part II para 1, where a distinction is made for this purpose between a general faculty and a particular faculty.

7 The selection of the position of a grave is normally within the incumbent's discretion, but if a particular space is to be reserved in advance a faculty is required: see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/9; Parochial Fees Order 1972, Schedule, Part II para 6. Subject to any existing rights and to any statutory restrictions which may be applicable there is no legal impediment to the re-use of old grave sites for fresh burials after a suitable period of time has elapsed; for this purpose no faculty is required except where the removal of gravestones is involved.

8 Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 8 (1).

9 Ibid s 8 (1) proviso.

10 Ibid s 8 (1). This provision does not apply to burial grounds and cemeteries provided under the Burial Acts 1852 to 1906 (largely repealed), the Public Health (Interments) Act 1879 (repealed) or the Local Government Act 1972, s 214: Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 8 (2); Local Government Act 1972, s 272 (2).

11 As to monuments and inscriptions on them, see PARA 1316 post.

12 See PARA 1310 ante.

13 However, a faculty would usually be necessary for the construction, demolition or substantial alteration of a wall or fence. The felling of trees normally requires the consent of the diocesan parsonages board (see the Repair of Benefice Buildings Measure 1972, s 20 (1), and PARA 1180 ante) but not, it seems, a faculty.

14 See PARA 1309 ante.

15 See Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/30.

16 In authorising such schemes consistory courts frequently impose conditions relating to such matters as the disposal of gravestones, the recording of inscriptions etc.: see also PARA 1317 post. Whilst a grave may not be disturbed, it appears that no faculty is required to level a grave mound, laying down the same turf after doing so: see Bennett v Bonaker (1828) 2 Hag Ecc 25; Bennett v Bonaker (1830) 3 Hag Ecc 17 at 51, 52.

17 Eg under the New Towns Act 1965, s 20 (6), or the Town and Country Planning Act 1971, s 128 (6), or under the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 30 (see PARA 1074 ante), s 61 (see PARA 1076 ante), or s 65, Sch. 6.

18 Adlam v Colthurst (1867) LR 2 A & E 30; Norfolk County Council v Knights and Caister-on-Sea Joint Burial Committee (1958) 1 All ER 394n, [1958] 1 WLR 309, where a faculty for disinterment to permit road widening was refused; see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1125, and see PARA 1075 ante.

19 Burial Act 1857, s 25: see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1123. The consistory court may grant a faculty subject to the Home Secretary's licence being obtained, but is not obliged to do so: Re Talbot [1901] P 1 at 6.

20 Eg the identification of a body (R v Tristram [1898] 2 QB 371), or the cremation of a body previously buried (Re Matheson [1958] 1 All ER 202, [1958] 1 WLR 246).

22 See PARA 1073 ante. Among the factors to be considered by the courts in such cases is the interest of parishioners in the availability of space for future burials: see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/46.

23 Thus faculties are frequently granted, usually on the application of public authorities, for placing cables etc. under or over a churchyard or for 'throwing into the highway' a strip of land for road-widening purposes. Apart from such purposes there is no jurisdiction to grant a faculty for the secular use of consecrated land unless the original purpose of consecration can no longer be carried out: Re St John's, Chelsea [1962] 2 All ER 850, [1962] 1 WLR 706; see PARA 1073 ante. Faculties have been granted for the construction and use of a private pathway across a churchyard (Rector etc of St Gabriel, Fenchurch Street v City of London Real Property Co Ltd [1896] P 95), for an easement of light and air over consecrated ground (Rector and Churchwardens of St Stephen, Walbrook and Grocers Co v Sun Fire Office Trustees (1883) Trist 103; St Martin Orgars (1890) Trist 145), and for interference with the ancient lights of a consecrated building (St Mark's, Old Street (1909) Times, 6th August; Christ Church, Newgate Street (1909) Times, 27th November).

TEXT AND NOTES--Use of consecrated ground for any purpose requires the sanction of the court, which will be granted only if there is some substantial reason for doing so: Re Coleford Cemetery [1984] 1 WLR 1369. NOTE 20--As to the principles to be applied, see Re Atkins [1989] 1 All ER 14. The discretion to grant a faculty for the exhumation of human remains from consecrated ground should only be exercised in strong and compelling circumstances: Re St Peter's Churchyard, Oughtrington [1993] 1 WLR 1440, followed in Re St Mary's Churchyard, Alderley [1994] 1 WLR 1478. For further guidance on considerations as to whether a faculty for exhumation may be granted, see Re Holy Trinity, Bosham [2004] Fam 125. The beliefs of the Jewish and Christian communities concerning burial are sufficiently similar for a faculty to exhume the remains of a Jew buried in consecrated ground, for reburial in unconsecrated ground in a Jewish cemetery, to be granted: Re Durrington Cemetery [2001] Fam 33. 1316. Faculties relating to monuments.

The jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts includes the power to control the placing of monuments¹ in churches, churchyards and consecrated burial grounds, and any subsequent dealings with those monuments². In practice this power is rarely, if ever, exercised in respect of monuments in burial grounds not belonging to the church³.

In respect of tombstones in churchyards and other burial grounds belonging to the church, whilst the principle is maintained that no monument may be introduced without permission, the incumbent's consent is in most cases treated as a sufficient authorisation, for the court in effect delegates to the incumbent the power to grant permission in ordinary cases without requiring the applicant to seek a faculty⁴. This delegated power is exercisable, however, only within such limits as are set by the court⁵. In cases which fall outside these limits, or where the incumbent's permission is refused, the requirement of a faculty becomes fully operative.

For the placing of monuments, including mural tablets, within a church a faculty is always required, and in this matter, as also in that of churchyard memorials, the courts have in recent times tended to exercise a stricter control than was customary in the past⁶. The nature and wording of an inscription proposed to be placed on a monument may constitute a ground for refusing a faculty for the monument⁷. A faculty can be granted even against the wishes of the incumbent⁸ or other person who holds the freehold⁹. The erection of a monument without lawful authority would be a trespass¹⁰.

Special provisions apply in the case of faculties for the moving, demolition, alteration or execution of other works to any monument¹¹ erected in or upon a church or other consecrated building or its curtilage or, with certain exceptions, upon consecrated ground¹². A court may in general grant a faculty for any such purpose even where the owner¹³ of the monument withholds his consent or cannot be found after reasonable efforts to find him have been made¹⁴, and whatever the date of any faculty authorising or affecting the monument which may have been granted previously¹⁵. But no such faculty may be granted if the owner, while withholding his consent, satisfies the court that he is, within a reasonable time, willing and able to remove the monument or so much of it as may be proved to be his property and to execute such works as the court may require to repair any damage caused by the removal¹⁶.

Approval is often given by faculty to schemes involving the removal of a considerable number of gravestones in one operation for the purpose of facilitating maintenance of the churchyard. It is the court's practice to require evidence of the steps taken (for example by local inquiries and press advertisement) to trace persons likely to have an interest in the monuments, to obtain advice as to the artistic and historical aspects of the proposals, and to impose suitable conditions as to the disposal of the gravestones, the making of a record of the inscriptions on them and other matters¹⁷.

6 This may be illustrated by the following extract from a statement by Chancellor Wigglesworth, circulated in the diocese of Bath and Wells in 1946: 'Only in quite exceptional cases, as where (for instance) the record of person's life is such that a memorial tablet commemorating that life is likely to be a source of inspiration to worshippers, or where the person commemorated has rendered outstanding service to Church or country, should a tablet be regarded as likely to be appropriate... Every parishioner and non-resident parochial elector has in relation to his parish church the right to present a petition asking for such faculty as he desires, and this statement should not be taken as prohibiting anyone from applying for a faculty to erect a tablet, but a chancellor must exercise a judicial discretion in every case which comes before him; no hard and fast rule can therefore be made; each case must be considered on its merits. It is the object of this statement to set out what in normal circumstances those merits are conceived to be'.

1317. Faculties relating to disused burial grounds.

The power of an ecclesiastical court to grant a faculty for the erection of any building¹ on a disused burial ground² is restricted by statutory provisions which make such erection unlawful except for the purpose of enlarging a church, chapel, meeting house or other place of worship³. It may therefore be necessary for the court to determine in a particular case whether the proposed works constitute the erection of a building, and if so whether they are for the purpose of such enlargement⁴.

The owner of a disused burial ground is empowered by statute to transfer it to a local authority⁵ for use as a public open space⁶. In the case of a churchyard or consecrated burial ground belonging to the church any such transaction must, according to ecclesiastical law, be authorised by faculty. A faculty will also be necessary to enable the local authority to exercise powers of management over the land so transferred⁷, to permit its use for games or sports⁸ and to authorise the moving of any tombstones or monuments⁹.

1 In the Disused Burial Grounds Act 1884 'building' includes any temporary or movable building: Open Spaces Act 1887, s 4. See further CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1146.

2 In the Disused Burial Grounds Act 1884 'disused burial ground' means any burial ground which is no longer used for interments, whether or not it has been partially or wholly closed for burials under any statute or Order in Council: Open Spaces Act 1887, s 4. See further CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1146.

4 For decisions on these questions, see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1146.

5 'Local authority' means the council of any county, district, parish or London borough, the Common Council of the City of London and, where appropriate, the Greater London Council: Open Spaces Act 1906, s 1; Parish Councils Act 1957, s 15 (2), Sch. 2; London Government Act 1963, ss 58 (1), 93 (1), Sch. 18, Part II; Local Government Act 1972, s 1 (11).

1318. Faculties relating to the contents of churches.

Subject to the latitude normally allowed in practice in matters of minor importance¹ a faculty is required for the introduction, alteration or removal of any ornament, furnishing or decoration in a church, whether or not it is a fixture². A faculty will not be granted to sanction an illegal article³, and questions concerning legality have often arisen in faculty proceedings, for example, in relation to aumbries and other receptacles for the reserved sacrament⁴, crosses and crucifixes, images and other representations, including stations of the Cross, candlesticks, sanctus bells, thuribles and confessional boxes⁵. Provided the article in question is not unlawful the grant or refusal of a faculty is a matter for the court's discretion⁶. If an article has been put into a church without a faculty a faculty is nevertheless needed for its removal, and may be granted even though the article was in the church at the time of its consecration⁷.

The movable goods of the church are in the legal ownership of the churchwardens as a quasi-corporation, but the power to dispose of the goods, by sale or otherwise, cannot be exercised without the authority of a faculty⁸. In an increasing number of cases in recent years faculties have been sought for the disposal, usually by sale at public auction, of valuable articles belonging to parish churches, especially church plate⁹. The jurisdiction of consistory courts to grant such faculties is not in doubt, even in the case of a proposed sale of communion vessels on the open market with no restrictions on their future use¹⁰, but according to reported decisions the discretion to allow a sale should be exercised sparingly¹¹, and it seems that a substantial burden rests on the petitioners, even in the absence of opposition, to satisfy the court that the sale is justified¹². Where the article to be disposed of is or may be of historic or artistic interest the judge may direct notice of the petition to be given to the Council for Places of Worship so that it may report or give evidence¹³.

The faculty jurisdiction has been extended to authorise the sale of books in certain parochial libraries¹⁴. Thus, any book in a parochial library appropriated to the use of the minister of a parish or place within the operation of the Parochial Libraries Act 1708 may be sold under the authority of a faculty and the proceeds of sale applied for such of the ecclesiastical purposes of the parish as may be directed¹⁵. Any question whether a library is within that Act and is so appropriated must be determined by the Charity Commissioners¹⁶.

As to the provisional authorisation of schemes for the re-ordering of church interiors, see PARA 1310 note 14 ante. Where a sharing agreement relates to a consecrated church the faculty jurisdiction does not apply in respect of movables required for the worship of any sharing church other than the Church of England: Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, s 5 (3); see PARA 1191 ante. For provisions excluding the faculty jurisdiction in the case of the disposal of the contents of redundant churches, see the Pastoral Measure 1968, s 64, and PARA 1127 ante.

⁵ See PARA 953 et seq ante, where these matters are fully discussed.

8 See PARA 553 ante. It is necessary also to obtain the consent of the parochial church council, which is the body responsible in law for the care of the movable goods: see PARA, 582 ante; and see Re St Gregory's, Tredington [1972] Fam 236 at 240, [1971] 3 All ER 269 at 272. Goods which are of minor importance, especially those of an impermanent nature, are commonly treated as being outside the scope of the faculty jurisdiction or alternatively as matters in respect of which it should not in practice be exercised: see note 1 supra. The faculty jurisdiction is in any case not regarded as appropriate to such things as the ornaments of the minister, as to which, see PARA 970 ante.

9 The subject has attracted much public attention and has been debated in the General Synod: see 'Treasures on Earth' (GS 132), a report by a working party of the Council for Places of Worship presented to the synod in 1973, in which reference was made at p. 24 to the occurrence of some thirty-five relevant court cases since 1965.

11 See Re St Gregory's, Tredington [1972] Fam 236, [1971] 3 All ER 269, where G. H. Newsom QC, Deputy Dean of the Arches, also expressed the opinion that faculties of this kind should seldom, if ever, be granted without a hearing in open court. As to considerations of security and insurance, see Re St Helen's, Brant Broughton [1974] Fam 16, [1973] 3 All ER 386 (sale of painting).

12 The existence of an emergency arising from an urgent need for repairs to the fabric of the church and the parochial church council's inability to provide or obtain the necessary funds may be a sufficient ground for allowing the sale; the fact that the articles are not required for use in the church and that by reason of their value and the high cost of insurance they must be kept permanently in a bank is a relevant consideration; and the possibility of other acceptable reasons for allowing a sale (eg the application of the proceeds to a different charitable and religious use in the parish or elsewhere) is not to be excluded: Re St Gregory's, Tredington [1972] Fam 236, [1971] 3 All ER 269. It is usual for the court, in granting a faculty, to impose conditions as to the manner in which the proceeds of sale are to be dealt with.

13 See the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967, S.I. 1967 No. 1002, rr 5a, 6 (3) (amended by S.I. 1975 No. 135), and PARA 1323 post.

This is expressed to be notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Parochial Libraries Act 1708, s 10, which provides that no book in a parochial library is to be alienable and that no book thereafter given to such a library is to be alienable without the Ordinary's consent and then only where there is a duplicate copy. Before granting a faculty for the sale of such a book the judge must seek and consider the advice of the diocesan advisory committee (as to which see PARA 1321 post): Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 4 (1).

1318A. Deposit of articles in places of safety.

If it appears to an archdeacon that any article¹ appertaining to a church, being an article which he considers to be of architectural, artistic, historical or archaeological value, is exposed to danger of loss or damage and ought to be removed to a place of safety, he may order that the article be removed from the church and deposited in a specified place of safety². Unless the archdeacon is of the opinion that the article should be removed immediately, he must notify the churchwardens and any person having custody of the article and the parochial church council and advisory committee of the facts as they appear to him and inform them that he will consider any written representations made by them before a date specified in the notice and not less than 28 days after the service of the notice³. The archdeacon must not make an order before that date and must, before doing so, consider any representations duly made to him⁴. Where the archdeacon makes an order without giving the advisory committee an opportunity to make representations he must, as soon as practicable after the removal of the article, notify the committee of the removal⁵. If any person on whom an order is served refuses or fails to comply with it, the archdeacon may apply to the consistory court for an order that that person must deliver the article to the place of safety specified in the order⁶. The court must make the order if it is satisfied that the archdeacon's order was made in accordance with these provisions⁷. Where an order is made by an archdeacon, he must, within 28 days after the removal of the article, apply to the consistory court for a faculty authorising the retention of the article in the place of safety⁸.

² Ibid s 21(1). An order must be in the prescribed form and must be directed to, and served on, the churchwardens and any other person having custody of the article: ibid s 21(4). Any order under these provisions may be served on any person by delivering it to him, or by leaving it at his proper address, or by post: ibid s 30(1). The proper address of such a person is his last known address: ibid s 30(2).

In any case where an archdeacon is of the opinion that an article falling within s 21(1) should be removed to a place of safety immediately the archdeacon may make an order in the form of the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 2000, SI 2000/2047, App C Form 13: r 29(1). In any case not requiring an immediate order under r 29(1), an archdeacon may not make an order under the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 21 unless and until (1) the churchwardens and any other person having custody of the article and the parochial church council and the advisory committee have been notified by in the form of App C Form 14 of the facts as they appear to the archdeacon and that written representations made by any of them will be considered if made before the date specified in the notice being not less than 28 days after the service of the notice; and (2) any representations duly made under head (1) have been considered: r 29(2). Subject to fulfilling the requirements of r 29(2) in any case falling within that paragraph the archdeacon may make an order in App C Form 15.

(iii) Parties and Bodies Concerned

1319. Persons interested.

A petition for a faculty is usually presented by the incumbent and churchwardens, with or without the addition of other parishioners, but it may be presented by any parishioner¹ or person having a personal interest², although mere volunteers are not recognised for this purpose³. Any person whose name is entered on the church electoral roll⁴ of the parish concerned but who does not reside in the parish is deemed for the purpose of faculty proceedings to have an interest as if he were a parishioner of that parish⁵. The whole body of parishioners has an interest in the church and churchyard⁶ and therefore the petition will ordinarily be expected to show that the application has been approved by the parochial church council⁷, but neither the wishes of the council nor those of the incumbent or the churchwardens are conclusive, and the court may entertain a petition notwithstanding their opposition⁸.

The incumbent and churchwardens, supported by a resolution of the parochial church council, are the proper parties to apply under the alternative procedure by archdeacon's certificate⁹.

For the purpose of faculty proceedings the archdeacon of the archdeaconry in which the parish concerned is situated is deemed to be interested as such¹⁰. The court is entitled to expect him, as the bishop's officer, to help it by entering appearance in any case of difficulty in which the court invites him to do so and by instructing solicitors and counsel so that the petitioner's witnesses may be properly cross-examined, the diocesan advisory committee's witnesses carefully examined in chief and the law thoroughly argued: if he wishes to oppose the petition he may set up a positive case by his pleading; if he supports it or is neutral he should simply give instructions that the petitioners be put to proof¹¹. If the archdeaconry is vacant or the archdeacon is incapacitated by absence or illness from exercising or fulfilling his rights and duties under the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964 or if he is, in the bishop's opinion, for any other reason unable or unwilling to act, such other person as the bishop appoints in writing has power to act in the archdeacon's place in any particular case¹².

Generally speaking the bishop cannot personally intervene in a matter requiring a faculty, and his doing so may lead to misapprehension and mistake¹. The chancellor, however, takes no jurisdiction but that which his patent of appointment confers, and in some dioceses the right is reserved to the bishop to sit in the consistory court, either alone or with the chancellor, for the hearing of faculty cases².

1321. Diocesan advisory committee and Council for Places of Worship.

In every diocese there is an advisory committee for the care of churches, known as the diocesan advisory committee, consisting of the archdeacons of the diocese and such other persons as the bishop may be writing appoint, whose term of office is five years, although they are eligible for reappointment¹. The bishop may appoint one of the members to be chairman¹.

If required to do so the committee must advise the judge of any court², intending applicants for faculties³, persons building new churches or converting buildings for the purpose of churches or erecting buildings or converting existing buildings with the intention that they be licensed for public worship⁴, and persons owning or responsible for the upkeep of unconsecrated buildings which are so licensed⁵. The committee must advise an archdeacon before he issues a certificate⁶ and he may not do so without its approval⁷. It may make its own rules of procedure and may adopt any general procedural regulations made by the Council for Places of Worship⁸.

The court may not grant a faculty for the total or partial demolition of a church where another church is to be erected on the same site to take its place⁹, or the partial demolition of a church where the remaining part is to be used for the public worship of the Church of England¹⁰ unless, inter alia, written notice has been given by an officer of the court to the Council for Places of Worship and the diocesan advisory committee¹¹, and the judge has considered such advice as the committee tenders to the court¹² and, if it applies to give evidence, has heard evidence from the council¹³. Nor may it grant a faculty for the partial demolition of a church on being satisfied that the demolition is necessary for the purpose of the repair, alteration or reconstruction of the church unless such notice has been given to the council and the judge has considered any advice which it may tender¹⁴. Before granting a faculty for the sale of books in a parochial library the judge must require the committee to advise him and must consider such advice as it may tender¹⁵. The judge may direct notice of a petition for the disposal of an article which he thinks may be of historic or artistic interest to be served on the council¹⁶, in which case, within six weeks of receiving the notice, the council may make a report to the judge¹⁷ or a member of the council or person authorised by it may apply to the registrar to give evidence in the proceedings¹⁸.

TEXT AND NOTES--Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967 replaced: Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 2000, SI 2000/2047.

TEXT AND NOTES 1-6--1964 Measure s 13 repealed: Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 2(8). As to constitutions of diocesan advisory committees see now s 2, Schs 1, 2; and PARA 523.

In every diocese the secretary to the advisory committee must compile and maintain a register of all petitions for a faculty referred to it for advice, and must ensure that the register is available for inspection by the public by prior appointment at a place in the diocese designated by the bishop: s 15(3). On receipt of any petition for a faculty for which the advice of the advisory committee is required to be sought, the registrar must notify the secretary to the advisory committee of the details of the petition in the prescribed form and the secretary must enter the details in the register of petitions: SI 2000/2047 r 11.

TEXT AND NOTE 7--1964 Measure s 12 repealed: Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 Sch 8. As to delegation to archdeacons of the power to grant faculties see PARA 1331-1333.

NOTE 8--Definition of 'council' repealed: Dioceses, Pastoral and Mission Measure 2007 Sch 7.

By a resolution passed on 7 July 1980 the General Synod adopted a report of the Standing Committee (GS 449) setting out, inter alia, a new constitution for the Council for the Care of Churches (formerly the Council for Places of Worship), which was reconstituted as a permanent commission of the General Synod as from 1 March 1981.

The Council for the Care of Churches is under a duty to compile and maintain a list specifying certain buildings which are subject to special care: Care of Places of Worship Measure 1999 s 1(1). The following buildings are, on application made in the prescribed manner (see Sch 1), eligible for inclusion in the list: (1) a building which is subject to any peculiar jurisdiction and which is used for worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England; (2) a building which is a chapel forming part of an episcopal house of residence; (3) a building which is a chapel or other place of worship owned or leased by or held in trust for a religious community; (4) a building (not being one falling within heads (1)-(3)) which is part of a university, college, school, hospital, Inn of Court, almshouse or other public or charitable institution and of which the primary use is for worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England or for joint worship by members of the Church of England and other Churches; and (5) a building which is subject to a sharing agreement made on behalf of the Church of England in pursuance of the Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969 (see PARA 1186 et seq) and which is used for worship: 1999 Measure s 1(2). Where an application is or has been made for the inclusion in the list of any building, an application may also be made for the inclusion in the list of an adjoining building which is used wholly or mainly as a vestry or sacristy: s 1(3). Where an application is or has been made for the inclusion in the list of a building which falls within heads (1)-(5), and is detached from any other building, an application may also be made for the inclusion in the list of the curtilage of the building, of any monument within the curtilage or of any object or structure forming part of the land within the curtilage which is used wholly or mainly for purposes ancillary to the purposes for which the building is used: s 1(4). A building to which the Care of Cathedrals Measure 1990 (see PARA 633A) applies, or which is subject to the faculty jurisdiction of a consistory court, or which falls within the Ecclesiastical Exemption (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Order 1994, SI 1994/1771, art 4(d)-(g) is not eligible to be included in the list: 1999 Measure s 1(5).

On receipt by the Council of an application made in the prescribed manner for the inclusion of a building in the list or the removal of a building from the list, the building must be included in the list or removed from the list, as the case may be, unless the Council is satisfied that the application does not comply with the requirements of the 1999 Measure or any rules relating to the application: s 2(1). If, in respect of a building included in the list, the Council considers that the building is no longer eligible for inclusion, or any order or direction of a court in connection with the court's faculty jurisdiction, or any undertaking given in connection with the application for inclusion, has not been complied with, the Council may, after giving the relevant person or body an opportunity to show reason to the contrary, remove the building from the list: s 2(2). The removal of a building from the list does not affect the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 13 (see PARA 1311A) in its application to the building or anything done under that section before the removal: 1999 Measure s 2(3).

A building included in the list and any object or structure fixed to it is subject to the faculty jurisdiction of the consistory court of the diocese in which the building is situated and the provisions of any Measure, rules or other instrument relating to the faculty jurisdiction (except the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964 s 7 and the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 11(1)-(7)) apply in relation to the building and any such object or structure: 1999 Measure s 3(2). The Faculty Jurisdiction (Care of Places of Worship) Rules 2000, SI 2000/2048, lay down the procedure for faculty proceedings involving buildings, objects, structures or land which are brought within the faculty jurisdiction under the 1999 Measure. In general, the provisions of SI 2000/2048 mirror the provisions of SI 2000/2047, with certain variations. Further, SI 2000/2047 does not now apply to any building, curtilage, object or structure which is subject to the faculty jurisdiction by virtue of the 1999 Measure s 3(2) and to which SI 2000/2048 applies: SI 2000/2047 reg 37.

In the case of a building falling within head (2), the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 s 46(1) (see PARA 1278) has effect as if the proviso were omitted: 1999 Measure s 3(3). Except in the case of a building falling within head (2), certain provisions of the Inspection of Churches Measure 1955 apply in relation to the building as if the building were a church: 1999 Measure s 3(4). If a chapel forming part of Lambeth Palace is included in the list the Vicar-General's court of the province of Canterbury must, for the purposes of s 3(2), exercise the faculty jurisdiction of the consistory court in relation to the chapel (the registrar of the province of Canterbury acting as registrar of the Vicar-General's court) and references to a consistory court or to the registrar of a diocese in any Measure, rules or other instrument relating to the faculty jurisdiction must be construed accordingly, and the Council must, in the application of any such Measure, rules or other instrument, discharge the functions of the Diocesan Advisory Committee: s 3(5).

TEXT AND NOTES 9-14--1964 Measure s 2 replaced: 1991 Measure ss 17, 18, Sch 8. 1964 Measure s 2(1)(i)-(iv) now 1991 Measure s 17(4)(a)-(d). The written consent of the bishop must also be obtained: s 17(4)(a)(i). The diocesan registrar must now give notice to the Council for the Care of Churches: s 17(4)(b). 1964 Measure s 2(3) proviso not reproduced. 'Church' is now defined as including any building or part of a building which is licensed for public worship according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England and is subject to the faculty jurisdiction: 1964 Measure s 15; 1991 Measure Sch 7. 1323. Citation and notice of petition.

The diocesan registrar¹ must lay every faculty petition and its supporting documents before the judge² who, if he considers it a fit case³, must (save in the cases specified below) direct that a general citation⁴ be issued and executed by affixing the original or a copy for a continuous period of not less than ten days including two Sundays on or near the principal door of such of the churches or places of worship⁵ in the parish as the judge may direct⁶. The citation or copy must be returned to the registrar with a certificate of execution duly completed on it⁷. If the judge directs or the law otherwise requires any person to be specially cited⁸ the registrar must serve a copy of the citation on him⁹. Any person cited may not more than fourteen days after the first affixing or serving of the citation enter an appearance by lodging at the diocesan registry a notice in writing stating generally that he objects to the proposed faculty being granted¹⁰.

The judge may, however, within certain limits, dispense with the citation in the case of a petition for the exhumation of any human remains. If he is satisfied in such a case that any near relatives of the deceased still living and any other persons who in his opinion it is reasonable to regard as being concerned in the matter are the petitioners or consent to the faculty being granted he may decree the issue of the faculty forthwith without any citation¹¹, and in any other such case he may dispense with the issue of a general citation and instead direct that any of the persons referred to above who are not the petitioners be specially cited¹².

Where a faculty is sought for the total or partial demolition of a church with a view to the erection of another church on the same site, or for the demolition of part of a church with a view to the continued use of the remaining part for public worship¹³ (but not where a partial demolition is necessary for the purposes of repair, alteration or reconstruction¹⁴) notice stating the substance of the petition must be published by the petitioners in the London Gazette not more than four weeks after the lodgment of the petition and in such other newspapers as the court may direct within the period specified in the direction or, if no period is so specified, not more than fourteen days after the giving of the direction¹⁵, and an officer of the court must give notice of the petition to the Council for Places of Worship and to the diocesan advisory committee¹⁶. In the case of a petition for a faculty for the disposal of an article¹⁷ which in the judge's opinion is or may be an article of historic or artistic interest he may direct the registrar to serve written notice of the petition on the Council for Places of Worship, in which case he must direct the petitioner to serve on the council a copy of the petition and accompanying documents¹⁸. In any other particular case the judge may if he thinks fit direct the publication in newspapers or otherwise of notice of the petition¹⁹.

1 'Registrar' means the registrar of the diocese in which the church, churchyard or other place concerned is situated, and includes any person appointed to act as deputy: Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967, S.I. 1967 No. 1002, r 2 (1). If the judge is of opinion that because the registrar has acted for any of the parties or has otherwise been personally connected with the proceedings he ought not to sit as clerk of the court at the hearing, he must appoint another practising solicitor to sit as clerk in place of the registrar: r 11A (added by S.I. 1975 No. 135).

2 For the meaning of 'judge', see PARA 1321 note 2 ante.

3 If any illegality or other objection appears on the face of the petition the petitioner will be required to justify the petition as a condition of the citation.

4 For the form of citation, see the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967, Appendix, Form 7, and Court Forms. For fees, see the Legal Officers Fees Order 1975, S.I. 1975 No. 1087, Schedule, Table 11, Fees 8-12.

5 'Places of worship' means a building licensed for public worship and subject to the faculty jurisdiction by virtue of an order under the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 6 (for which see PARA 1308 ante): Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967, r 2 (1).

6 Ibid r 5 (1) (amended by S.I. 1975 No. 135). Such directions must include the parish church or one or more of the parish churches in the parish and, if the application relates to a church or place of worship which is not a parish church, that church or place of worship: r 5 (1) (amended by S.I. 1975 No. 135). Where a petition concerns two parish churches and the citation is not issued and executed in both of them a faculty subsequently issued is a nullity: Re St Michael the Archangel, Brantham, and St Peter with St Mary at Quary, Ipswich [1962] 3 All ER 609, [1962] 1 WLR 1067.

In the majority of cases, however, the reason for special citation of a person is that he is likely to have a special interest in the proceedings: see eg para 1319 note 2 ante.

10 Ibid r 5 (4). The notice must be signed by the objector or his counsel or solicitor: r 5 (10). A copy must first be served on the adverse party or his solicitor, and the copy lodged must be indorsed with the date of service and the name of the person serving it: r 5 (10). 16 Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 2 (1) (ii). A similar requirement applies also to a faculty under s 2 (3) (ii) where partial demolition is proposed for the purpose of repair, alteration or reconstruction: s 2 (3) proviso.

17 'Article' includes a part of a building, any thing affixed to land or a building, and any part of an article: Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967, r 5A (2) (added by S.I. 1975 No. 135).

UPDATE

1323 Citation and notice of petition

TEXT AND NOTES--1967 Rules replaced: see the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 2000, SI 2000/2047.

Before submitting a petition for a faculty in the consistory court intending applicants should seek the advice of the advisory committee in respect of the works or other proposals for which a faculty is required (except where the action proposed relates exclusively to exhumation or the reservation of a grave space): SI 2000/2047 r 3(1). Except in a case within r 3(4) (see infra) intending applicants should submit to the advisory committee designs, plans, photographs and other documents giving particulars of the works or other proposals together with a summary list of the works or proposals: r 3(2). Where significant changes to a listed church are proposed the intending applicant should (1) provide the advisory committee (in addition to the particulars required by r 3(2) above) with a statement of significance and a statement of needs; and (2) if the works fall within App B para 1 consult English Heritage, such of the national amenity societies as appears likely to have an interest in the church or the works, and the local planning authority in accordance with App B: r 3(3). Where the intending applicants are proposing to carry out works to a tree or trees in a churchyard or in a consecrated burial ground for which a faculty is required they must complete App C Form 16 and send it to the advisory committee at the time of seeking the advice of the advisory committee in respect of the proposed works: r 3(4). If the advisory committee decides to recommend the works or proposals or to raise no objection to them its decision together with any provisos must be set out in a certificate in App C Form 1 and must be sent to the intending applicants together with the designs, plans, photographs and other documents which were submitted to the advisory committee under r 3(2) and are the subject of the certificate: r 3(5). If the advisory committee decides not to recommend the works or proposals it must inform the intending applicants by way of a certificate in App C Form 1 and must advise them that they are entitled to petition for a faculty from the chancellor, if they so wish, notwithstanding the committee's decision: r 3(6). When the advisory committee issues a certificate under r 3(5) or r 3(6) the certificate may include a recommendation to the intending applicants that they should consult English Heritage, or the local planning authority, or one or more of the national amenity societies, or the Council for the Care of Churches or any other body or person about some or all of the works or other proposals for which a certificate is sought if they have not already done so, and the advisory committee must consider including such a recommendation in any case where it appears to the committee that the works involve alteration to or extension of a listed church to such an extent as is likely to affect its character as a building of special architectural or historic interest, or are likely to affect the archaeological importance of the church or archaeological remains existing within the church or its curtilage, or in the case of an unlisted church in a conservation area, will involve demolition affecting the exterior of the church: r 3(7).

As soon as they have received the advice of the advisory committee under r 3(5) or r 3(6) the applicants may submit to the diocesan registry a petition for a faculty in App C Form 2 in respect of the works or other proposals and (a) the works or other proposals must be fully and accurately stated in the petition and must be the same as those in respect of which the advisory committee has supplied a certificate in App C Form 1 under r 3(5) or r 3(6); and (b) any designs, plans, photographs and other documents giving particulars of the works or proposals for which the faculty is required, together with the certificate of the advisory committee relating to those documents, must be submitted with the petition: r 4(1). Where significant changes to a church are proposed a copy of the designs, plans, photographs and other documents submitted with the petition must be displayed in the church to which the works or other proposals relate and must remain on display until the petition for a faculty has been determined: r 4(2). As soon as they have received the advice of the advisory committee under r 3(5) or r 3(6) in respect of works within r 3(4) the applicants may send or deliver to the diocesan registry the petition for a faculty in App C Form 16 which was considered by the advisory committee: r 4(3). Notwithstanding that any of the requirements of r 3 have not been complied with a petition may at any time be submitted to the diocesan registry and every petition must (subject to r 36: see PARA 1330 post) be in App C Form 2 or Form 16: r 4(4).

A petition for a faculty for the partial demolition or demolition of a church must include all such statements and information, so far as relevant, as are required by App C Form 2: r 5.

As soon as a petitioner is ready to submit a petition for a faculty the petitioner must fill in the public notice in App C Form 3 (except where the petitioner is not the minister or a churchwarden or where the petition relates to exhumation or reservation of a grave space) and must describe the works or proposals in the public notice in the same manner as they are described in the schedule to the petition: r 6(1). Notwithstanding r 6(1), any petitioner may, if he so wishes, consult the registrar for advice prior to completing any petition or public notice, and he should do so in respect of a public notice where the petition relates to a matter which is not within App A: r 6(2). As soon as a petitioner has filled in the public notice he must immediately (i) send or deliver to the registry the petition and the documents required by head (b) above and a copy of the completed public notice; and (ii) display the public notice in the prescribed place and manner save that if he is not the minister or a churchwarden he must send the public notice to the registrar for directions about display; and (iii) send a copy of the public notice to English Heritage or other grant making body in accordance with the terms of any previous grant: r 6(3). For further provision relating to the public notice of a petition for a faculty see rr 6(4)-(6), 13.

Where a petition for a faculty (A) concerns an article of particular historic, architectural, archaeological or artistic interest, and involves the introduction, conservation, alteration or disposal of that article; (B) involves the alteration to or extension of a listed church or re-ordering of any church, which is likely in the opinion of the chancellor significantly to affect (when completed) the setting of any such article as is described in head (A) above; or (C) involves the movement or removal of any such article, which in the opinion of the advisory committee may be adversely affected thereby unless specific precautions are taken then, unless the chancellor is satisfied that there has already been consultation with the Council for the Care of Churches in respect of the proposals the subject of the petition, insofar as they relate to the article in question, the chancellor must direct the registrar to serve on the Council notice in App C Form 9: r 15(1), (2). In any case not within heads (A)-(C) above where the chancellor considers that advice from the Council would be of assistance in relation to a petition for a faculty, the chancellor may direct the registrar to serve on the Council notice in Form 9: r 15(3). Where notice in Form 9 is served under r 15, the registrar must also serve on the Council a copy of the petition and such plans and other relevant documents which were submitted to the Registry under r 4(1) (see supra) as the registrar considers appropriate: r 15(4). The written advice of the Council in response to such a notice must be sent to the registrar as soon as practicable but in any event no later than six weeks from the date of receipt of the notice; if no such advice is received within six weeks (or such longer period as may be granted on request from the Council), the chancellor may proceed to determine the petition without such advice: r 15(5). For the purposes of r 15, 'article' includes not only an ornament or movable object but also an object fixed to land or a building, and a part of any such object: r 15(6).

If the chancellor by whom any proceedings for a faculty are to be heard is of the opinion that by reason of the fact that the registrar has acted for any of the parties or has otherwise been personally connected with the proceedings the registrar ought not to sit as clerk of the court at the hearing, another practising solicitor or diocesan registrar must be appointed by the chancellor to sit as such clerk in place of the registrar: r 30.

1324. Objection and pleadings.

A petition can be opposed only by a person specially cited or a person having an interest which would entitle him to apply for a faculty¹. Parishioners who do not enter appearance² may be taken to assent to the petition³.

Any person who has entered an appearance must, not more than fourteen days thereafter lodge at the diocesan registry a written statement setting out his objections in detail⁴. Not more than fourteen days after the lodging of the statement the petitioners must lodge an answer, and any subsequent pleading must be lodged not more than seven days after the lodging of the last previous pleading⁵. Any party who objects to the adverse party's pleading or any part of it as being irrelevant, embarrassing or bad in law may, not more than fourteen days after it was lodged, lodge a notice setting out his reasons for objecting to it, and the party whose pleading it is may not more than seven days after the lodging of the notice lodge an amended pleading⁶; if he does not do so the registrar must lay the pleading before the judge, who must either appoint a day to decide as a preliminary issue the matters raised or reserve them for decision on the general hearing of the case⁷.

1324 Objections and pleadings

Any interested person who wishes to object to a proposed faculty being granted for all or some of the works or other proposals must at any time during the period of 28 days display of public notice of the petition required by r 6(4) or such longer period as may be directed under r 6(5)(d) write to the registrar and to the petitioners a letter of objection so as to arrive within the period of 28 days: r 16(1). As to the prescribed form, see App C Form No 3. 'Interested person' in relation to a petition for a faculty means (1) any person who is resident in the ecclesiastical parish concerned and any person whose name is entered on the church electoral roll of the ecclesiastical parish concerned but does not reside therein; (2) the archdeacon of the archdeaconry in which the parish concerned is situated; (3) the parochial church council; (4) the local planning authority for the area in which the church or place of worship is situated; (5) any national amenity society; (6) any other body designated by the chancellor for the purpose of the petition; and (7) any other person or body appearing to the chancellor to have a sufficient interest in the subject matter of the petition: r 16(2). Following receipt of a letter of objection from an interested person (whether as to all or some of the works or proposals) the registrar must after the end of the period of display of the public notice inform the objector in writing that he may (a) leave the chancellor to take the letter of objection into account in reaching a decision without the objector becoming a party in the proceedings, in which case a copy of the letter of objection will be sent to the petitioners to allow them to comment on it before the chancellor reaches a decision; or (b) send or deliver to the registrar formal written particulars of objection in App C Form 4 and thereupon become a party in the proceedings: r 16(3). For further provision relating to objections to petitions see r 16(4)-(6).

Where either no letter of objection has been received or, if such letter has been received, no particulars of objection have been submitted within the time allowed, or where the chancellor is satisfied that all the parties concerned consent to the grant of a faculty, the chancellor may, subject to the production of any relevant evidence, and subject to the requirements of the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 17 (faculties for the demolition of churches: see PARA 1314), grant the faculty: SI 2000/2047 r 17.

Where particulars of objection have been submitted to the registry the petitioners may, and if ordered to do so must, submit to the registry a written answer thereto within 21 days of the submitting of those particulars and must serve a copy of the answer on each of the other parties: r 18.

As to the giving of directions generally see r 19. As to the giving of leave to amend pleadings, see r 32(5) and PARA 1330.

1325. Petition treated as application for archdeacon's certificate.

Where a faculty petition is presented by the incumbent and churchwardens and it appears to the registrar or judge that they could more appropriately have applied for an archdeacon's certificate¹ he may, if the petitioners so desire, direct that, on compliance with the specified procedural requirements², the petition is to be treated as an application for an archdeacon's certificate³.

1326. Hearing and evidence.

When the pleadings are closed and any issue raised by them remains outstanding, or where the faculty sought is for the total or partial demolition of a church or the disposal of an article of possible historic or artistic interest and application has been made¹ for evidence to be heard in open court from a member of the Council for Places of Worship or some person duly authorised by it², or from any other person (unless, in the judge's opinion, the application or the evidence he gives is frivolous or vexatious³), the registrar must lay all the documents lodged in the registry before the judge, who must appoint a time and place for hearing the case⁴. The registrar must notify the archdeacon and, if it has advised on the case, the diocesan advisory committee⁵ of the time and place so fixed⁶.

Faculty proceedings are heard and disposed of in the consistory court of the diocese concerned⁷ by the diocesan chancellor⁸, although they may be heard and disposed of by the bishop alone or with the chancellor if and insofar as provision in that behalf is made in the letters patent by which the chancellor is appointed⁹.

Unless the judge otherwise orders the evidence at the hearing must be given orally, but he may by order direct that all or any part of the evidence may be given before an examiner appointed by him, or by affidavit¹⁰. He may of his own motion direct the summoning of a member of the diocesan advisory committee or any other person to give evidence if he considers that that person may be able to give relevant evidence and is willing to give it¹¹, but the evidence so given, and any evidence given by a member of the Council for Places of Worship or any person authorised by it¹², is subject to cross-examination by the party or parties concerned¹³.

A person who wishes to appeal from the court's judgement may apply to the chancellor, immediately after judgement is given, for his certificate as to whether a question of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial is involved; this determines to which court the appeal lies¹⁴.

1 The application must be made to the registrar in the prescribed form: Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967, S.I. 1967 No. 1002, r 6 (2), (3), Appendix, Forms 8, 9, 9A (amended by S.I. 1975 No. 135); see Court Forms. If made by a council member or person authorised by the council it must be lodged not more than six weeks after the council receives notice of the petition: r 6 (2) (a), (3) (amended by S.I. 1975 No. 135). If made by any other person it must be lodged not more than four weeks after the gazetting of notice of the petition: r 6 (2) (b). As to these notices, see PARA 1323, text to notes 10-16 ante.

1326 Hearing and evidence

TEXT AND NOTES--1967 Rules replaced: see now the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 2000, SI 2000/2047. Within the period of 28 days after expiry of the last date of compliance with any directions given under r 19 or, where the case is one to which the Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 s 17(4)(d) (see PARA 1321) applies, the registrar must lay all the documents submitted to the registry before the chancellor who must give directions as to a time and place for the hearing of the case: SI 2000/2047 r 20(1). In addition to notifying the parties the registrar must send to the archdeacon, the Council, the advisory committee, and any other body which has given advice to the chancellor, written notice of the time and place of the hearing: s 20(2).

The evidence at the hearing of any proceedings for a faculty must be given orally save that the chancellor on application by a party or of his own motion may by order direct (1) that all or any part of the evidence may be given before an examiner appointed by him or by affidavit, and (2) that a written statement may be given in evidence without the attendance of the maker of the statement: r 21(1). An application to submit a written statement in evidence at the hearing may be made by or on behalf of any person who is not a party to the proceedings and the chancellor may give leave for a written statement to be admitted in evidence without the attendance of the maker of the statement provided that a copy of the written statement is submitted to the registry and that a copy is delivered by that person to the parties not less than 21 days before the date of the hearing: r 21(2). The chancellor is entitled on receiving a copy of a written statement to require the attendance at the hearing of the maker of the statement for cross-examination by the parties, and if any party on receiving a copy of the statement applies to the chancellor for an order requiring the attendance of the maker of the statement at the hearing for cross-examination, the chancellor can make an order accordingly, and in the event of the failure of the maker of the statement to attend the hearing when required to do so, his written statement must not be admitted in evidence save in exceptional circumstances with the leave of the chancellor: r 21(3). As to applications to give evidence on petitions for partial demolition or demolition, see r 22 App C Forms 10, 11. As to applications by the Council for the Care of Churches to give evidence where it has been served with notice of a petition concerning matters of historic or artistic interest, see r 23 App C Form 10. As to applications by English Heritage to give evidence where it has been specially notified (as to which see PARA 1323), see r 24 App C Form No 10.

The chancellor may direct the attendance of a member of the advisory committee, the Council for the Care of Churches or any other person to give evidence at the hearing of any petition for a faculty if it appears to him that the person directed to attend may be able to give relevant evidence and is willing to give it: r 25(1). Where any person has applied to give evidence or has been directed to do so in proceedings for a faculty, the registrar must give the parties to the proceedings not less than 14 days' notice in writing that the evidence is to be given and of the name and address of the proposed witness and, in the case of a witness directed to give evidence, the nature of the evidence required of him: r 25(2). Evidence given by any person who has applied to give evidence or has been directed to do so is subject to cross-examination by the parties to the proceedings and any such witness may be permitted to ask questions of the parties with the leave of the chancellor: r 25(3).

As to the disposal of proceedings by written representation, see PARA 1326A.

If the chancellor decides to grant a faculty following either an oral hearing or a determination on the basis of written representations under r 26 (see PARA 1326A) the registrar must issue a faculty in App C Form 5 adapted to meet the circumstances of the case and must issue a certificate in App C Form 6 to be completed in accordance with the requirement in the faculty: r 27.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO FACULTIES/(iv) Procedure for obtaining Faculties/1326A. Disposal of proceedings by written representation.

1326A. Disposal of proceedings by written representation.

If the chancellor considers it expedient to do so and is satisfied that all the parties to the proceedings have agreed in writing, then the chancellor may order that the proceedings be determined upon consideration of written representations instead of by a hearing in court provided that no such order may be made in any case in which the chancellor is required to hear evidence in open court¹. Where an order has been made by the chancellor under that provision the registrar must give notice (1) that the petitioners must submit to the registry and serve on each of the other parties within 21 days of the direction a written statement in support of their case including the documentary or other evidence upon which they wish to rely; (2) that each of the other parties must not more than 21 days after the submitting of the petitioners' statement submit to the registry and serve on the petitioners a written statement in reply to the petitioners' statement and in support of his case including any documentary or other evidence upon which he wishes to rely; (3) that the petitioners may not more than 14 days after the submitting of the statement of an opposing party submit to the registry and serve on such opposing party a written statement in response². If any party does not comply with any such direction, the chancellor may declare him to be in default and may proceed to dispose of the case without any further reference to such party³. Any party against whom an order declaring him to be in default is made may at any time apply to the court to revoke that order, and the chancellor may as a matter of discretion revoke the order on such terms as to costs or otherwise as may be just⁴. Notwithstanding the existence of an order that the proceedings are to be dealt with by written representations, the chancellor may at any stage revoke the order and direct that the proceedings be determined at an oral hearing and the chancellor must thereupon give directions for the future conduct of the proceedings⁵. The chancellor may, whether or not an application is made to the court by any party, inspect the church or any article or thing the subject of the petition or concerning which any question arises in the proceedings⁶. If no order has been made for the proceedings to be determined by an oral hearing⁷, the chancellor must determine the proceedings upon the pleadings and the written statements and evidence submitted under these provisions, and the chancellor's decision will be as valid and binding on all parties as if it had been made after an oral hearing⁸. The chancellor or the registrar (if so authorised by the chancellor) may give such other directions as appear just and convenient for the expeditious dispatch of proceedings under these provisions⁹.

1327. Issue of faculty.

Where no appearance¹ has been entered or no statement of objections in detail² has been delivered within the time allowed, or it appears that all interested parties³ consent to the grant to the faculty, the judge may grant the faculty sought⁴, subject to the statutory requirements as to faculties for the total or partial demolition of a church⁵ and for the sale of books in a parochial library⁶, and subject to the production of such evidence, if any, as he may require⁷. Where there is a hearing⁸ the judge may at the conclusion grant the faculty sought.

Unless the judge otherwise directs, a faculty authorising works must include a provision requiring the works to be completed within a stated period, requiring their completion to be certified by such persons as he may direct and requiring the certificate to be lodged in the diocesan registry within that period⁹. A faculty may be subject to a condition requiring the work or any part of it to be carried out under the supervision of the archdeacon or any other person nominated by the court¹⁰. The court may direct that in default of the incumbent and churchwardens carrying out the works or any part of them a faculty is to issue to the archdeacon authorising him to carry them out¹¹. It may also order that the archdeacon's costs and expenses be paid by any other party to the proceedings¹². A faculty may, if the judge thinks fit, include a provision that the authorisation shall have effect 'until further order'¹³.

The court may not grant a faculty for the demolition or partial demolition of a church except on specified statutory grounds¹⁴.

TEXT AND NOTES 10-12--1964 Measure s 10 repealed: Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 Sch 8. In any proceedings for obtaining a faculty, the court may grant a faculty subject to conditions, including in particular (i) a condition requiring the work, or any part of the work, authorised by it to be carried out under the supervision of the archdeacon or of any person nominated by the court, and (ii) in the case of a faculty authorising the disposal of an article, a condition requiring a specified period to elapse before the disposal takes place: s 12(1). Where the court grants a faculty to a person other than an archdeacon and considers that the work authorised by it should be carried out (whether or not by that person), it may also order that, in default of that person carrying out the work, a faculty will issue to the archdeacon authorising him to carry out the work and, in that event, that the expenses incurred by the archdeacon in carrying out the work be paid by that person: s 12(2).

Unless the court otherwise orders¹, applicants for a faculty bear the costs incurred by them to obtain it. The award of costs in a contested case is in the discretion of the court, and although the usual rule is that costs follow the event² the court may, if it considers the opposition to have been reasonable, direct that the parties should be left to bear their own costs³. Where the opposition of a party is partially successful a proportion of his costs may be allowed against the applicants⁴.

If in any faculty proceedings, whether opposed or not, it appears to the court that any party to the proceedings was wholly or partly responsible for the introduction into or removal from a church, churchyard or other consecrated ground of any articles, or for the execution of any works there, without the necessary faculty, it may order the whole or any part of the costs and expenses of and consequent upon the proceedings, including the cost of any works ordered by the court, so far as those costs, costs of works and expenses have been occasioned by the introduction, removal or unlawful execution, to be paid by that party⁵.

If the archdeacon or some other person appointed by the bishop in his place⁶ intervenes in faculty proceedings all costs properly incurred by him or which the court orders him to pay are to be borne by the diocesan board of finance⁷. In any faculty proceedings the court may order the archdeacon's costs and expenses to be paid by any other party⁸.

Any sum payable by virtue of a court⁹ order in or consequent upon faculty proceedings must, if the county court so orders, be recoverable by execution from that court or otherwise as if payable under an order of that court¹⁰.

Provisions relating to orders for costs have already been considered¹¹.

indicated in writing to the solicitor serving the document that he is willing to accept service by fax at a specified fax number and the document is transmitted to that number and for this purpose the inscription of a fax number on the writing paper of a solicitor will be deemed to indicate that such a solicitor is willing to accept service by fax unless he has indicated in writing that he is not prepared to do so: r 31(4). On application by the person concerned the judge or registrar may extend any time limit, even after it has expired³, on such terms as he may think just⁴.

Non-compliance with the Faculty Jurisdiction Rules 1967 does not render any proceedings void unless the judge so directs, but the proceedings may be set aside, wholly or in part, as irregular or may be amended or otherwise dealt with in such manner and upon such terms as the judge thinks fit⁵. (v) Alternative Procedure by Archdeacon's Certificate

1331. Application for archdeacon's certificate.

The alternative procedure by archdeacon's certificate applies in the case of an application by the incumbent and churchwardens of a parish, supported by a resolution of the parochial church council, for authority to carry out (1) repairs to a church not involving substantial structural change nor affecting its external or internal appearance¹; or (2) repairs to its contents not materially affecting their nature or appearance²; or (3) redecoration of a church or its contents³; or (4) any alteration in an existing heating system not involving a substantial change in the church's external or internal appearance⁴.

In any such case the incumbent and churchwardens must give notice of their intention to apply for an archdeacon's certificate authorising the works by affixing a notice⁵ for a continuous period of not less than ten clear days including two Sundays on or near the principal door of such of the churches or places of worship⁶ in the parish as the registrar may direct⁷. The application for the certificate is made by lodging in the diocesan registry (a) a written application⁸; (b) any necessary designs, plans or other documents giving particulars of the proposed works or purposes⁹; (c) if the diocesan advisory committee's advice has been sought¹⁰, its recommendation¹¹ of or its report on the proposals¹²; (d) a copy of the supporting parochial church council resolution¹³; and (e) a copy of the notice of intention to apply, indorsed with a certificate from the incumbent and churchwardens that the notice was duly given in the parish and that opportunity to object was duly given to all having interest¹⁴.

At the discretion of the judge of the court¹⁵ the archdeacon's certificate procedure¹⁶ may be followed with regard to any other application which in his opinion is unlikely to give rise to any controversy or dissatisfaction in the parish concerned and is not of sufficient importance to justify the expense of faculty proceedings¹⁷.

UPDATE

1331-1334 [Application for ... archdeacon's certificate]

1964 Measure s 12 repealed: Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 Sch 8. The chancellor must confer on the archdeacon of every archdeaconry in the diocese such of the jurisdiction of the consistory court in certain faculty matters relating to the archdeaconry as may be prescribed: s 14(1). An archdeacon on whom the jurisdiction is conferred has power to grant a faculty in any unopposed cause of faculty falling to be considered by him: s 14(2). Where he declines to grant a faculty, or he considers that the matter ought to be dealt with as a matter of urgency without reference to the advisory committee (see PARA 1321), or the grant of a faculty is opposed, he must cause the matter to be referred to the chancellor to be dealt with by him: s 14(3). A faculty granted by an archdeacon has effect as if it had been granted by the chancellor: s 14(4). An archdeacon may not (i) order any costs or expenses to be paid by any person, or (ii) issue an injunction or make a restoration order against any person (see PARA 1311A), or (iii) grant an interim faculty pending the final determination of the matter, and where he considers that any question arises as to (i)-(iii) above he must cause the matter to be referred to the chancellor to be dealt with by him: s 14(5).

A pre-existing certificate issued by an archdeacon under the 1964 Measure s 12 continues in force and has effect as if it were a faculty granted by him: 1991 Measure s 14(6).

Before making a final determination in any cause of faculty, an archdeacon must seek the advice of the diocesan advisory committee unless the action proposed relates exclusively to exhumation or the reservation of a grave space: s 15(2).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO FACULTIES/(v) Alternative Procedure by Archdeacon's Certificate/1331A. Archdeacon's faculty jurisdiction.

1331A. Archdeacon's faculty jurisdiction.

Where a petition for a faculty for any of the works or other proposals specified¹ is unopposed and the advisory committee recommends the works or proposals in question or raises no objection to them, the archdeacon may exercise the jurisdiction of the consistory court of the diocese in respect of every petition for faculty arising in that archdeaconry². If the registrar is satisfied that the subject matter of the petition so falls within the jurisdiction conferred upon an archdeacon the registrar must indorse the petition accordingly and send it to the archdeacon for consideration³. An archdeacon with such jurisdiction must not make a final determination in relation to any petition for faculty without first seeking the advice of the advisory committee in respect of the works or proposals the subject of the petition, provided that where the advisory committee supplied a certificate in the prescribed form⁴ in respect of the same works or proposals not more than 12 months prior to the submitting of the petition the advisory committee may, if appropriate, confirm that they do not wish to alter that certificate⁵. Having decided to grant a faculty the archdeacon must indorse the petition accordingly and must return it to the registrar whereupon the registrar on the expiry of the period for objection⁶ and provided the petition is unopposed must issue (1) the faculty in the prescribed form⁷; and (2) a certificate in the prescribed form⁸ to be completed in accordance with the requirement in the faculty⁹. If any person objects to the grant of a faculty before the archdeacon has determined the matter the registrar must notify the archdeacon who must immediately return the petition to the registrar and if an objection is received after the archdeacon has indorsed the petition¹⁰ the archdeacon's decision will be of no effect and the petition must be referred to the chancellor by the registrar and be dealt with by the chancellor¹¹.

An archdeacon who (a) is the minister of the parish to which the petition relates; or (b) has been personally involved with the petitioners in relation to the subject matter of the petition or otherwise to such an extent that the archdeacon deems it inappropriate to act in the matter, must decline to exercise jurisdiction in relation to the petition for a faculty and must so inform the registrar prior to the allocation of the petition, or if this is not practicable must as soon as possible return the petition and accompanying papers to the registrar who must immediately indorse the petition as one to be dealt with by the chancellor¹². An archdeacon may for any reason decline in advance to exercise jurisdiction in relation to any petition for faculty¹³ and may after referral of a petition falling within the archdeacon's jurisdiction, return the petition to the registrar with a request that the petition or any matter raised in it be referred to the chancellor for decision or advice¹⁴. If an archdeacon becomes aware of any matter for which a faculty is required and considers that the matter (i) needs to be dealt with as a matter of urgency without reference to the advisory committee for advice¹⁵; or (ii) may necessitate the issue of an injunction, the making of a restoration order or the grant of any interim faculty pending the final determination of the matter; or (iii) gives rise to any question as to the payment of costs or expenses, then whether or not a petition has been submitted the archdeacon must inform the registrar who must immediately refer the matter to the chancellor who may give such licence or other directions in respect of the matter on such terms or conditions as are appropriate in the circumstances of the case¹⁶.

On the application of a minister and the majority of the parochial church council an archdeacon may give a licence in writing in the prescribed form¹⁷ for a temporary period not exceeding 15 months for a scheme of minor re-ordering provided the archdeacon is satisfied that (A) the scheme does not involve any interference with the fabric of the church; and (B) it does not involve the fixing of any item to the fabric of the church nor the disposal of any fixture; and (C)

if the scheme involves the moving of any item, the same is to be done by suitably competent or qualified persons and such item will be safeguarded and stored in the church or in such other place as is approved by the archdeacon, and can easily be reinstated¹⁸. The archdeacon may add such other conditions to the licence as may be considered necessary¹⁹. A copy of any such licence must be submitted to the registrar and the secretary to the advisory committee²⁰. The period specified in the licence must not be extended by the archdeacon provided that where a petition for a chancellor's faculty in respect of the scheme is submitted to the registry not later than two months before the expiry of the period the scheme will be deemed to be authorised until the determination of the petition by the chancellor²¹. An archdeacon may for any reason decline to grant such a licence in which event the archdeacon must advise the minister to apply to the chancellor for an interim faculty authorising the scheme²².

1331-1334 [Application for ... archdeacon's certificate]

1964 Measure s 12 repealed: Care of Churches and Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1991 Sch 8. The chancellor must confer on the archdeacon of every archdeaconry in the diocese such of the jurisdiction of the consistory court in certain faculty matters relating to the archdeaconry as may be prescribed: s 14(1). An archdeacon on whom the jurisdiction is conferred has power to grant a faculty in any unopposed cause of faculty falling to be considered by him: s 14(2). Where he declines to grant a faculty, or he considers that the matter ought to be dealt with as a matter of urgency without reference to the advisory committee (see PARA 1321), or the grant of a faculty is opposed, he must cause the matter to be referred to the chancellor to be dealt with by him: s 14(3). A faculty granted by an archdeacon has effect as if it had been granted by the chancellor: s 14(4). An archdeacon may not (i) order any costs or expenses to be paid by any person, or (ii) issue an injunction or make a restoration order against any person (see PARA 1311A), or (iii) grant an interim faculty pending the final determination of the matter, and where he considers that any question arises as to (i)-(iii) above he must cause the matter to be referred to the chancellor to be dealt with by him: s 14(5).

A pre-existing certificate issued by an archdeacon under the 1964 Measure s 12 continues in force and has effect as if it were a faculty granted by him: 1991 Measure s 14(6).

Before making a final determination in any cause of faculty, an archdeacon must seek the advice of the diocesan advisory committee unless the action proposed relates exclusively to exhumation or the reservation of a grave space: s 15(2).

1332. Reference of application to archdeacon.

The diocesan registrar must refer any such application as is referred to in the preceding paragraph¹ to the archdeacon of the archdeaconry in which the church is situate² unless (1) the registrar is not satisfied that the application is within the relevant provision³; or (2) the application is not supported by the necessary certificate from the incumbent and churchwardens⁴; or (3) notice of objection to the proposed works is given to the registrar in the prescribed manner⁵ or the time for giving such notice has not expired⁶.

If the registrar is not satisfied that the application is within the relevant provision he must so inform the archdeacon and must refer it to the judge⁷ for his directions by submitting the application and supporting documents with his observations on them, and the judge may, if he also is not so satisfied, either exercise his discretion⁸ and allow the archdeacon's certificate procedure to be followed⁹ or direct that the faculty procedure is required¹⁰.

Notice of objection to the proposed works or purposes may be lodged at the diocesan registry by any person interested¹¹ not more than fourteen days after the notice of intention was first affixed¹², whereupon the registrar, instead of referring the application to the archdeacon, must require the incumbent and churchwardens to apply to the court for a faculty in the ordinary way¹³.

1 There is, it seems, an exception in the case of an application in which the exercise of the judge's discretion is sought under the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, s 12 (7) (see PARA 1331 note 17 ante). In such a case the judge's directions must first be obtained.

1335. Right of appeal.

Appeal lies, at the instance of any party to the proceedings¹, from judgments, orders or decrees of consistory courts either (1) in faculty causes not involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial, to the Arches Court of Canterbury or the Chancery Court of York², or (2) in faculty causes involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial, to the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved³.

For the purpose of determining whether a question of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial is involved a party desiring to appeal may apply to the diocesan chancellor to certify whether or not such a question is involved⁴; the application may be made immediately after the giving of judgment in the consistory court, in which case the chancellor may determine it forthwith or adjourn it for subsequent determination, either with or without a hearing; or it may be made in writing in the prescribed form, lodged with the registrar, in which case the chancellor may determine it with or without a hearing⁵. After determining the application the chancellor must certify his decision⁶, and his certificate is conclusive⁷.

Further appeal lies from the Arches or Chancery Court to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, whilst a finding of the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved may be reviewed by a Commission of Review⁸.

1336. Notice of appeal.

An appeal from the judgment of a consistory court in faculty proceedings must be instituted within the prescribed period¹ by (1) lodging with the registrar of the appropriate appellate court² copies³ of the notice of appeal⁴ and chancellor's certificate⁵ and (2) lodging with the diocesan registrar two copies of the notice of appeal and serving one copy on every party⁶. The diocesan registrar files one copy and has the other affixed to or near the principal door of the church concerned⁷, and transmits to the court registrar the record of the proceedings with any documents or exhibits lodged with him or in his custody⁸.

The appellant must apply in writing to the chancellor for a signed copy of any notes he made and of his judgment and must furnish that copy for the court's use, and any other party may apply in writing to the chancellor for another copy⁹.

The rules relating to service, lodgment of documents, time, non-compliance with rules and use of forms which apply in disciplinary proceedings¹⁰ apply also in faculty appeals¹¹.

1 I.e. within twenty-eight days after the consistory court gave judgment or fourteen days after service on the appellant of a copy of the chancellor's certificate (as to which see PARA 1335 ante), whichever period last expires: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Faculty Appeals) Rules 1965, S.I. 1965 No. 251, r 4 (1). The diocesan registrar may extend the period, even if it has expired: see r 4 (1) proviso.

2 As to the appropriate court, see PARA 1335 ante.

3 I.e. in the case of appeal to the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved, six copies, and in the case of an appeal to the Court of Arches or Chancery Court of York, two copies: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Faculty Appeals) Rules 1965, r 4 (2) (a), (b).

4 The notice must state the grounds of appeal (to which the appellant is limited on the hearing of the appeal, subject to leave of the appellate court: ibid r 4 (4)) and, if the appeal relates to part only of the judgment, must specify that part; and it must be in the prescribed form: r 4 (3); see Appendix, Forms 3, 4, and Court Forms. The notice of appeal may be amended under r 5 (b): see PARA 1337 post.

Any application¹ made to an appellate court² (otherwise than at the hearing of an appeal or petition) or to a registrar must be in writing, lodged with the registrar³. If a written consent signed by each party or his solicitor is lodged with the application, or if he is otherwise satisfied that the application is unopposed, the registrar may grant any application made to him without a hearing⁴, but in any other case he must fix a hearing, giving the parties not less than three days' written notice of it⁵. Any application or appeal to the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved or a Commission of Review may be heard by such one of the two judges of that court, other than bishops, as may be agreed between them or, as the case may be, by the presiding judge of the commission⁷. Any interlocutory application may be granted on such terms as the person or body granting it thinks just⁸.

Among the interlocutory applications⁹ which may be made to the diocesan registrar are applications for extension of the time limited for lodging an appeal¹⁰; among those made to the appellate court registrar are applications for postponement of the hearing¹¹; and among those made to the appellate court are applications for a stay of proceedings on the consistory court's judgment¹², for service of the notice of appeal on additional parties¹³, for leave to withdraw the appeal¹⁴ and for leave to amend the notice of appeal¹⁵. The rules relating to the production and inspection of documents and the attendance of witnesses in disciplinary proceedings¹⁶ apply also in faculty appeals¹⁷. The appellate court may at any stage of the proceedings order a party to give security for costs¹⁸.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO FACULTIES/(vi) Appeal and Review/1338. Hearing of appeals from consistory courts.

1338. Hearing of appeals from consistory courts.

On an appeal from a consistory court the appellate court fixes a time for hearing the appeal which, unless the appellate court otherwise orders, must be not less than twenty-eight days after the lodging of the appeal¹. The registrar must give the parties not less than fourteen days' notice of the court's sittings².

Appeals to the Arches or Chancery Court are heard and disposed of by the Dean of the Arches and Auditor³. Appeals to the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved are heard by the full court.

The chancellor's note of proceedings and judgment in the consistory court and all relevant documents and exhibits must be available for use at the hearing⁴. The appellate court has full discretionary power, to be exercised only in exceptional circumstances⁵, to receive oral evidence, including evidence from new witnesses⁶. It or, with the parties' consent, any judge or judges of it, may inspect any property or thing concerning which any question arises⁷. Any party proposing to apply to an appellate court to exercise any powers at the hearing must if practicable give written notice to the other parties and to the court registrar⁸.

The appellate court may draw any inferences of fact which might have been drawn in the consistory court proceedings⁹, and may give any judgment or direction which ought to have been given by that court, or may remit the matter with its directions for rehearing and determination by that court¹⁰. It may allow an appeal if the chancellor's exercise of discretion was based on an erroneous evaluation of the facts taken as a whole, and in such a case may substitute its own discretion¹¹.

The appellate court may at its discretion make an order for the payment of taxed costs against any party¹² or may direct that, instead of taxed costs, a person be entitled to a specified proportion of the taxed costs or to the taxed costs from or up to a specified stage of the proceedings or to a specified gross sum in lieu of taxed costs¹³. An order or direction for the payment of costs may be enforced in the county court or, if the amount exceeds the county court's jurisdiction in respect of a contract debt, in the High Court¹⁴.

The court registrar must give the diocesan registrar written notice of any judgment or directions given by the appellate court¹⁵. If a faculty is refused by the consistory court and an appeal is allowed by the appellate court, the appellate court may remit the matter to the consistory court so that it may issue the faculty¹⁶; alternatively, where the appellate court is the Court of Arches or the Chancery Court, it seems that the faculty may issue direct from that court¹⁷.

1 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Faculty Appeals) Rules 1965, S.I. 1965 No. 251, r 7 (1). Any party may apply to the registrar for a postponement (r. 7 (2)), and the court may at any time itself postpone the hearing (r. 7 (3)).

4 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Faculty Appeals) Rules 1965, r 8 (1) (a). If no chancellor's note is produced the court may receive any other evidence or statement of what occurred in the consistory court: r 8 (1) (c).

'Taxed costs' means costs taxed by a registrar in the prescribed manner, and 'costs' includes fees, charges, disbursements, expenses and remuneration: s 60 (4). 1339. Appeal from Arches or Chancery Court.

An appeal lies to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council¹, at the instance of any party², from the judgment of the Court of Arches or Chancery Court of York in faculty proceedings³.

It is instituted by leaving at the Privy Council registry either a petition of appeal and copy of the provincial court's judgment or an instrument of appeal⁴. Within a month from the date when the petition is referred to the Privy Council the appellant's solicitor must, on pain of dismissal of the appeal, apply to the Privy Council registrar for the issue of an inhibition and citation, calling upon the other party to enter an appearance, and a monition for process, requiring the provincial court to transmit the record to the Privy Council⁵. Both documents are served on the registrar of the provincial court and the inhibition and citation is served on the other party⁶. The respondent's solicitor may enter an appearance⁷, and if he wishes to adhere to the appeal he must, within a month from the entry of appearance, file a declaration of adhesion, stating from what part of the judgment he wishes to appeal⁸.

Within a month from the process being brought in the appellant's solicitor must bring into the registry sixty copies of the appendix and deliver forty copies to the respondent's solicitor⁹ and within a month after that both he and the respondent's solicitor must bring in sixty copies of their respective cases and deliver forty copies to the other party's solicitor¹⁰. When the time allowed for bringing in the cases has expired the appeal will stand for hearing¹¹.

The appellant may abandon the appeal by filing a proxy of abandonment, consenting to be condemned in costs, whereupon the appeal will stand dismissed¹². When an appeal stands dismissed the appellant stands condemned in costs unless there is a special agreement to the contrary¹³, but either solicitor may within a fortnight after an appeal stands dismissed file a notice of motion to have it reinstated¹⁴. If on the final hearing the Judicial Committee orders the cause to be remitted the registrar, on the application of either party, must issue a remission¹⁵.

On good cause shown the registrar may extend any of the above time limits¹⁶.

TEXT AND NOTES--Appeal lies to Her Majesty in Council in faculty proceedings not involving matters of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial: see now Faculty Jurisdiction (Appeals) Rules 1998, SI 1998/1713, rr 25, 26.

TEXT AND NOTE 2--Appeal now lies with the leave of Her Majesty in Council: 1963 Measure s 8(2) (amended by the Church of England (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 2000 s 15).

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO FACULTIES/(vi) Appeal and Review/1340. Review of decision of Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved.

1340. Review of decision of Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved.

Where in any faculty cause involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial any party desires that a finding of the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved should be reviewed by a Commission of Review he may, within twenty-eight days after the finding, lodge a petition for review¹ by (1) lodging with the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery six copies of the petition and chancellor's certificate²; (2) lodging a copy petition with the registrar of the court below and another copy with the diocesan registrar³; and (3) serving a copy petition on every party⁴.

A commission is then directed under the Great Seal to such five persons as the Queen may nominate, of whom three are lords of appeal⁵ who declare that they are communicants and two are lords spiritual sitting as Lords of Parliament, and these five persons constitute the Commission of Review⁶. The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery appoints a registrar of the commission, who takes the six copies of the petition and files one of them⁷; and the registrar of the court below transmits to the registrar of the commission the record and any documents or exhibits, which any party may, on reasonable notice, inspect and copy⁸. The petitioner must apply in writing to the presiding judge of the court below for a signed copy of any note he made of the proceedings and findings, and must furnish that copy for the commission's use⁹.

There is a panel of advisers appointed jointly by the Upper Houses of the Convocations of Canterbury and York to give assistance to any Commission of Review on questions of doctrine¹⁰, and if the finding before the commission involves a question of doctrine the commission must request five persons selected by it from this panel to sit with it as advisers and give such assistance on the matters of doctrine involved as it may require¹¹. The registrar of the commission must notify the parties of the names of the commission and any advisers so selected¹².

On the petitioner's application the commission may stay proceedings on the judgment or finding of either court below¹³. Subject to such modifications as may be necessary, the same rules as to withdrawal and amendment¹⁴, date of hearing¹⁵, proceedings before the court¹⁶ and interlocutory proceedings¹⁷ apply in relation to a review as apply in relation to appeals to the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved¹⁸. Any party proposing to apply to the commission to exercise any powers at the hearing must if practicable give written notice to the other parties and to the registrar of the commission¹⁹.

The commission is not bound by any decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in relation to matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial²⁰, but a decision of a previous Commission of Review binds it on a matter within its jurisdiction except in regard to a matter on which new information or evidence is adduced which was not before the commission on the previous occasion²¹. The commission's decision is a majority decision, each member stating his own opinion on the question under review²².

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO FACULTIES/(vi) Appeal and Review/1341. Enforcement of the law relating to faculties.

1341. Enforcement of the law relating to faculties.

The effect of a faculty is to authorise, rather than to command, a person to do something¹; strictly speaking, therefore, it is inappropriate to speak in terms of disobedience to a faculty. Cases may arise, however, in which the law relating to faculties is contravened, deliberately or otherwise, for example by unauthorised action in disregard of the requirement of a faculty or by failure to observe the terms of a faculty.

In certain circumstances a person responsible for such a contravention might, if in holy orders, be guilty of an ecclesiastical offence for which he could be censured by monition². Normally, however, it seems that the court would have recourse to the provisions enabling it to order the payment of costs and expenses by a party responsible for a breach of the law³ and to authorise the archdeacon, in appropriate cases, to give effect to the court's decision⁴. In some cases proceedings for contempt of court might be instituted in the High Court⁵.

3 See the Faculty Jurisdiction Measure 1964, ss 5, 11, and PARA 1328 ante.

4 See ibid s 10, and PARA 1327 ante. Thus in the case eg of a faculty for the removal of an illegal ornament the court might direct that, in default of the incumbent and churchwardens carrying out the removal, a faculty is to issue to the archdeacon authorising him to do so: see s 10 (b).

5 See the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 81 (2), (3), and PARA 1299 ante. It has been held that deviations from the terms of a faculty constitute a contempt of court but that, if innocent, they may be condoned on payment of the costs of proceedings to rectify them: Lee v Vicar and Churchwardens of Herne (1892) Trist 217.

(5) OTHER CIVIL PROCEEDINGS

(i) Matters within the Jurisdiction

1342. Matters relating to advowsons.

A number of matters relating to advowsons¹ are within the jurisdiction of ecclesiastical courts².

The right of a bishop to refuse to institute or admit a presentee to a benefice on any ground of unfitness or disqualification except a ground of doctrine or ritual is triable by a court constituted under the Benefices Act 1898 consisting of an archbishop and a judge of the Supreme Court³.

Jurisdiction in suits of duplex querela⁴ is exercisable by the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved⁵, and in proceedings upon a jus patronatus awarded by a diocesan bishop⁶ it is exercisable by the consistory court of his diocese⁷.

1 For the meaning of 'advowson', see PARA 776 ante.

2 One of the specific remedies for disturbance of rights of patronage, namely an action in the nature of quare impedit, is available only in the High Court: see PARA 822 ante.

1345. Cases under the Benefices Act 1898.

A person presenting or a presentee may within one month after a refusal by a bishop to institute or admit a person to a benefice has been signified to him in the prescribed manner, with its grounds, require that the matter be heard by the court¹, and the bishop must be made a party to the proceedings².

The court is a court of record, and is held in public³. It has the same powers as the High Court of administering oaths, of requiring the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents and as to the payment and recovery of costs⁴.

The judge decides all questions of law and finds as to any fact alleged as reason of unfitness or disqualification, and his decision and finding in these respects are binding on the archbishop; the archbishop directs institution or admission if the judge finds that no such fact sufficient in law exists, or, if the judge finds that any such fact exists, decides, if necessary, whether by reason of it the presentee is unfit for the discharge of the duties of the benefice, and determines whether institution or admission ought, in the circumstances, to be refused; and in either case gives judgment accordingly, which is final⁵.

1 As to the constitution of the court, see PARAS 1273, 1342 ante. For the procedure, see the Benefices Rules 1899, S.R. & O. 1899 No. 141; Benefices Rules 1926, S.R. & O. 1926 No. 357 (amended by S.R. & O. 1933 No. 1148). The fees in respect of proceedings in the court are paid over to the general fund of the Church Commissioners (as to which see PARA 1234 ante) who, out of that fund, defray the expenses of and incidental to the sittings of the court, the remuneration of its officers and the necessary expenses of the proceedings: s 11; Benefices (Ecclesiastical Duties) Measure 1926, s 19, Sch. 3.

A suit of duplex querela¹ is brought in the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved² by the presentee against the bishop, and if another clergyman has also been presented he is made a co-defendant³. In the absence of new rules of procedure⁴ the old procedure⁵ must be followed. The proceedings should be by plea and proof, with evidence given orally⁶. The written charge or libel is exhibited by the plaintiff, and a copy is given to the defendant when he appears on citation. The defendant is obliged to answer to the libel by making his 'allegation'. The court may admit or reject the pleadings in whole or in part, and the suit is heard upon the pleadings as admitted, the facts alleged being proved by witnesses⁷. Appeal lies to a Commission of Review⁸.

Any penalty or forfeiture incurred by a beneficed clergyman under the Pluralities Act 1838 for breach of the duty of residence¹ or for unlawful farming² is recoverable³ in the consistory court of the diocese⁴ by a person authorised by the bishop, and payment may be enforced by monition and sequestration⁵. In cases falling within the residuary jurisdiction of the consistory courts¹ the procedure to be followed, in the absence of new rules, is that which was generally applicable to the conduct of civil suits before the commencement of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963².

The first step in that procedure is ordinarily the issue of a citation³ to the defendant⁴. This is followed by pleadings or pleas, commencing with a libel alleging the facts on which the plaintiff's claim is founded⁵. The defendant answers the libel by a responsive allegation⁶, to which the plaintiff brings in a rejoining allegation if he joins issue or a counter-allegation if he desires to put forward additional facts⁷.

The cause is heard upon the pleadings as admitted, and the facts alleged are either proved by the depositions or affidavits of witnesses taken or made out of court, or by oral evidence in court⁸. In the absence of good reason to the contrary evidence will be given orally⁹, and in this event the old rule of the ecclesiastical courts that a material fact must be proved by two witnesses does not apply¹⁰.

4 A suit can, however, be commenced by monition where its object is to compel the defendant to do a specific act in order to redress an injury which he has inflicted on the plaintiff's interests: Fagg v Lee (1873) LR 4 A & E 135; on appeal sub nom. Lee v Fagg (1874) LR 6 PC 38.

(6) DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS

(i) In general

1350. Scope of disciplinary jurisdiction.

The criminal¹ jurisdiction of ecclesiastical courts appears to be confined to proceedings instituted in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963². These provisions are framed in terms which relate exclusively to proceedings against persons in holy orders³, and it seems that all lay persons are outside the scope of the jurisdiction⁴.

Proceedings for an offence involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial⁵ may be instituted only if it was committed within the province of Canterbury or York, but this limitation does not apply to proceedings under the Measure for other offences⁶.

1 The expression 'criminal suit' is used in the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 (see eg s 69) with reference to proceedings in which a person is charged with an ecclesiastical offence, and the trial procedure is assimilated to that of temporal courts exercising criminal jurisdiction: cf. ss 3, 28 (a), 36 (b), 45 (1) (a). Many of the offences which may be the subject of such proceedings, however, are not 'criminal' in the everyday sense of the word. Traditionally, the exercise of coercive jurisdiction by spiritual authority has been justified on the ground that it is for the good of the soul (see Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 837, 838), and it is in keeping with this principle that a bishop or archbishop is empowered to decide (after a private interview) that no further step be taken in the matter of an appropriate complaint which has been duly laid and verified: see the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, ss 23 (1) (a), 39 (1) (a), 40, and PARA 1363 post.

2 Ibid s 69. This section provides that, save for certain cases pending on 1st March 1965 (the date at which the Measure came into force) no proceedings by way of a criminal suit, other than those authorised by Parts IV-VI (ss. 22-45) of the Measure, may be instituted against a person in a consistory court or in the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved, and that no proceedings so authorised may be instituted except in accordance with those Parts of the Measure. The section makes no reference to the institution of proceedings in which a bishop or archbishop may be tried by a commission exercising original jurisdiction under ss 1 (2) (b), (3) (a), 9 or s 35 (although it does have refer to the authorisation of proceedings under Part V (ss. 32-37)). It is thought that this may have been an inadvertent omission; in any case it would not affect the application of s 69 to proceedings against priests and deacons, nor would it affect the statements contained in the text to notes 3, 4 infra.

1. Discipline for misconduct under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003

Provisions of the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003¹ and the Clergy Discipline Rules 2005² are to have effect for the purpose of regulating proceedings against a clerk in Holy Orders who is alleged to have committed an act or omission other than one relating to matters involving doctrine, ritual or ceremonial³. 'Misconduct' in that Measure is to be construed accordingly⁴. Proceedings in relation to matters involving doctrine, ritual or ceremonial will continue to be conducted in accordance with the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963⁵.

Disciplinary proceedings under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 may be instituted against any archbishop, bishop, priest or deacon alleging any of the following: (1) doing any act in contravention of the laws ecclesiastical; (2) failing to do any act required by the laws ecclesiastical; (3) neglect or inefficiency in the performance of the duties of his office; (4) conduct unbecoming or inappropriate to the office and work of a clerk in Holy Orders⁶. In the case of a minister licensed to serve in a diocese by the bishop thereof, the licence is not terminated by reason of that person's misconduct otherwise than by way of such proceedings⁷. Provisions of the Clergy Discipline Appeal Rules 2005⁸ regulate appeals from disciplinary proceedings under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003⁹.

No proceedings in respect of unbecoming conduct may be taken in respect of the lawful political opinions or activities of any bishop, priest or deacon¹⁰.

Those provisions relate to (1) payment of costs, powers in relation to costs, and the recovery of costs²; (2) payment of expenses³; (3) fees payable⁴; (4) performance of duties during suspension⁵; (5) occupation of Disciplinary proceedings may be instituted against any person who is subject to the jurisdiction of a disciplinary tribunal or the Vicar-General's court², by way of complaint made in writing, only as follows³.

- 40 (1) In the case of a priest or deacon, the proceedings must be taken by (a) a person nominated by the parochial church council of any parish which has a proper interest in making the complaint, if not less than two-thirds of the lay members of the council are present at a duly convened meeting of the council and not less than two-thirds of the lay members present and voting pass a resolution to the effect that the proceedings be instituted; or (b) a churchwarden of any such parish; or (c) any other person who has a proper interest in making the complaint⁴; the complaint must be laid before the diocesan bishop concerned⁵.
- 41 (2) In the case of a bishop, the proceedings must be taken by (a) a person nominated by the bishop's council of the diocese concerned, if not less than two-thirds of the members of the council are present at a duly convened meeting of the council and not less than two-thirds of the members present and voting pass a resolution to the effect that the proceedings be instituted; or (b) any other person who has a proper interest in making the complaint⁶; the complaint must be laid before the archbishop concerned⁷.

- 42 (3) In the case of an archbishop, the proceedings must be taken by (a) a person nominated by the archbishop's council of his diocese if not less than two-thirds of the members of the council are present at a duly convened meeting of the council and not less than two thirds of the members present and voting pass a resolution to the effect that the proceedings be instituted; or (b) any other person who has a proper interest in making the complaint⁸; the complaint must be laid before the other archbishop⁹.

A complaint must be accompanied by written particulars of the alleged misconduct, and written evidence in support of the complaint must be sent to the bishop or archbishop, as the case may be, either with the complaint or at such later time as he may allow¹⁰.

In the case of a clerk in Holy Orders serving in a cathedral church, disciplinary proceedings may be instituted only by a person nominated by the council of the cathedral church, or any other person, if the diocesan bishop concerned determines that that person has a proper interest in making the complaint¹¹.

In the case of a chaplain of a prison, hospital, university, school or other institution, disciplinary proceedings may be instituted only by a person duly authorised by the diocesan bishop concerned to institute such proceedings¹².

In the case of a chaplain of one of the armed forces of the Crown, disciplinary proceedings may be instituted only if the archbishop of Canterbury determines that the person concerned has a proper interest in making the complaint; and the complaint must be laid before the archbishop of Canterbury¹³.

In the case of a minister who has a licence from the archbishop of a province (ie a licence to preach throughout the province), disciplinary proceedings may be instituted only by a person duly authorised by the archbishop to institute such proceedings; and the complaint must be laid before that archbishop¹⁴.

In the case of a minister who has a licence from the University of Oxford or Cambridge (ie a licence to preach throughout England), disciplinary proceedings may be instituted only by a person duly authorised by the archbishop of Canterbury to institute such proceedings; and the complaint must be laid before that archbishop¹⁵.

1 Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 9. However, when the misconduct is one for which the person concerned has been convicted either on indictment or summarily, proceedings may be instituted within 12 months of the conviction becoming conclusive, notwithstanding that the period of one year has elapsed: s 9 first proviso. Further, the president of tribunals may, if he considers that there was good reason why the complainant did not institute proceedings at an earlier date, after consultation with the complainant and the respondent, give his written permission for the proceedings to be instituted after the expiry of the said period of one year: s 9 second proviso. An application out of time under s 9 must be made in writing in form 1c (set out in the Clergy Discipline Rules 2005, SI 2005/2022, Schedule) or in a substantially similar document: see r 8. For the meaning of 'misconduct' see PARA 1350A.1. As to the president of tribunals see PARA 1350C.5.

A conviction becomes conclusive, and proceedings under the 2003 Measure become conclusive, for the purposes of the 2003 Measure (1) where there has been an appeal, on the date on which the appeal is dismissed or abandoned or the proceedings on appeal are finally concluded, but, if varied on appeal, is conclusive only as so varied, and so far as it is reversed on appeal ceases to have effect; (2) if there is no such appeal, on the expiration of the time limited for such appeal, or in the case of a conviction where no time is so limited, of two months from the date of the conviction; and (3) in the case of a conviction against which there is no right of appeal from the date of the conviction: s 40(1). After the conviction of a clerk in Holy Orders by a secular court becomes conclusive a certificate of such conviction is conclusive proof that he has committed the act therein specified, for the purposes of the 2003 Measure: s 40(2). In the event of any such conviction by a secular court as makes a clerk in Holy Orders subject to removal from any preferment, or renders him liable to proceedings under the 2003 Measure the court must cause the prescribed certificate of the conviction to be sent to the bishop of the diocese in which the court sits, and such certificate must be preserved in the registry of the diocese, or of any other diocese to which it may be sent by the direction of the bishop: s 40(3). 4. Preliminary scrutiny

When a complaint in writing has been made¹ it must be referred in the first instance to the registrar² of the diocese or province concerned, as the case may be, who must thereupon scrutinise the complaint in consultation with the complainant with a view to forming a view as to whether or not the parochial church council or other person making the complaint has a proper interest in doing so or, if the complainant purports to be a churchwarden, establishing that he is such, and as to whether or not there is sufficient substance in the complaint to justify proceeding with it in accordance with the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003; the registrar must notify the respondent that the complaint has been referred to him³.

Having scrutinised the complaint the registrar must within 28 days following its receipt by him or such longer period as he considers to be justified in the particular circumstances⁴, send a written report to the bishop by whom the complaint was received setting out the registrar's views, and thereupon the bishop must deal with the complaint in accordance with the Measure, having regard to the registrar's report⁵.

On receipt of the registrar's report the bishop may dismiss the complaint and, if he does so, must give written notice of the dismissal to the complainant and the respondent, together with a copy of the report⁶. On receipt of a notice of dismissal the complainant may request the president of tribunals⁷ to review the dismissal, and the president may then uphold the dismissal or, if he considers the dismissal to be plainly wrong, reverse it and direct the bishop to deal with the complaint accordingly⁸.

1 Ie in accordance with the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 10 (see PARA 1350A.3).

2 The registrar may delegate any or all of his functions under ibid s 11 to such person as he may designate: s 11(6).

3 Ibid s 11(1). See further the Clergy Discipline Rules 2005, SI 2005/2022, rr 10, 11, 14.

4 Where the registrar proposes to extend this period, he must, before doing so, consult the complainant and the respondent: 2003 Measure s 11(5). The period may not be extended more than once: s 11(2) proviso. Where the registrar proposes to extend the period he must, not later than 21 days after receipt of the complaint, notify the complainant and the respondent of the reasons why such an extension is required and the period of extension proposed: SI 2005/2022 r 13(1). See also r 19.

5 2003 Measure s 11(2). As to the registrar's written report, see SI 2005/2022 r 12.

6 2003 Measure s 11(3). On receipt of the complaint, the bishop must send the complainant an acknowledgement of the complaint, and must refer the complaint and written evidence in support of it to the registrar: SI 2005/2022 r 9. If the bishop dismisses a complaint under the 2003 Measure s 11(3), he must send to the complainant and the respondent written notice of dismissal together with reasons for the dismissal, and a copy of the registrar's report: SI 2005/2022 r 15(1). If the bishop does not dismiss such a complaint or if a dismissal is reversed by the president of tribunals, the bishop must notify the complainant and the respondent in writing that the complaint has not been dismissed, provide the complainant and the respondent with a copy of the registrar's report (unless previously he has done so under r 15(1)), and send the respondent a copy of the respondent's answer to a complaint (ie form 2, set out in the Schedule): r 17(1). See further r 17(1)-(7), and Schedule form 3 (form in support of an answer to a complaint).

7 As to the president of tribunals see PARA 1350C.5.

8 Ie in accordance with the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 12 (see PARA 1350A.5): s 11(4). Such a request must be made in writing in form 4 (set out in SI 2005/2022 Schedule) or in a substantially similar document: see r 16.

5. Dealing with the complaint

If the complaint is not dismissed¹ the bishop must, within 28 days following the receipt by him of the registrar's report² or the president of tribunal's direction³, as the case may be, or such longer period as he considers to be justified in the particular circumstances of the case⁴, determine which of the following courses is to be pursued⁵:

- 43 (1) he may take no further action⁶;
- 44 (2) he may, if the respondent consents, direct that the matter remain on the record conditionally⁷;
- 45 (3) he may direct that an attempt to bring about conciliation is to be made⁸;
- 46 (4) he may impose a penalty by consent⁹; or
- 47 (5) he may direct that the complaint is to be formally investigated¹⁰.

1 Ie under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 11(3): see PARA 1350A.4.

2 Ie the report made pursuant to ibid s 11(2): see PARA 1350A.4.

3 Ie the direction made pursuant to ibid s 11(4): see PARA 1350A.4.

4 Where the bishop proposes to extend this period he must, before doing so, consult the complainant and the respondent: ibid s 12(2). The bishop must consult the complainant and the respondent where he proposes to extend the period: Clergy Discipline Rules 2005, SI 2005/2022, r 18(1). See also r 19.

5 2003 Measure s 12(1).

6 Ibid s 12(1)(a). In this case the bishop must reduce his determination to writing and give a copy of it to the complainant and the respondent: ss 12(1)(a), 13(1), (2). The bishop must also state reasons for taking no further action, notify the complainant and the respondent that the complainant may refer the complaint to the president of tribunals for consideration of the bishop's determination, and send a copy of the determination to the complainant and the respondent: SI 2005/2022 r 20. The complainant may refer the complaint to the president of tribunals and, if the president considers that the bishop's determination was plainly wrong, he may direct the bishop to pursue such of the courses specified in heads (2)-(5) in the TEXT as he considers appropriate, in which case the bishop must proceed accordingly: 2003 Measure s 13(3). The complainant may refer the complaint to the president of tribunals within 14 days of receiving the bishop's determination that there is to be no further action and any such referral must be in writing in form 4 (set out in SI 2005/2022 Schedule) or in a substantially similar document: see r 21(1), (2). Within 28 days of receipt of the complainant's referral, the president of tribunals' decision must be given in writing with reasons and sent to the complainant, the respondent and the bishop: see r 22.

7 2003 Measure s 12(1)(b). In this case the complaint and the bishop's determination must be notified to the archbishop concerned and remain on a record maintained by the diocesan registrar concerned for such period not exceeding five years as the bishop may determine and no further action is to be taken: ss 12(1)(b), 14(1), (2). However, and notwithstanding s 9 (see PARA 1350A.3), if another complaint is made under s 10 above against the respondent and that complaint is dealt with under head (3), (4) or (5) in the TEXT, the recorded complaint may be dealt with under any of those heads together with the other complaint: s 14(3). The bishop must reduce his determination to writing and give a copy of it to the complainant and the respondent, and supply them with a statement explaining the effect of s 14(2), (3): s 14(4). See further SI 2005/2022 rr 23-25, 81, 83.

8 2003 Measure s 12(1)(c). In this case the bishop must afford the complainant and the respondent an opportunity to make representations and, if both of them agree to the appointment of a conciliator, appoint a conciliator: ss 12(1)(c), 15(1), (2). He may not appoint any person to be a conciliator unless he is satisfied that there is no reason to question the impartiality of that person: s 15(3). A conciliator must use his best endeavours to bring about a conciliation between the complainant and the respondent and: s 15(4). If within three months following his appointment or such further period as he may, with the agreement of the complainant and the respondent, allow, a conciliation is brought about, he must submit a report on the case to the bishop, together with such recommendations as he may wish to make: s 15(4)(a). If a conciliation is not brought about but the complainant and the respondent agree that another conciliator should be appointed, the bishop may appoint that other person as the conciliator: s 15(4)(b). If a conciliation is not brought about and the complainant and the respondent do not agree to a different conciliator, the conciliator must refer the matter back to the bishop: s 15(4)(c). If the complainant and the respondent do not agree to the appointment of a conciliator or as to the person to be appointed, or to a different conciliator, the bishop must proceed to deal with the complaint under head (1), (2), (4) or (5) in the TEXT: s 15(5). See further SI 2005/2022 r 26.

9 2003 Measure s 12(1)(d). Where the bishop considers that the imposition of a penalty by consent might be appropriate, he must afford the complainant and the respondent an opportunity to make representations and, if the respondent consents to the imposition of a penalty and he and the bishop agree as to the penalty, the bishop must proceed accordingly and thereafter no further step may be taken in regard thereto: ss 12(1)(d), 16(1). However, where it is agreed that prohibition for life or resignation is the appropriate course the respondent or the bishop may, within seven days following the date of the agreement, withdraw his agreement and the prohibition or resignation must not be implemented: s 16(2). If the consent of the respondent to the imposition of a penalty is not obtained or he and the bishop are unable to reach agreement as to the nature of the penalty, the bishop must proceed to deal with the complaint under head (5) in the TEXT: s 16(3). The bishop must notify the complainant of any action taken in pursuance of s 16 and must also notify the archbishop of the province concerned and the registrar of the diocese concerned of any penalty agreed: s 16(4). A penalty by consent under s 16 may only be imposed in respect of such misconduct alleged in the complaint as the respondent admits: SI 2005/2022 r 27(1). In addition to resignation by consent under the 2003 Measure s 16, any of the penalties that may be imposed under s 24 (see PARA 1350B.1) on a finding of misconduct may be imposed by consent under s 16: SI 2005/2022 r 27(2). See further r 27(3)-(8).

10 2003 Measure s 12(1)(e). In this case he must refer the matter to the designated officer and it is then the duty of that officer to cause inquiries to be made into the complaint: ss 12(1)(e), 17(1). After due inquiries have been made into the complaint the designated officer must refer the matter to the president of tribunals for the purpose of deciding whether there is a case to answer in respect of which a disciplinary tribunal or the Vicar-General's court, as the case may be, should be requested to adjudicate: s 17(2). If the president of tribunals decides that there is a case for the respondent to answer he must declare that as his decision and refer the complaint to a disciplinary tribunal or the Vicar-General's court, as the case may be, for adjudication: s 17(3). If he decides that there is no case for the respondent to answer he must declare his decision, and thereafter no further steps may be taken in regard thereto: s 17(4). The president of tribunals must reduce his decision to writing and give a copy of it to the complainant, the respondent, the bishop and the designated officer: s 17(5). The designated officer must investigate a complaint referred to him for a formal investigation, and must send or deliver a written report to the president of tribunals: see SI 2005/2022 r 28. The president of tribunals must then decide if there is a case for the respondent to answer and, where he decides there is, he must refer the case to the tribunal: see r 29. 'Designated officer' means an officer of the legal office of the National Institutions of the Church of England designated by the Archbishops' Council for the purposes of the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003: s 43(1); SI 2005/2022 r 106. As to disciplinary tribunals see PARA 1350C.3.

6. Conduct of proceedings

In disciplinary proceedings under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 it is the duty of the designated officer¹ or a person duly authorised by him to conduct the case for the complainant². In any such proceedings the president of tribunals³ may direct (1) that the complaint is to be withdrawn, whereupon no further action may be taken in the proceedings, or (2) that an attempt or further attempt to bring about conciliation is to be made⁴.

In any such proceedings the standard of proof to be applied by the tribunal or court is the same as in proceedings in the High Court exercising civil jurisdiction⁵. The determination of any matter before the tribunal or court must be according to the opinion of the majority of the members thereof and must be pronounced in public together with its reasons⁶. The hearing must be in private, except that the tribunal or court, if satisfied that it is in the interests of justice so to do or the respondent so requests, must direct that the hearing is to be in public, in which case the tribunal or court may, during any part of the proceedings, exclude such person or persons as it may determine⁷.

Where a complaint is referred to a tribunal for adjudication, the registrar of tribunals may hold one or more preliminary hearings to identify the issues and give directions⁸, and must give notice to the parties of such hearings⁹. Detailed provision has been made as to the conduct of proceedings before the tribunal¹⁰.

3 As to the president of tribunals see PARA 1350C.5.

7 Ibid s 18(3)(c); Clergy Discipline Rules 2005, SI 2005/2022, r 40.

8 The registrar must give directions for the just disposal of the proceedings in accordance with the overriding objective: ibid r 30(1)(b). The overriding objective is to enable formal disciplinary proceedings brought under the 2003 Measure to be dealt with justly, in a way that is both fair to all relevant interested persons and proportionate to the nature and seriousness of the issues raised: see SI 2005/2022 rr 1, 2.

7. Suspension during proceedings

Where a complaint in writing¹ is made against a priest or deacon holding any preferment in a diocese, or a priest or deacon holding any preferment in a diocese is arrested on suspicion of committing a criminal offence, the bishop of the diocese may, by notice in writing served on him, suspend him from exercising or performing without the leave of the bishop any right or duty of or incidental to his office². The bishop may at any time, by notice in writing served on the priest or deacon concerned, revoke such a notice of suspension³. Where such a notice of suspension is served and has not been revoked the suspension continues until the expiry of the period of three months following service of the notice or until the proceedings under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 or for the criminal offence are concluded, whichever occurs earlier⁴.

Where a notice of suspension is served the bishop may, after consultation with the churchwardens and with the incumbent or priest in charge concerned, make such arrangements as he thinks fit for the ministrations of the church or churches concerned while the suspension remains in force⁵. While the notice of suspension remains in force in relation to a priest or deacon he must not interfere with any person performing the services of a church in pursuance of such arrangements, and any such interference is regarded⁶ as an act in contravention of the laws ecclesiastical⁷.

Where a complaint in writing is made against a bishop⁸ or archbishop, or a bishop or archbishop is arrested on suspicion of committing a criminal offence, the archbishop of the province in which the bishop holds office or, in the case of an archbishop, the other archbishop, may with the consent of the two most senior diocesan bishops in that province or the province of the other archbishop, as the case may be, by notice in writing suspend him from exercising any right or duty of or incidental to his office⁹. The archbishop may at any time, by notice in writing served on the bishop or archbishop concerned, revoke such a notice of suspension¹⁰. Where a notice of suspension is served the archbishop may, after consultation with the two most senior diocesan bishops of his province, make such arrangements as he thinks fit for the ministrations of the diocese or province concerned while the suspension remains in force¹¹. While the notice of suspension remains in force in relation to a bishop or archbishop he must not interfere with any person performing functions in pursuance of such arrangements¹². Where such a notice of suspension is served and has not been revoked the suspension continues until the expiry of the period of three months following service of the notice or until the proceedings under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 or for the criminal offence are concluded, whichever occurs earlier¹³.

2 Ibid s 36(1); Clergy Discipline Rules 2005, SI 2005/2022, rr 60(1), 61(1). However, in the case of a complaint, the priest or deacon must not be suspended unless and until the complaint falls to be considered under 2003 Measure s 12(1) (see PARA 1350A.5): s 36(1) proviso. A notice suspending a priest or deacon (1) following a complaint must be in form 12a (set out in SI 2005/2022 Schedule) or in a substantially similar document; and (2) following his arrest on suspicion of committing a criminal offence must be in form 13a (set out in the Schedule) or in a substantially similar document and, in either case, may specify any rights or duties which by leave of the bishop are not suspended: rr 60(2), 61(2). See further rr 62 (contents of a notice of suspension), 63 (notification to others of suspension), 65 (notification of cessation of suspension), and 66 (appeals against notice of suspension). A priest or deacon on whom a notice of suspension is served may appeal against the suspension to the president of tribunals and on any such appeal the president of tribunals may, within 28 days following the lodging of the appeal, either confirm or revoke the suspension: 2003 Measure s 36(6). For the meaning of 'preferment' see PARA 1350C.6. A priest or deacon may be suspended under s 36 until proceedings on an appeal have been disposed of: Clergy Discipline Appeal Rules 2005, SI 2005/3201, r 10(2).

4 2003 Measure s 36(3). If the proceedings are not concluded before the expiry of that period a further notice of suspension may be served, and this provision applies in relation to the further suspension as it applied to the earlier suspension or suspensions: s 36(3).

8 'Bishop' here means any diocesan bishop, any suffragan bishop and any other bishop: ibid s 37(5).

9 Ibid s 37(1). However, in the case of a complaint, the bishop or archbishop must not be suspended unless and until the complaint falls to be considered under s 12(1) (see PARA 1350A.5): s 37(1) proviso. The Clergy Discipline Rules 2005, SI 2005/2022, apply, subject to rr 82-90, to proceedings against bishops and archbishops under the 2003 Measure as they apply to priests and deacons, and are to be construed accordingly for the purposes of such proceedings: SI 2005/2022 r 81(1). A notice suspending a bishop or archbishop (1) following a complaint must be in form 12b (set out in the Schedule) or in a substantially similar document; and (2) following his arrest on suspicion of committing a criminal offence must be in form 13b (set out in the Schedule) or in a substantially similar document: rr 85(a), 86(a). The notice must be signed by the archbishop of the province in which the bishop to be suspended holds office or, in the case of an archbishop to be suspended, signed by the other archbishop, and countersigned by the two most senior diocesan bishops in that province or the province of the other archbishop, as the case may be: rr 85(b), (c), 86(b), (c). See further rr 87 and 88 (notification to others of suspension). A bishop or archbishop on whom a notice of suspension is served may appeal against the suspension to the president of tribunals and on any such appeal the president of tribunals may, within 28 days following the lodging of the appeal, either confirm or revoke the suspension: 2003 Measure ss 36(6), 37(6). Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(6) DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS/(i) In general/1350B. Proceedings for misconduct.

1350B. Proceedings for misconduct.

1. Penalties and conditional discharge

On a finding by a disciplinary tribunal¹ or the Vicar-General's court² in disciplinary proceedings that the respondent committed the misconduct complained of, the tribunal or court may (1) impose on the respondent any one or more of the penalties specified below³; or (2) defer consideration of the penalty, and for that purpose may adjourn the proceedings⁴; or (3) impose no penalty⁵.

One or more of the following penalties may be imposed on a respondent on a finding that he has committed any misconduct, namely⁶:

- 48 (a) prohibition for life, that is to say prohibition without limit of time from exercising any of the functions of his Orders⁷;
- 49 (b) limited prohibition, that is to say prohibition for a specific time from exercising any of the functions of his Orders⁸;
- 50 (c) removal from office, that is to say, removal from any preferment which he then holds⁹;
- 51 (d) in the case of a minister licensed to serve in a diocese by the bishop thereof, revocation of the licence¹⁰;
- 52 (e) injunction, that is to say, an order to do or to refrain from doing a specified act¹¹;
- 53 (f) rebuke¹².

Where, on a finding that the respondent has committed any misconduct, the disciplinary tribunal or Vicar-General's court, as the case may be, is of opinion, having regard to the circumstances including the nature of the misconduct and the character of the respondent, that it is inexpedient to impose a penalty it may make an order discharging him subject to the condition that he commits no misconduct during such period not exceeding two years from the date of the order as may be specified in the order¹³. If a person in whose case such an order has been made is found, in disciplinary proceedings under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003, to have committed misconduct during the period specified in the order, the disciplinary tribunal or the Vicar-General's court, as the case may be, may deal with him for the misconduct for which the order was made in any manner in which it could deal with him if it had just found that he had committed that misconduct¹⁴.

Any person (including a person deposed from Holy Orders under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963)¹⁵ who performs in the Church of England any function which, under a penalty imposed on him under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 or a censure imposed on him under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, he is not permitted to perform, commits an act of misconduct under the 2003 Measure and, in the case of a person deposed from Holy Orders, disciplinary proceedings under that Measure may be instituted against him in respect of the misconduct as if he had not been deposed¹⁶.

3 Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 19(1)(a). The penalties are specified in s 24 (see TEXT AND NOTES 6-12). Reference to a penalty includes a reference to an order for conditional discharge under s 25: s 19(3). The implementation of a penalty under s 24 which has been imposed by the tribunal or court must be postponed pending the disposal of an appeal made under the Clergy Discipline Appeal Rules 2005, SI 2005/3201, r 5 or 6 (see PARA 1350B.2): r 10(1).

Before imposing a penalty the disciplinary tribunal or court may invite, in the case of a disciplinary tribunal, the bishop of the diocese concerned, or in the case of the Vicar-General's court, the archbishop concerned or, if the respondent is an archbishop, the other archbishop, to express in writing his views as to the appropriate penalty; the tribunal or court must have regard to any such views in imposing the penalty, if any, and the views of the bishop or archbishop, as the case may be, must be conveyed in writing to the respondent: 2003 Measure s 19(2). However, if the bishop or archbishop has given evidence in the proceedings, he must not be consulted: s 19(2) proviso.

2. Appeals

In disciplinary proceedings under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003, the respondent may appeal against any penalty imposed on him¹, and the respondent on a question of law or fact, and the designated officer², on a question of law, may appeal against any finding of the disciplinary tribunal³ or the Vicar-General's court⁴. Such appeal is to the Arches Court of Canterbury (where the proceedings take place in the province of Canterbury) or the Chancery Court of York (where the proceedings take place in the province of York)⁵.

Notice of appeal must be sent in the specified form⁶ or in a substantially similar document⁷, together with a copy of the decision of the disciplinary tribunal or the Vicar-General's court⁸. Notice of appeal and attached documents must be sent so as to be received by the provincial registrar within 28 days of the public pronouncement of the decision or penalty imposed, whichever is later⁹. On receipt of a notice of appeal the provincial registrar must give directions for the just disposal of the proceedings in accordance with the overriding objective¹⁰.

Provision is made for the fixing the date and place of the appeal hearing¹¹, amendment or withdrawal of appeals¹², striking out of appeals which are not pursued with due expedition¹³, holding hearings in the absence of a party¹⁴, adjournment of hearings¹⁵ and exclusion of disruptive persons¹⁶. An appeal is to continue despite the death of a complainant¹⁷, and may be heard following the death of a respondent¹⁸. The Dean of the Arches and Auditor or the appellate court may hear evidence which was not before the tribunal¹⁹ and witnesses may be called to give oral evidence²⁰. The appeal hearing will normally be in held public²¹, though the appellate court may order that the identity of any person involved or referred to in the proceedings must not be published or otherwise made public²². On any appeal the appellate court may, by a majority²³, (1) confirm, reverse or vary any finding of the tribunal²⁴; (2) refer a particular issue back to the tribunal for hearing and determination in accordance with any direction that may be given by the appellate court²⁵; (3) order the complaint to be reheard by the same or a differently constituted tribunal²⁶; (4) confirm or set aside a penalty imposed by the tribunal, or substitute a greater or lesser penalty²⁷; (5) impose a penalty²⁸ where the tribunal has not imposed any penalty or when upholding an appeal on a question of law by the designated officer²⁹. The Dean of the Arches and Auditor must pronounce the appellate court's determination of the appeal in public³⁰.

3. Removal of prohibitions and deposition, and restoration on pardon

Where by virtue of anything done under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 or the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 a priest or deacon is prohibited for life¹ or deposed² he may make an application to the archbishop concerned for the prohibition or deposition to be nullified³ on the grounds (1) that new evidence has come to light affecting the facts on which the prohibition or deposition was based⁴; or (2) that the proper legal procedure leading to the prohibition or deposition was not followed⁵. On such an application, if the archbishop considers that the prohibition or deposition was not justified he may, after consultation with the Dean of the Arches and Auditor, declare that the prohibition or deposition be nullified, whereupon it must be treated for all purposes in law as never having been imposed⁶. Corresponding provision applies, mutatis mutandis, in relation to archbishops and bishops who have been prohibited for life or deposed⁷.

Where an archbishop, bishop, priest or deacon is prohibited from exercising functions for a specific time he and the archbishop or bishop of the province or diocese concerned (or his successor in office) acting jointly may make an application to the Dean of the Arches and Auditor sitting with the two Vicars-General for the removal of the prohibition; and on receiving such an application they may make an order removing the prohibition, whereupon he is eligible for any preferment⁸.

Where an archbishop, bishop, priest or deacon is prohibited from exercising functions or removed from office his incapacities cease if he receives a free pardon from the Crown and he must be restored to any preferment he previously held if it has not in the meantime been filled⁹.

4. Compensation

Any person in respect of whom a penalty of removal from office or revocation of a licence to serve in a diocese is imposed under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 and subsequently revoked on appeal is entitled to compensation¹.

1 Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 41. The Pastoral Measure 1983 Sch 4 (see PARAS 888-891) applies in relation to such a person as to an incumbent of a benefice deemed to be vacated by virtue of s 25 of that Measure: 2003 Measure s 41.

5. Sentences and orders imposed by secular courts: priests and deacons

If a person who is a priest or deacon (1) is convicted (whether in England or elsewhere) of an offence and a sentence of imprisonment (including one which is not implemented immediately) is passed on him, or (2) has a decree of divorce or an order of separation made against him following a finding of adultery, behaviour in such a way that the petitioner cannot reasonably be expected to live with the respondent or desertion and, in the case of divorce, the decree has been made absolute, he is liable without further proceedings to a penalty of removal from office or prohibition (whether for life or limited) or both¹. Where a person is thus liable to such a penalty and the bishop of the relevant diocese² proposes to impose such a penalty, he must, after consultation with the president of tribunals³, inform that person in writing of the proposal, together with an invitation to send representations in writing to the bishop within the period of 28 days. On the expiry of that period the bishop must decide whether or not to impose the penalty and must inform that person in writing of the decision. If the decision is to impose the penalty, that person may request the archbishop of the relevant province to review the decision and on such a review the archbishop may uphold or reverse the decision after consideration of all the circumstances, including any representations made⁴. Where such a penalty is to be imposed, it must be imposed by the bishop of the relevant diocese⁵, and before imposing it the bishop must require the registrar of his diocese to give (if it is practicable to do so) not less than 14 days notice in writing to the priest or deacon concerned of the time and place at which the penalty will be imposed and if the priest or deacon appears at that time and place he is entitled to be present when the penalty is imposed⁶.

Such a penalty may not be imposed after the expiry of the period of two years beginning with the date on which the sentence becomes conclusive or, as the case may be, the decree absolute or order is made⁷.

Where a penalty of removal from office or prohibition is imposed on any person pursuant to the provisions described above the penalty has effect subject to the provisions relating to penalties generally⁸, and the like consequences ensue in all respects as if such person had been found to have committed misconduct such a penalty had been imposed on him⁹.

1 Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 30(1). As to those penalties see PARA 1350B.1. Where a priest or deacon is liable to a penalty of prohibition or removal from office, or both, in accordance with head (1), the bishop must not propose to impose any penalty until the conviction has become conclusive and the court has sent to the bishop the certificate of conviction in the form used by the court for that purpose: Clergy Discipline Rules 2005, SI 2005/2022, r 67. As to when convictions become conclusive see PARA 1350A.3 NOTE 1. See also rr 81, 89.

2 'Relevant diocese' means (a) the diocese in which the priest or deacon in relation to whom a penalty may be imposed holds preferment at the date on which the sentence which justifies the imposition of the penalty becomes conclusive; or (b) if at that date he is not holding preferment, but is residing in a diocese, the diocese in which he is residing at that date; or (c) if at that date he neither holds preferment nor resides in a diocese, the diocese in which he last held preferment before that date or, in the case of a priest or deacon who has not held preferment in any diocese, the diocese in which he was ordained: 2003 Measure s 30(7). For the meaning of 'preferment' see PARA 1350C.6.

3 As to the president of tribunals see PARA 1350C.5.

4 2003 Measure s 30(2); SI 2005/2022 rr 68, 69(a). If the decision is to impose the penalty, the bishop must inform the priest or deacon that an application may be made to the archbishop to review the decision: r 69(b). See further rr 70-73, 81, 89, 90. The functions exercisable by an archbishop are, during the absence abroad or incapacity through illness of the archbishop or a vacancy in the see, exercisable by the other archbishop: 2003 Measure s 30(6).

5 When imposing such a penalty the bishop must be attended by the registrar of his diocese: ibid s 30(5). The penalty must be reduced to writing and a copy sent to the archbishop of the province concerned and to the registrar of the diocese concerned: s 30(5).

6 Ibid s 30(4).

7 Ibid s 30(3). As to when convictions and proceedings become conclusive see PARA 1350A.3 NOTE 1.

6. Sentences and orders imposed by secular courts: bishops and archbishops

If a person who is a bishop¹ or archbishop (1) is convicted (whether in England or elsewhere) of an offence and a sentence of imprisonment (including one which is not implemented immediately) is passed on him, or (2) has a decree of divorce or an order of separation made against him following a finding of adultery, behaviour in such a way that the petitioner cannot reasonably be expected to live with the respondent or desertion and, in the case of divorce, the decree has been made absolute, he is liable without further proceedings to a penalty of removal from office or prohibition (whether for life or limited) or both². Where a person is thus liable to such a penalty and the archbishop concerned proposes to impose such a penalty, he must, after consultation with the president of tribunals³, inform that person in writing of the proposal, together with an invitation to send representations in writing to the archbishop within the period of 28 days. On the expiry of that period the archbishop must decide whether or not to impose the penalty and must inform that person in writing of the decision. If the decision is to impose the penalty, that person may (a) if he is a bishop, request the other archbishop, or (b) if he is an archbishop, request the president of tribunals, to review the decision and on such a review the archbishop or president of tribunals, as the case may be, may uphold or reverse the decision after consideration of all the circumstances, including any representations made⁴. Where such a penalty is to be imposed, it must be imposed (i) in the case of a bishop, by the archbishop⁵ of the relevant province after consultation with the two senior diocesan bishops of the province, and (ii) in the case of a person who is an archbishop, by the other archbishop after consultation as mentioned above⁶.

Such a penalty may not be imposed after the expiry of the period of two years beginning with the date on which the sentence becomes conclusive or, as the case may be, the decree absolute or order is made⁷.

Where a penalty of removal from office or prohibition is imposed on any person pursuant to the provisions described above the penalty has effect subject to the provisions relating to penalties generally⁸, and the like consequences ensue in all respects as if such person had been found to have committed misconduct such a penalty had been imposed on him⁹.

5 When imposing such a penalty the archbishop must be attended by the registrar of his province. The penalty must be reduced to writing and a copy recorded in the registry of the province concerned and sent to the archbishop concerned: ibid s 31(5).

6 Ibid s 31(4).

7 Ibid s 31(3). As to when convictions and proceedings become conclusive see PARA 1350A.3 NOTE 1.

8 Ie ibid ss 24-29: see PARAS 1350B.1, 1350B.3.

9 Ibid s 32. For the meaning of 'misconduct' see PARA 1350A.1.

7. Archbishops' list

It is the duty of the archbishops acting jointly to compile and maintain a list of all clerks in Holy Orders (1) on whom a penalty or censure (by consent or otherwise) has been imposed under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 Measure or the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963¹; or (2) who have been deposed from Holy Orders under the 1963 Measure²; or (3) who have executed a deed of relinquishment under the Clerical Disabilities Act 1870³; or (4) who have resigned preferment following the making of a complaint in writing against them under the 2003 Measure or the 1963 Measure⁴; or (5) who, in the opinion of the archbishops, have acted in a manner (not amounting to misconduct) which might affect their suitability for holding preferment⁵.

Where the archbishop has included a person falling within heads (1) to (4) above in the list he must take all reasonable steps to inform that person in writing that he has done so and of the particulars recorded in respect of that person. That person may request the president of tribunals⁶ to review the matter and on such a review the president of tribunals must direct that that person should continue to be included in the list or should be excluded therefrom and, in the former case, may also direct that the particulars relating to that person should be altered in such manner as may be specified⁷.

Where the archbishop proposes to include a person falling within head (5) above in the list he must take all reasonable steps to inform that person in writing of the proposal and the particulars to be recorded, together with an invitation to send comments or representations in writing to the archbishop within the period of 21 days. On the expiry of that period the archbishop must decide whether or not to include that person in the list and inform that person in writing of his decision. If the decision is to include that person in the list that person may request the president of tribunals to review the decision and on such a review the president of tribunals may uphold or reverse the decision⁸.

The archbishop must review the inclusion of a person in the list, in such manner as may be prescribed, on the expiry of the period of five years following the inclusion and also if requested to do so by that person or by the bishop of a diocese⁹. However, that person is not entitled to make such a request within that period of five years nor within the period of five years following any previous review¹⁰.

8. Duty to disclose criminal convictions and arrests, and divorce and separation orders

A person in Holy Orders who (whether in England or elsewhere) is convicted of an offence or is arrested on suspicion of committing an offence is under a duty, within the period of 28 days following the conviction or arrest, (1) in the case of a priest or deacon, to inform the bishop of the diocese concerned, (2) in the case of a bishop, to inform the archbishop concerned, and (3) in the case of an archbishop, to inform the other archbishop, of the conviction or arrest¹. This applies to a person in Holy Orders in respect of whose marriage a decree nisi of divorce has been made absolute or an order of judicial separation has been made as it applies to a person who is convicted of an offence².

Failure to comply with this requirement is regarded³ as a failure to do an act required by the laws ecclesiastical⁴.

1. Exercise of functions in relation to discipline of clergy

Any body or person on whom functions in connection with the discipline of persons in Holy Orders are conferred by the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 must, in exercising those functions, have due regard to the role in that connection of the bishop or archbishop who, by virtue of his office and consecration, is required to administer discipline¹. Where a complaint is to be referred under that Measure to a disciplinary tribunal the tribunal (to be called the bishop's disciplinary tribunal) must be constituted for the diocese in question² to deal with the complaint³.

A Clergy Discipline Commission is established to exercise functions conferred by that Measure⁴, and to (1) give general advice to disciplinary tribunals, the courts of the Vicars-General, bishops and archbishops as to the penalties which are appropriate in particular circumstances⁵; (2) issue codes of practice⁶ and general policy guidance to persons exercising functions in connection with clergy discipline⁷; and (3) make annually to the General Synod through the House of Bishops a report on the exercise of its functions during the previous year⁸.

2 Ibid s 22: see PARA 1350C.3.

3 Ibid s 2 (not yet in force).

4 Ibid s 3(1), (3). The Commission must consist of not more than 12 persons appointed by the Appointments Committee of the Church of England including at least two persons from each House of the General Synod; and two persons who have either a seven years general qualification within the meaning of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 or who have held or are holding high judicial office or the office of Circuit judge: 2003 Measure s 3(1). The Appointments Committee must, after consultation with the Dean of the Arches and Auditor, appoint members of the Commission to be chairman and deputy chairman, being members who satisfy the qualification or judicial office requirements referred to above: s 3(2).

5 Ibid s 3(3)(a).

6 It is the duty of the Clergy Discipline Commission to formulate guidance for the purposes of the 2003 Measure generally and, with the approval of the Dean of the Arches and Auditor, to promulgate the guidance in a Code of Practice: s 39(1). The Commission may at any time amend or replace such a Code of Practice by a further Code of Practice duly issued: s 39(2). A Code of Practice must be laid before the General Synod and does not come into force until approved by the General Synod, whether with or without amendment: s 39(3). Where the Business Committee of the General Synod determines that a Code of Practice does not need to be debated by the General Synod then, unless (1) notice is given by a member of the General Synod in accordance with its standing orders that he wishes the Code to be debated, or (2) notice is so given by any such member that he wishes to move an amendment to the Code, the Code is deemed to have been approved by the General Synod without amendment: s 39(4).

7 Ibid s 3(3)(b).

8 Ibid s 3(3)(b).

2. Constitution of provincial panels

It is the duty of the Clergy Discipline Commission¹ to compile and maintain for each province, a list ('the provincial panel') of persons available for appointment under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 as members of a disciplinary tribunal or of the Vicar-General's court². Each provincial panel must contain the names of (1) two lay persons from each diocese nominated by the bishop of the diocese after consultation with the bishop's council, being persons who are resident in the diocese and are on the electoral roll of a parish in the diocese or on the community roll of a cathedral which is not a parish church³; (2) two persons in Holy Orders from each diocese nominated by the bishop of the diocese after consultation with the bishop's council, being persons who have served in Holy Orders for at least seven years and are resident in the diocese⁴; (3) ten persons nominated by the archbishop of the relevant province, being persons who have a seven year general qualification⁵ or who have held or are holding high judicial office or the office of Circuit judge⁶; (4) such persons as may be nominated as described below⁷.

The archbishop of the relevant province may also nominate for inclusion on the provincial panel (a) not more than five persons who are resident in the province and are on the electoral roll of a parish in the province or on the community roll of a cathedral which is not a parish church⁸; and (b) not more than five persons who have served in Holy Orders for at least seven years and reside in the province⁹.

No person who is not an actual communicant¹⁰ may be nominated to serve on the provincial panel¹¹.

Persons serve on the provincial panel for six years, and on retiring from the panel are eligible to be nominated to serve for not more than one further period of six years¹².

3. Constitution of disciplinary tribunals

A disciplinary tribunal must consist of five members, comprising (1) the chairman, who must be the president of tribunals¹ or such other person as he may appoint as chairman from those nominated² to serve on the relevant provincial panel³; (2) two lay persons appointed by the president of tribunals from those nominated⁴ otherwise than by the bishop of the diocese concerned to serve on the relevant provincial panel; and (3) two persons in Holy Orders appointed by the president of tribunals from those nominated⁵ otherwise than by the bishop of the diocese concerned to serve on the relevant provincial panel⁶.

The president of tribunals must not appoint any person to be a member of a disciplinary tribunal unless he is satisfied that there is no reason to question the impartiality of that person, and before doing so he must afford an opportunity to the respondent to make representations as to the suitability of that person to be appointed⁷.

If the president of tribunals is not satisfied that a proposed appointee is impartial, he propose an alternative person: r 37(2).

4. Constitution of Vicar-General's court

When exercising its jurisdiction in disciplinary proceedings¹ under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 against a bishop, the Vicar-General's court consists of five members comprising (1) the chairman, who must be the Vicar-General of the relevant province unless he declares himself to be personally acquainted with the complainant or the respondent, in which case the president of tribunals² must appoint a person to be the chairman from those nominated³ to serve on the relevant provincial panel of the province other than that in which the bishop serves⁴; (2) two persons in Holy Orders (one of whom must be in Episcopal Orders) appointed by the president of tribunals⁵; (3) two lay persons appointed by the president of tribunals from among those nominated⁶ to serve on the provincial panel of the province other than that in which the bishop serves⁷.

When exercising its jurisdiction in disciplinary proceedings against an archbishop of a province, the Vicar-General's court consists of five members comprising (a) the chairman, who must be the Vicar-General of the other province unless he declares himself to be personally acquainted with the complainant or the respondent, in which case the president of tribunals must appoint a person to be the chairman from those nominated⁸ to serve on the provincial panel of the other province⁹; (2) two persons in Holy Orders (one of whom must be in Episcopal Orders) appointed by the president of tribunals¹⁰; (3) two lay persons appointed by the president of tribunals from among those nominated to serve on the provincial panel of the other province¹¹.

The president of tribunals must not appoint any person to be a member of the Vicar-General's court of a province unless he is satisfied that there is no reason to question the impartiality of that person, and before doing so he must afford an opportunity to the respondent to make representations as to the suitability of that person to be appointed¹².

5. President and registrar of tribunals

The chairman and deputy chairman of the Clergy Discipline Commission are the president and deputy president of tribunals respectively¹. The president of tribunals has the functions conferred on him by the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003, and the additional duties of (1) issuing practice directions; (2) acting as the chairman of a disciplinary tribunal where, in his opinion, important points of law or principle are involved; and (3) exercising such other functions as may be prescribed².

The archbishops of Canterbury and York must each, after consultation with the president of tribunals, appoint a person to be the registrar of tribunals for his province³. The registrar has the functions conferred on him by the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003, and the additional duties of (a) directing and supervising the general administration of disciplinary tribunals in the province; and (b) exercising such other functions as may be prescribed⁴.

1 Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 4(1).

2 Ibid s 4(2). The deputy president acts for the president when the president is absent or is unable or unwilling to act: s 4(3). As to disciplinary tribunals see PARA 1350C.3.

3 Ibid s 5(1). A person so appointed must have a general qualification within the meaning of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990: 2003 Measure s 5(2). The registrar of tribunals must vacate that office on the date on which he reaches 70 or such earlier age as may be prescribed by regulations made by the House of Bishops of the General Synod under the Ecclesiastical Judges and Legal Officers Measure 1976 s 5: 2003 Measure s 5(3). As to the resignation of the registrar see s 5(4); as to the termination of the appointment of the registrar see s 5(5).

4 Ibid s 5(6). If the person holding the office of registrar of tribunals for a province is for any reason unable or unwilling to perform the duties of a registrar or it would be inappropriate for him to perform those duties, the registrar of tribunals for the other province must perform those duties and, for that purpose, has all the powers and duties of the registrar of the first-mentioned province: s 5(7).

6. Jurisdiction in disciplinary proceedings

A disciplinary tribunal¹ constituted for a diocese has jurisdiction to hear and determine disciplinary proceedings under the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 against a priest or deacon who, when the misconduct complained of was alleged to have been committed, held preferment² in the diocese or, subject to an exception³, was resident therein; or who is alleged to have officiated as a minister in the diocese without authority⁴.

The Vicar-General's court of each of the provinces of Canterbury and York constituted in accordance with the provisions of the 2003 Measure has jurisdiction to hear and determine disciplinary proceedings under that Measure against any bishop who, when the misconduct complained of was alleged to have been committed, held preferment in the province or, subject to an exception⁵, was resident therein; or any bishop who is alleged to have officiated as a minister in the province without authority; or against the archbishop of the other province⁶.

1 As to disciplinary tribunals see PARA 1350C.3.

2 'Preferment' includes an archbishopric, a bishopric, archdeaconry, dignity or office in a cathedral or collegiate church, and a benefice, and every curacy, lectureship, readership, chaplaincy, office or place which requires the discharge of any spiritual duty: Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 s 43(1).

3 Where disciplinary proceedings in respect of any matter are instituted under ibid s 10 (see PARA 1350A.3) against a priest or deacon in the diocese in which he holds or held preferment or in which he is alleged to have officiated as a minister without authority, no such proceedings in respect of the same matter may be instituted in any other diocese on the basis of residence therein and any such proceedings previously instituted on that basis must be discontinued: s 6(3).

4 Ibid s 6(1). Where disciplinary proceedings in respect of any matter are instituted under s 10 (see PARA 1350A.3) against a priest or deacon in the diocese in which he is alleged to have officiated without authority, no such proceedings in respect of the same matter may be instituted in any other diocese, on the basis of preferment therein and any such proceedings previously instituted on that basis must be discontinued: s 6(4).

5 Where disciplinary proceedings in respect of any matter are instituted under ibid s 10 (see PARA 1350A.3) against a bishop in the province in which he holds or held preferment or in which he is alleged to have officiated without authority, no such proceedings in respect of the same matter may be instituted in the other province on the basis of residence therein and any such proceedings previously instituted on that basis must be discontinued: s 6(3).

6 Ibid s 6(2). Where disciplinary proceedings in respect of any matter are instituted under s 10 (see PARA 1350A.3) against a bishop in the province in which he is alleged to have officiated without authority, no such proceedings in respect of the same matter may be instituted in the other province on the basis of preferment therein and any such proceedings previously instituted on that basis must be discontinued: s 6(4).

1351. Persons subject to disciplinary jurisdiction.

Proceedings may be instituted under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 against an archbishop, any diocesan bishop, any suffragan bishop commissioned by a diocesan bishop or any other bishop or a priest or deacon who, when the offence was alleged to have been committed or when the proceedings are instituted, held or holds preferment in any diocese or resided or resides there¹.

It seems that all lay persons including such office holders as churchwardens, deaconesses, readers and lay chancellors, are outside the criminal jurisdiction of ecclesiastical courts².

Nothing in the Measure authorises proceedings against a holder of an office in a royal peculiar³.

1 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 17. For the meaning of 'preferment', see PARA 1290 note 1 ante.

2 See PARA 1350 ante; see also ibid s 82 (2) (c), which abolished the jurisdiction of consistory courts to hear and determine proceedings against lay officers of a church. Conflicting views have, however, been expressed as to the liability of lay officers: see Dale, Law of the Parish Church (4th Edn) 113; Garth Moore, An Introduction to English Canon Law (1967) 126. As to actions for damages against chancellors, see PARA 1268 note 6 ante.

TEXT AND NOTE 3--1963 Measure s 83(3) applies, with modifications, for the purposes of the Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 (disciplinary proceedings for misconduct): see 2003 Measure s 35.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(6) DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS/(i) In general/1352. Offences against the laws ecclesiastical.

1352. Offences against the laws ecclesiastical.

The offences in respect of which proceedings may be instituted by way of a criminal suit in an ecclesiastical court are divided into two categories¹: (1) offences against the laws ecclesiastical involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial²; and (2) any other offences against the laws ecclesiastical³. The latter category includes, but is not limited to, (a) conduct unbecoming the office and work of a clerk in holy orders⁴; and (b) serious, persistent or continuous neglect of duty⁵.

The expression 'offences against the laws ecclesiastical'⁶ includes statutory offences (namely offences under relevant Acts of Parliament and under Measures of the Church Assembly or General Synod), offences under the common law of the realm in matters ecclesiastical, and breaches of post-Reformation canons⁷.

1 This distinction is important for various purposes: eg jurisdiction (see PARAS 1284, 1287, 1288, 1290-1292, 1350 ante), procedure (see PARA 1362 et seq post), censures (see PARA 1372 et seq post) and the application of the doctrine of precedent (see PARA 1271 ante).

2 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 14 (1) (a). Jurisdiction in respect of offences involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial is exercisable at first instance by the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved (see PARA 1290 ante). In some cases the element of doctrine etc. may constitute the main substance of the offence (see eg paras 1354, 1355 post); in other cases, it seems, it may be incidentally involved, but cf. Bland v Archdeacon of Cheltenham [1972] Fam 157 at 164, 165, [1972] 1 All ER 1012 at 1016, 1017. Proceedings in respect of such offences may be instituted only if the offence was committed within the province of Canterbury or York: see PARA 1350 ante. The Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved is not bound by any decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in relation to matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial: see PARA 1271 ante.

3 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 14 (1) (b). Jurisdiction in respect of these offences is exercisable at first instance by the consistory court of the diocese in the case of priests or deacons (see PARA 1284 ante), by a commission of the convocation of the province in the case of a bishop or by a commission of both convocations in the case of an archbishop (see PARA 1291 ante). There is no limitation in respect of the place where the offence was committed (see PARA 1350 ante).

4 Ibid s 14 (1) (b) (i): see PARA 1356 post.

5 Ibid s 14 (1) (b) (ii): see PARA 1357 post.

6 The Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 frequently uses also the expression 'offences under this Measure': see eg ss 6 (1), 18, 24 (1), 33 (2), 42 (2), 49, 54, and the titles to Parts II to VI. It is, it seems, to be interpreted, not as applying only to offences created or defined by the Measure, but as including all offences against the laws ecclesiastical which are cognisable under the Measure: see the title to Part II ('Offences Cognisable under the Measure and Provisions as to Persons Chargeable therewith').

7 See PARA 305 et seq ante. As to post-Reformation canons, see in particular para 308 ante.

Generally all violations of church order and breaches of the canons and other laws ecclesiastical, and disobedience to the lawful commands of the bishop, on the part of the clergy are ecclesiastical offences and punishable as such¹. They include numerous offences which were formerly cognisable under enactments now repealed². Except where a contrary intention appears the repeal of these enactments does not affect the existence of any corresponding offences which are recognised by the common law in matters ecclesiastical³. There are still certain offences which are cognisable both under statutory provisions and at common law, for example some instances of conduct unbecoming the office and work of a clerk in holy orders⁴, and serious, persistent and continuous neglect of duty⁵.

(ii) Offences Cognisable by the Courts

1354. Offences relating to doctrine.

Offences involving matter of doctrine¹ have generally been held to comprise heresy², avowing blasphemous³ and impious opinions contrary to the Christian religion⁴, depraving⁵ the Book of Common Prayer, and maintaining doctrines repugnant to the Thirty-Nine Articles of Religion. It seems that, notwithstanding the repeal of certain relevant enactments, these are still cognisable as common law offences⁶. For an indication of the doctrinal standards which are capable of being thus enforced, reference may be made to the declaration contained in the canons that the doctrine of the Church of England is grounded in the holy scriptures and in such teachings of the ancient fathers and councils of the church as are agreeable to the scriptures, and that in particular such doctrine is to be found in the Thirty-Nine Articles, the Book of Common Prayer, and the Ordinal⁷.

There are, however, many points of doctrine which the church has not decided and which are open to every member of the church to decide for himself according to his own conscientious opinion⁸, and the general effect of recent legislation has clearly been to give the clergy, among others, a greater liberty of interpretation than the law had allowed in the past with respect to the church's formularies⁹.

1 See the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 14 (1) (a), and PARA 1352 note 2 ante.

2 Heresy may be described as a false opinion repugnant to some point of doctrine clearly revealed in scripture and either absolutely essential to the Christian faith or at least of most high importance: see 2 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 304, 305. In law heresy is only that which has, before 1559, been adjudged to be heresy by the authority of the canonical scriptures, or by any of the first four General Councils, or by any other General Council in which the same was declared heresy by the express words of the canonical scriptures or which, since 1559, may have been or may be determined to be heresy by Parliament with the assent of the clergy in convocation: see the Act of Supremacy 1558, s 20 (repealed by the Statute Law Revision Act 1863 with a saving of any principle or rule of law or equity affirmed, recognised or derived by, in or from any enactment thereby repealed: s 1). Articles charging a clergyman with heresy must distinctly state the obnoxious opinions and the exact terms in which he is alleged to have uttered or published them: Williams v Bishop of Salisbury (1864) 2 Moo PCCNS 375 at 423.

3 As to blasphemy as an offence cognisable in the temporal courts, see 4 Bl Com (14th Edn) 59; R v Ramsay and Foote (1883) 48 LT 733; R v Boulter (1908) 72 JP 188; Bowman v Secular Society Ltd [1917] AC 406, HL, and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 826.

5 Ie depraving in the archaic sense of vilifying, defaming or treating with contempt.

6 Reported judicial decisions on these matters relate mainly to cases brought under former statutory provisions now repealed: cf. Phillimore, Ecclesiastical Law (2nd Edn) 842 et seq. In applying these statutory provisions the courts were usually disposed to allow a reasonable latitude in the interpretation of the Church's formularies: see eg HM Procurator General v Stone (1808) 1 Hag Con 424. It is likely that this tendency would be still more pronounced at the present day, especially in regard to the Thirty-Nine Articles: see note 9 infra.

7 Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon A 5. See also the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 5 (1). As to the Ordinal, cf. Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon A4, which refers to the Form and Manner of Making, Ordaining and Consecrating of Bishops, Priests and Deacons as being 'annexed to the Book of Common Prayer and commonly known as the Ordinal', whereas the Clergy (Ordination and Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1964, s 3 (repealed), described it as being 'contained in' the Book of Common Prayer.

9 See the Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, s 4, which makes provision for the safeguarding of doctrine and directs that canons and regulations shall be 'neither contrary to, nor indicative of any departure from, the doctrine of the Church of England in any essential matter'. See also ss 2, 5 (1); and Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C15 (substituted by amending Canon No. 4), and PARA 660 ante. Much of the previous case law relating to such matters as the construction of the Thirty-Nine Articles must now be regarded as inapplicable.

1355. Offences relating to ritual and ceremonial.

Statutory provisions respecting ecclesiastical discipline in ritual and ceremonial matters¹ have largely been repealed, but in these matters, as in matters of doctrine, common law offences are still cognisable by the ecclesiastical courts². Any contravention of the law as to conformity of worship³ (for example the use of services not duly authorised by canon) is prima facie an ecclesiastical offence⁴. Illegal ceremonial practices and the introduction or use of illegal ornaments⁵ may likewise constitute ecclesiastical offences⁶.

2 See PARA 1353 ante.

3 See the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canons B1-B5 (amended by Amending Canons Nos. 1, 3), and PARA 934 et seq ante.

4 See PARA 1352 note 2 ante, which applies equally to the offences mentioned in this paragraph.

5 See PARA 953 et seq ante. If, in default of proceedings under the faculty jurisdiction for the removal of an illegal ornament, the bishop at a special visitation orders the removal, the breach of such an order can be punished under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963: see Opinions of the Legal Board (5th Edn 1973) III/47.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(6) DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS/ (ii) Offences Cognisable by the Courts/1356. Offences relating to the conduct of ministers.

1356. Offences relating to the conduct of ministers.

Conduct unbecoming the office and work of a clerk in holy orders is recognised by the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 as an offence against the laws ecclesiastical for which proceedings may be instituted under the Measure¹, but no proceedings for this offence may be taken against any person in respect of his political opinions or activities².

There is no statutory definition of unbecoming conduct for this purpose³, but it would appear to cover any such acts, conduct or habits as would contravene the provisions of the canons as to the manner of life of the clergy⁴. While these provisions are less specific in their terms than those of an earlier period⁵ it is plain that their general intention and effect are similar, namely to proscribe all conduct of a dishonest, immoral or disorderly nature, whether or not it constitutes also a temporal offence. Among acts which have been held to be offences against the laws ecclesiastical are drunkenness⁶, frequenting alehouses and tippling⁷, incontinence⁸, habitual swearing and ribaldry⁹, irreverent language in the pulpit¹⁰, writing a rude letter to a parishioner¹¹ or an obscene letter to an unmarried woman¹², the solicitation of chastity¹³, the collection of alms on false pretences¹⁴, the forgery of orders¹⁵ and cruelty to a servant¹⁶.

If an act or omission is itself an ecclesiastical offence it seems that it should be charged as such and not as unbecoming conduct¹⁷.

2 Ibid s 14 (1) proviso.

3 The corresponding expression in the Incumbents (Discipline) Measure 1947, s 2 (repealed), was 'conduct unbecoming the character of a clerk in holy orders'. This also was undefined.

4 See in particular the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon C26 para 2, and PARA 681 ante. Unbecoming conduct may, however, include conduct proscribed by the general ecclesiastical law apart from the canons: see Bishop of Ely v Close [1913] P 184 at 193.

5 Among the things forbidden to ministers by the Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) were resorting to taverns or alehouses (other than for their honest necessities), drinking or riot, spending their time idly by day or by night, playing at dice, cards or tables or other unlawful games (Canon 75 (repealed)); and offending their brethren by adultery, whoredom, incest, drunkenness, swearing, ribaldry, usury and any other uncleanness and wickedness of life (Canon 109 (repealed)).

1356 Offences relating to the conduct of ministers

TEXT AND NOTES 1, 2--Repealed and replaced: Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 Sch 2. See now 2003 Measure s 8(1); and PARA 1350A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(6) DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS/ (ii) Offences Cognisable by the Courts/1357. Neglect of duty.

1357. Neglect of duty.

Serious, persistent or continuous neglect of duty¹ is expressly recognised by the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 as an offence against the laws ecclesiastical², although no proceedings for this offence may be taken against a person in respect of his political opinions³. The expression 'neglect of duty' is to be interpreted as meaning the failure without due cause to perform an ecclesiastical duty⁴. The definition of the offence suggests that it applies mainly, if not exclusively, to the case of a person who holds ecclesiastical preferment and is thereby responsible for the performance of certain duties. In many instances the neglect alleged would be recognised by the law as constituting a distinct offence in itself, and it seems that in such a case it is preferable (although not essential) that the charge should specify that particular offence rather than the general offence of neglect of duty⁵.

There is a wide range of clerical duties in respect of which culpable neglect may occur⁶, including in particular those associated with the administration of the sacraments and the performance of occasional offices. Thus it is an ecclesiastical offence to refuse to administer the Holy Communion to a confirmed parishioner who is not disqualified from receiving it⁷, or unlawfully to refuse or delay baptism⁸, or unlawfully to refuse burial⁹. So far as marriage is concerned a minister who without just cause refuses to marry persons entitled to be married in his church or chapel commits an ecclesiastical offence¹⁰, and he may be guilty of such an offence if he fails to make due inquiry concerning the parties' residence¹¹ or the existence of impediments¹², or if he unlawfully publishes banns or solemnises marriage between persons neither of whom resides in the parish¹³, or conducts a marriage ceremony in a private house or elsewhere than in a church or chapel except under special licence¹⁴. In such case he may also incur liability under the general marriage law¹⁵.

Other ecclesiastical offences connected with the performance of a minister's ecclesiastical duties are breach of the obligation to read services¹⁶, failure to observe the requirement of residence¹⁷, and failure to attend a visitation¹⁸.

Ministers holding ecclesiastical office are subject to certain restrictions as to their right to engage in trade or any other occupation in such manner as to affect the performance of the duties of their office¹⁹.

The act of refusal to baptise is not a doctrinal offence as such; it is concerned with pastoral work and activity, even though the motive behind the refusal might be partly connected with a doctrinal view held by the minister: Bland v Archdeacon of Cheltenham [1972] Fam 157 at 165, [1972] 1 All ER 1012 at 1017. It is an ecclesiastical offence for a minister to officiate in a diocese against the inhibition or without the licence of the bishop¹ or to officiate in a parish without the incumbent's consent². He also commits such an offence if, not being a bishop, he assumes to exercise the episcopal function of ordination³.

It is an ecclesiastical offence for an overseas clergyman to officiate as priest or deacon in the province of Canterbury or York otherwise than in accordance with a permission granted by the archbishop of the province, and for any clergyman knowingly to allow such an offence to be committed in any church in his charge⁴; and it is such an offence for an overseas bishop to perform any episcopal functions in a diocese in the province of Canterbury or York unless he has the commission of the bishop of that diocese and the consent and licence of the archbishop of the province⁵.

A person who performs in the Church of England any function which, under a censure pronounced upon him by virtue of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, he is disqualified from performing is guilty of an offence under the Measure⁶.

The term 'simony' means primarily the buying and selling of holy orders or of an ecclesiastical benefice or admission to a benefice, but it may extend to other forms of trafficking for money in spiritual things¹. It is an ecclesiastical offence, and may also in some cases be the subject of proceedings in the temporal courts².

It is an ecclesiastical offence to make any alteration (whether by addition, subtraction or otherwise) to the fabric, fittings or ornaments of a church or to a churchyard without a faculty for the purpose¹.

An incumbent who, by bolting and barring the doors of the church, prevents the churchwardens from entering it to keep it cleaned and in order commits an ecclesiastical offence².

(iii) Procedure

1362. Laying of complaint.

Proceedings charging an offence under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963¹ are instituted by way of complaint laid, in the case of an archbishop or a bishop, before the registrar of the relevant province or, in the case of a priest or deacon, before the registrar of the diocese in which he held or holds preferment or in which he resided or resides at the date of the alleged offence or of the complaint². The proceedings may only be instituted by certain specified complainants³. No proceedings may be instituted unless the act or omission constituting the offence, or the last of them if the offence consists of a series, occurred within the three years ending with the day on which the complaint is laid⁴, although if the offence is one of which the accused has been convicted in a secular court the complaint may be laid within six months of the conviction becoming conclusive even if the three year period has elapsed⁵. Within twenty-eight days after laying the complaint the complainant must serve personally on the accused a copy of the complaint and supporting affidavit⁶.

The procedure thereafter depends upon whether the alleged offence involves doctrine, ritual or ceremonial⁷ and, if it does not, upon whether the accused is an archbishop, a bishop, or a priest or deacon⁸. Proceedings for offences not involving doctrine etc.⁹ are tried by a consistory court if the accused is a priest or deacon¹⁰ or by a commission of convocation if the accused is an archbishop or a bishop¹¹. All proceedings for offences involving matters of doctrine etc. are tried by the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved¹².

A priest or deacon against whom proceedings are pending may be inhibited from performing the services of the church¹³.

1 As to ecclesiastical offences, see PARA 1352 et seq ante.

2 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 18 (1). Three copies of the complaint must be lodged by delivering or posting them to the registrar's office: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Discipline) Rules 1964, S.I. 1964 No. 1755, rr 3 (2), 59. The complaint must be in the prescribed form, signed by each complainant, stating his authority or qualification to act as complainant and the offence charged, with particulars of the alleged acts or omissions constituting it, and the complainant's address for service, and must be verified by affidavit (with a copy affidavit) and supported by certificates of the complainant's authority or qualifications unless the registrar dispenses with these certificates: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 18 (2); Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Discipline) Rules 1964, r 3 (2)-(8). For forms, see Appendix, Forms 1-6, and Court Forms. Where a complaint is laid by several persons the service of a document at the address for service specified in the complaint is deemed to be service on all those persons: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Discipline) Rules 1964, r 58 (5). In relation to a complaint 'registrar' means the registrar of a province or diocese before whom the complaint was made, and includes a person appointed to act as deputy registrar: r 2 (1). As to diocesan registrars, see PARA 1281 ante.

3 Thus (1) proceedings against an archbishop may be instituted (a) (save in respect of his duties as diocesan) by not less than two of his comprovincial diocesan bishops, or (b) (save in respect of his duties as metropolitan) by not less than ten persons of whom not less than five are incumbents in his diocese and not less than five are lay members of the diocesan synod;

(2) proceedings against a diocesan bishop may be instituted (a) by an authorised complainant (as defined below), or (b) by the persons described in (1) (b) supra;

(3) proceedings against a suffragan bishop may be instituted (a) by the bishop who commissioned him, (b) by an authorised complainant, (c) by the persons described in (1) (b) supra, or (d) (if he is the incumbent of a parochial benefice) by six or more persons of full age whose names are on the electoral roll of the parish;

(4) proceedings against any other bishop may be instituted (a) by the bishop of the diocese in which he holds preferment or resides, (b) by an authorised complainant, or (c) (if he is the incumbent of a parochial benefice), by the persons described in (3) (d) supra; and

(5) proceedings against a priest or deacon may be instituted (a) by an authorised complainant, (b) (if he is the incumbent of a parochial benefice or a curate in charge of a conventional district) by the persons described in (3) (d) supra, or (c) (if he is a stipendiary curate licensed to a benefice) by the incumbent or the persons described in (3) (d) supra: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, ss 19, 20; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4 (7).

'Authorised complainant' means a person authorised by a bishop to lay a complaint under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, Part III (ss. 18-21), or, in the case of proceedings against a bishop, a person authorised by the provincial archbishop: s 66 (1). Persons may be nominated under ss 25, 33 (7) or 43 to promote a complaint, and have the exclusive right to do so: s 70 (see PARA 1363 post). However, such nomination is made only after the preliminary inquiry into the complaint. As to the position where a clergyman is the incumbent of or licensed to more than one benefice, see s 21 (1) (a), (2). A guild church (see PARA 597 et seq ante) is for the purpose of these provisions deemed to be a parochial benefice: s 21 (1) (b).

5 Ibid s 16 proviso.

6 Ibid s 18 (3); Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Discipline) Rules 1964, r 4 (1), (2). As to personal service and affidavits of service, see r 58 (1), and PARA 1366 post. With the complaint the complainant must serve two forms of statement of the accused's address for service, which the accused must complete and sign, serving one on the complainant and lodging the other with the registrar: r 4 (3).

7 Proceedings under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 for an offence involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial may only be instituted if the offence was committed within the province of Canterbury or York, but this limitation does not apply to other offences: s 15.

8 Proceedings under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 may be instituted against an archbishop, diocesan bishop, suffragan bishop or any other bishop or a priest or deacon who, when the offence was alleged to have been committed or when the complaint is laid, held or holds preferment in any diocese or resided or resides in any diocese: s 17. But see s 83 (3), which provides that (subject to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act 1840, s 29, relating to rectories annexed to canonries of Westminster) nothing in the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 is to authorise proceedings against the holder of an office in a royal peculiar.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(6) DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS/ (iii) Procedure/1363. Interview and inquiry.

1363. Interview and inquiry.

As soon as possible after the laying of the complaint the bishop (where the accused is a priest or deacon) or the archbishop (where the accused is a bishop and the complaint involves matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial) affords the accused and the complainant the opportunity of a private interview, after which he may either (1) decide that no further step be taken in the matter of the complaint¹, in which case he gives notice of his decision to the parties and to the registrar, or (2) refers the complaint for an inquiry and notifies the registrar accordingly². In all other cases the complaint stands referred for an inquiry³.

On the application⁴ of a priest or deacon accused of an offence not involving doctrine etc. the bishop may, after consulting the complainant, pronounce censure on the accused, in which event no further steps may be taken in the matter⁵. Any such censure must be reduced to writing⁶.

Where a complaint is referred, or stands referred, under the foregoing provisions, an inquiry must be held to decide whether the accused has a case to answer⁷. In the case of a complaint against a priest or deacon not involving doctrine, ritual or ceremonial it is conducted by an examiner selected by ballot from a panel appointed by the diocesan synod⁸; in the case of such a complaint against a bishop or archbishop it is conducted by an episcopal committee assisted by a legal assessor⁹; and in the case of any complaint involving doctrine etc. it is conducted by a committee of convocation¹⁰. The parties may be assisted or represented by friends or advisers at any inquiry before an examiner or at any meeting of a committee, at which they are invited to be present¹¹.

Evidence is given by affidavit, but a deponent may, or on the application of either party must, be requested to give oral evidence on oath¹². The complainant must lodge with the registrar the original and copies of his affidavits and copies of a notice of the names of those he intends to call to give oral evidence, and copies must be served personally on the accused¹³, who must then lodge similar documents and serve copies on the complainant¹⁴. No further documents may be laid before the inquiry except with the registrar's leave¹⁵. The registrar must give the parties fourteen days' written notice of the time and place fixed for the inquiry¹⁶.

The examiner or committee has to decide whether there is a case to answer¹⁷. If there is no case to answer the examiner or committee declares the decision and no further steps may be taken¹⁸. If there is a case to answer the examiner or committee must specify the offence¹⁹ and a person must be nominated to promote the complaint²⁰. The committee of convocation inquiring into a complaint involving doctrine etc. may dismiss the complaint²¹ if it is of opinion that the offence charged is too trivial to warrant further proceedings, or that it was committed under extenuating circumstances or that further proceedings would not be in the interests of the Church of England, in which case the committee must report to the relevant convocation²² and no further steps may then be taken²³.

Within twenty-eight days after his nomination¹ the promoter must lodge with the registrar articles² charging the offence or offences³ specified by the examiner or committee, together with his certificate of nomination⁴, and must serve a copy of the articles personally on the accused⁵. The promoter may apply to the examiner or committee, or to the trial court, for leave to include particulars of any offence disclosed by the evidence at the inquiry either in addition to or in substitution for the particulars of the offences found by the examiner or committee⁶.

Within fourteen days after the service of the articles on him the accused may lodge with the registrar an answer⁷ and serve a copy on the complainant⁸. An answer must admit or deny each offence, and may admit or deny, or give the accused's account or explanation of, the matters alleged in the articles to constitute each offence⁹.

Applications to a registrar (unless otherwise provided¹), or to the Dean of the Arches and Auditor or a Commission of Review for leave to withdraw an appeal or amend a notice of appeal or petition for review², must be made in writing and lodged with the registrar, a copy being served on the other side³. If there is also lodged a written consent by the other party or if the registrar is satisfied that the other party does not oppose the application he may grant an application to him without a hearing, but in other cases he must fix a hearing and give both parties notice of it⁴.

Any court or commission established under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 has the same powers as the High Court in relation to the attendance and examination of witnesses and the production and inspection of documents⁵. Either party may apply to the registrar, or to the court at the trial, for an order for the production of documents for inspection or at the trial or for the attendance of a witness at the trial, or the court may make such an order of its own motion⁶. If the trial or appeal court or a Commission of Review has ordered a person's evidence to be given before an examiner either party may apply to the registrar for an order requiring that person to attend before the examiner⁷.

A person required to do some act in disciplinary proceedings within a specified period may apply to the registrar for its enlargement, even if it has expired, or for its abridgment⁸.

Any application may be granted on such terms as the person or body granting it may think just⁹.

1366. Service, time, non-compliance with rules, and forms.

Personal service of a document on a person is effected by leaving a copy of it with him personally, and within three days an affidavit of service must be lodged with the registrar¹. If, however, that person or his solicitor acknowledges the service in writing and a copy of the acknowledgment is lodged with the registrar the document is deemed to have been served personally². The registrar may give leave for substituted service if he is satisfied on written application supported by an affidavit that it is impracticable to serve the document personally, and substituted service will then be deemed to be personal service³. Service of any document not required to be served personally may be effected by leaving it at the proper address⁴ of the person to be served, by sending it there by the recorded delivery service, or in such other manner as the registrar may direct⁵. An affidavit of service must state by whom, when and how the document was served⁶.

Where any act is required by the rules to be done within a specified period after a specified date or event, the period begins immediately after that date or the day on which the event occurred⁷. Where a specified number of days' notice is to be given of any proceeding, or where the time fixed for a proceeding is to be not less than a specified number of days after a specified event, at least that number of days must intervene between the day on which notice is served or, as the case may be, on which the event occurred and the day fixed for the proceeding⁸. However, in calculating any period or number of days not exceeding seven days any Saturday, Sunday or bank holiday⁹, and Christmas Day and Good Friday, must be disregarded¹⁰.

Non-compliance with the rules does not render proceedings void unless the court or commission before whom they are pending¹¹ when the irregularity is discovered so directs, but the proceedings may be set aside, wholly or partly, as irregular or amended or otherwise dealt with in such manner and on such terms as the court thinks fit¹².

Subject to any rule expressly requiring a prescribed form¹³ to be used, the prescribed forms are to be used where applicable and, where they are not applicable, forms of the like character with such variations as circumstances may require are to be used¹⁴.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(6) DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS/ (iii) Procedure/1367. Trial.

1367. Trial.

The trial takes place within twenty-eight days after the lodging of the articles, at a time and place fixed by the judge of the trial court¹. The registrar must give the promoter and the accused not less than fourteen clear days' notice of the hearing². Subject to what follows, the procedure at the trial, so far as circumstances admit, is the same as at the trial of a person by a Crown Court exercising criminal jurisdiction³.

In the case of a complaint against a priest or deacon not involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial the chancellor of the consistory court has the functions at the trial of a judge of the Crown Court exercising criminal jurisdiction⁴. He sits with four assessors chosen by ballot from panels of priests and laymen in equal proportions⁵. The functions of the assessors, who must be unanimous, are the same as those of a jury in the Crown Court⁶. In the case of a complaint involving doctrine etc. The court sits with not less than three nor more than five advisers selected by the Dean of the Arches and Auditor from a panel of eminent theologians and liturgiologists⁷. The determination of any matter before a commission of convocation or the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved is according to the opinion of the majority of its members⁸.

If satisfied that it is in the interests of justice the court may direct any person or class of persons to be excluded during any part of the proceedings⁹. It may, on such terms as it thinks just, allow the promoter to withdraw charges or amend the articles (but not so as to charge a new offence), or the accused to put in or amend his answer¹⁰. If the accused admits an offence or any act or omission alleged the court may treat it as proved and dispense with evidence of it¹¹. The rules as to the admissibility of evidence and as to the competency or compellability of witnesses are the same as those at a criminal trial in the Crown Court¹². Evidence is given orally on oath in open court¹³, but the court or registrar may allow the evidence of a witness who is unable to attend because of illness to be given by deposition taken before an examiner¹⁴.

In the case of a complaint not involving doctrine etc. against a bishop or archbishop the court must reduce its finding to writing, publish it to the accused and such other persons as it thinks ought to have notice of it and send a copy to the relevant or the other archbishop¹⁵. In the case of an accused archbishop the finding is laid before a joint meeting of the Upper Houses of both convocations which must, if the finding is one of guilt, determine the censure to be pronounced by the other archbishop¹⁶. In the case of any other bishop the finding is laid before the Upper House of the relevant convocation which must determine the censure to be pronounced by the relevant archbishop¹⁷. However, no censure may be pronounced until the time for lodging a petition for a Commission of Review¹⁸ has expired or, if a petition has been lodged, the proceedings upon it have been concluded¹⁹. In all other cases if the accused is found guilty²⁰ the court must decide the censure, which must be reduced to writing and pronounced in open court, although it is not invalid merely because it is not pronounced in the accused's presence²¹.

1 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Discipline) Rules 1964, S.I. 1964 No. 1755, rr 14 (1), 25 (1), 36 (1). It may be postponed at the request of the accused or promoter or of the judge's own motion: rr 14 (2), (3), 25 (2), (3), 36 (3), (4). The judge is either the judge of the consistory court, the Dean of the Arches and Auditor or the presiding judge of the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved, depending on the court of trial, as to which see PARAS 1284, 1287, 1290 ante. See also PARA 1363 note 20 ante.

2 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, ss 28 (d), 36 (e), 45 (1) (d). The court may proceed in the accused's absence if satisfied that he was given adequate notice: ss 28 (d), 36 (e), 45 (1) (d).

4 Ibid s 28 (e).

5 Ibid s 30, Sch. 2 paras 5, 6; Synodical Government Measure 1969, s 4 (7): see PARA 1283 ante. The registrar gives the parties not less than seven days' notice of the time appointed for the ballot, which he conducts and at which the parties or their representatives may, if they desire, be present: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, Sch. 2 para 6; Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Discipline) Rules 1964, r 15 (1), (2). The registrar gives the parties notice and informs the judge of the names of the assessors selected (r. 15 (3)), and within seven days of receiving the notice either party may in writing object to an assessor, stating the reasons, whereupon, if the judge approves the reasons, the registrar must try to arrange another ballot (r. 15 (4)) and the assessor objected to is discharged from sitting (Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, Sch. 2 para 7). If by reason of objection, non-attendance or otherwise the necessary number of assessors is not available the judge must, if there is not time for another ballot, appoint some priest or layman willing to serve to whom no party objects for sufficient reason: Sch. 2 para 8.

6 Ibid s 28 (e). For the procedure if they fail to agree, see s 29; Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Discipline) Rules 1964, r 18 (1), (2). The argument that the assessors are not a common jury but a select panel of experienced and intelligent persons is untenable as they have to accept the chancellor's directions on law and are not entitled to form their own conclusions about it: Bland v Archdeacon of Cheltenham [1972] Fam 157 at 163, [1972] 1 All ER 1012 at 1016. The chancellor has a discretion whether to allow an assessor to question the accused; the assessor should normally reduce the question to writing and the chancellor may then put it himself: Bland v Archdeacon of Cheltenham supra at 169 and at 1021.

Either party proposing to apply to the court to exercise any such power must if practicable give written notice to the other party and to the registrar, but the court may exercise the power without notice: rr 16 (2), 26 (2), 37 (2).

11 Ibid rr 16 (4), 26 (4), 37 (4). If no answer has been lodged or put in, or if the answer fails to state or make clear what is admitted or denied the accused is treated as having denied the offence or allegation: rr 16 (5), (6), 26 (5), (6), 37 (5), (6).

Either party may appeal from the decision of a registrar either, on an application made before the conclusion of the inquiry into a complaint, to the examiner or committee, as the case may be, or in any other case to the judge¹, by lodging with the registrar a notice of appeal within seven days after the decision, whereupon the registrar must fix a time and place for hearing the appeal and give both parties not less than three days' written notice of it².

1370. Appeal from consistory court.

Appeal lies from the judgment of a consistory court in proceedings against a priest or deacon for an offence not involving doctrine, ritual or ceremonial to the Arches Court of Canterbury or the Chancery Court of York, depending on the province in which the consistory court is constituted¹, at the instance of any party on a question of law and at the instance of the accused on a question of fact².

Within twenty-eight days after the decision of the consistory court the appellant must lodge with the registrar of the appellate court a notice of appeal stating the grounds of appeal and, if he appeals from only part of the judgment, specifying that part³. The appellate court fixes a time for the hearing and gives not less than fourteen days' notice to both parties⁴.

If the accused appeals on a question of fact the judge's notes and all documents and exhibits used in the consistory court must be available for use at the hearing, and the court may allow or require any shorthand note of the consistory court proceedings to be used⁵. The appellate court may require or allow witnesses who gave evidence for the purposes of the trial to give evidence for the purposes of the appeal either at the hearing or before an examiner, documents or exhibits produced at the trial to be produced at the appeal, and, in exceptional circumstances, new witnesses to give evidence at the hearing or before an examiner or other new evidence to be produced⁶. On an appeal on a question of law the same provisions apply to such extent as the appellate court thinks necessary for the purpose of examining any matters of fact relevant to the determination of that question⁷.

On the appeal the appellate court, by majority opinion of all the judges of the court, determines the questions raised by the appeal, and may thereupon confirm, reverse or vary any finding of the consistory court appealed from, or may remit the case with its determination to the consistory court to take such further proceedings in it as it directs⁸, in which case the judge of the consistory court fixes a time and place for the further proceedings, which continue as at the original trial⁹.

In the case of any complaint other than one against a priest or deacon not involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial¹ the accused may petition the Queen for the review of the finding² on a question of fact or either party may petition the Queen for the review of the finding² on a question of law³. The petition must state the grounds and, where the judgement comprised findings in respect of two or more offences and the petition relates only to one or some of them, must specify the findings concerned⁴.

The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery appoints a registrar of the commission and hands over to him the copies of the petition⁵. Where a question of doctrine is involved the commission requests five persons selected from the panel appointed jointly by the Upper Houses of the convocations⁶ to sit with it as advisers and give it such assistance on the matters of doctrine involved as it may require⁷. The registrar notifies the parties of the names of the members of the commission and of any advisers so selected⁸. The commission fixes a time for the hearing and gives the parties not less than fourteen days' notice of the sittings⁹.

At the hearing of a review on a question of fact or, if the commission thinks it necessary, on a question of law, the judge's notes and the documents and exhibits used in the court below must be available, and the commission may allow or require any shorthand note of the evidence below to be used¹⁰. It may also allow or require evidence to be given before it or before an examiner by witnesses whose evidence was used below, the production of additional documents and exhibits produced at the trial and, in exceptional circumstances, new witnesses to give evidence before it or before an examiner or other new evidence to be produced¹¹.

On the review the commission, whose judgment is that of the majority although each member must state his own opinion¹², must determine the questions raised and may thereupon confirm, reverse or vary the finding or remit the case with its determination for such further proceedings as it may direct¹³, although if the review is of a finding of a commission of convocation the Commission of Review may not make a finding of guilt but must remit the case to the commission of convocation with its determination and directions¹⁴. Where, on a review of a finding of the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved, the Commission of Review confirms, varies or makes a finding of guilt it may vary the censure or impose a censure, but without prejudice to its power to remit the decision as to the censure to the court below¹⁵.

The registrar of the commission must notify the registrar of the court below of the commission's determination or directions and, if the case is remitted, the Dean of the Arches and Auditor or presiding judge of the Court of Ecclesiastical Causes Reserved, as the case may be, must fix a time and place for the remitted proceedings, which continue as at the original trial¹⁶.

must be lodged with the registrar of the court appealed from and a copy must be served on the other party: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 11 (1)-(3); Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Discipline) Rules 1964, r 44 (1), (2). 1372. Censures generally.

The censures which may be pronounced¹ against an accused person found guilty of an offence under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963² are deprivation³, inhibition⁴, suspension⁵, monition⁶ and rebuke⁷. In general only one censure may be imposed in respect of one offence⁸. If the court is satisfied that the offence will not be repeated it is entitled to accept the accused's assurance of future submission and is not bound to pronounce a censure⁹. Normally, however, it is to be expected that a finding of guilt will be followed by the pronouncement of a censure, although the court has, generally speaking, and in the absence of express enactment on the subject, a discretion as to its leniency or severity¹⁰. In determining the appropriate censure the court acts in a judicial, not a pastoral, capacity, and the paramount consideration is the gravity of the offence and not the well-being of the parish as a whole, although if an offence merits a particular censure the judge, in deciding whether to pronounce it, may take into consideration all relevant considerations including the interests of the parish¹¹.

A censure of deprivation may be followed by the extra-judicial act of deposition from holy orders¹². Excommunication, although perhaps a remote possibility today, may also, it seems, be imposed extra-judicially¹³. Sequestration¹⁴ and the penalties and forfeitures which may be incurred under the Pluralities Act 1838¹⁵ are, in general, the subject of civil proceedings.

It is an offence under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 for any person to perform in the Church of England any function which, by virtue of a censure under that Measure, he is disqualified from performing¹⁶.

1373. Deprivation for ecclesiastical offence.

A censure of deprivation is the removal of a person from any preferment¹ which he holds and disqualification from holding any or any other preferment in the future except as stated below². No censure of deprivation on any archbishop or bishop or on any person in respect of any preferment the right to appoint to which is vested in the Queen (not being a parochial benefice) has effect unless and until confirmed by the Queen by Order in Council³. Where by virtue of any censure of deprivation a bishop, priest or deacon is disqualified from holding any preferment the disqualification does not extend to a preferment to which a diocesan bishop, with the relevant archbishop's consent and, in the case of a priest or deacon, the consent of the bishop of the diocese in which the proceedings were instituted, may appoint him, and ceases upon any such appointment if the archbishop when consenting to it so directs⁴. The censure of deprivation cannot be imposed for an offence involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial unless the court is satisfied that the accused has already been admonished on a previous occasion in respect of another offence of the same or substantially the same nature⁵. Censure of deprivation should not be pronounced unless it is merited by the gravity of the offence or of the totality of the offences concerned; it is not an appropriate remedy merely because it is desirable to part an incumbent from his parish and there is no other administrative method of doing so⁶. Deprivation may be followed by deposition from holy orders⁷. The incapacities of a deprived clergyman cease if he receives a free pardon from the Crown, and he will be restored to any preferment he previously held if it has not in the meantime been filled⁸.

1373 Deprivation for ecclesiastical offence

TEXT AND NOTE 5--1963 Measure s 49(3) amended so as to refer solely to proceedings under that Measure: Clergy Discipline Measure 2003 Sch 1 para 7. As to penalties and proceedings for misconduct see PARA 1350A et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/8. ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION/(6) DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS/(v) Censures and other Penalties/1374. Deprivation following secular proceedings.

1374. Deprivation following secular proceedings.

A priest or deacon or a bishop¹ or archbishop is liable to deprivation² if:

- 54 (1) he is convicted of an offence and a sentence of imprisonment (whether suspended³ or not) is passed on him⁴; or
- 55 (2) he has a decree of divorce or judicial separation granted against him and the court granting the decree held that the fact on which his wife was entitled to rely was adultery⁵, behaviour such that she could not reasonably be expected to live with him⁶ or desertion⁷ and, in the case of divorce, the decree has been made absolute⁸; or
- 56 (3) he is found to have committed adultery in a matrimonial cause⁹; or
- 57 (4) he has an affiliation order¹⁰ made against him¹¹; or
- 58 (5) he has a matrimonial order¹² made against him by a magistrates' court¹³; or
- 59 (6) he has an order made against him¹⁴ on the ground of his wilful neglect to maintain his wife or a child of the family¹⁵.

The court in which the conviction, decree, finding or order was had or made must cause a certificate of the conviction, decree, finding or order, signed by the registrar, clerk or other proper officer of the court, to be sent to the bishop of the diocese in which it sits, and it must be preserved in the registry of that diocese or of any other diocese to which it is sent by the bishop's direction¹⁶. The certificate is conclusive proof in an ecclesiastical court that the person to whom it relates has committed the act specified in it¹⁷.

A priest or deacon against whom such a conviction, decree, finding or order is had or made is liable without further trial to deprivation, as from the date when it becomes conclusive¹⁸, of any preferment¹⁹ he then holds and, whether or not he holds preferment, disqualification from holding preferment, although this is subject to the bishop's power²⁰ to appoint him to one²¹. Within twenty-eight days after the date on which the conviction etc. becomes conclusive the bishop of the relevant diocese²² must refer the case to the relevant archbishop with his own recommendation as to the action to be taken and send him a copy of any written representations the priest or deacon has made to him²³. Within two months after that date the archbishop must make a declaration of deprivation and disqualification unless, on considering all the circumstances including the bishop's recommendation and any representations sent to him, he determines that no such declaration is to be made, in which case he must inform the bishop and the priest or deacon accordingly²⁴. Such a declaration is made either by the archbishop personally or by the bishop or his commissary, and before making it the archbishop or bishop must require the provincial or, as the case may be, diocesan registrar to give the priest or deacon, if practicable, not less than fourteen days' notice of the time and place where it will be made so that he can be present if he wishes²⁵. When the declaration is made the archbishop or bishop must be attended by the relevant registrar, and the declaration must be reduced to writing and a copy filed in the registry of the relevant diocese²⁶.

A bishop or archbishop against whom such a conviction, decree, finding or order is had or made is similarly liable to deprivation and disqualification²⁷. Within two months after the sentence etc. becomes conclusive a declaration must be made accordingly in the case of a bishop) by the relevant archbishop²⁸ or (in the case of an archbishop) by the other archbishop unless, on consideration of all the circumstances including any written representations made to him by the bishop or archbishop concerned, he determines not to make such a declaration, in which case he must inform the bishop or archbishop concerned accordingly²⁹. Before making such a declaration the archbishop must require his provincial registrar to give the bishop or archbishop concerned, if practicable, not less than fourteen days' notice of the time and place when it will be made so that he can be present if he wishes³⁰. When the declaration is made the archbishop must be attended by his provincial registrar, and the declaration must be reduced to writing and filed in his provincial registry³¹.

Where such a declaration of deprivation or of disqualification is made against a priest or deacon, bishop or archbishop, it takes effect subject to the provisions of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 relating to censures³², and the like consequences ensue in all respects as if he had been found guilty of an offence under the Measure and such a censure had been pronounced against him³³. In particular, upon a declaration of deprivation being made he is liable to be deposed from holy orders³⁴.

1 'Bishop' means a diocesan bishop, a suffragan bishop commissioned by a diocesan bishop and any other bishop: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 56 (5); Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Amendment) Measure 1974, s 1.

2 Where immediately before 9th July 1974 a person was liable to have a declaration of deprivation and disqualification made against him under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 55 or s 56, as originally enacted (and not in the substituted form in which those provisions are covered in this paragraph) those provisions continue to apply to that person in their original form: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Amendment) Measure 1974, s 2 (5).

3 'Suspended sentence' is defined as a sentence to which an order under the Criminal Justice Act 1967, s 39 (1), relates: Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 55 (7); Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Amendment) Measure 1974, s 1. The Criminal Justice Act 1967, s 39 (1), was repealed by the Powers of Criminal Courts Act 1973, s 56 (2), Sch. 6, and replaced by s 22 (1) as from a date a few days before the commencement of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction (Amendment) Measure 1974, s 1: Powers of Criminal Courts Act 1973 (Commencement No. 1) Order 1974, S.I. 1974 No. 941. See, however, the Interpretation Act 1889, s 38; Interpretation Measure 1925, s 1, the effect of which is that 'suspended sentence' means a sentence to which an order under the Powers of Criminal Courts Act 1973, s 22 (1), relates.

When a censure of deprivation¹ is pronounced on any priest or deacon his diocesan bishop may be sentence without any further legal proceedings depose him from holy orders², although before doing so he must serve on the priest or deacon and on the relevant provincial registrar notice of his intention to do so and the priest or deacon may then within one month appeal to the relevant archbishop³. When a censure of deprivation is pronounced in pursuance of proceedings under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963 on an archbishop or bishop the Upper House of the relevant convocation may by resolution depose him from holy orders⁴, but must first notify him, consider any written representation he may make and afford him an opportunity of being heard before it personally⁵.

The effect of the deposition is the same as if, more than six months before the day on which the disqualification takes effect, he had executed a deed of relinquishment under the Clerical Disabilities Act 1870⁶ which the bishop had on that day caused to be registered in the diocesan registry⁷. The incapacities of a deposed clergyman cease, however, if he receives a free pardon from the Crown, and he will be restored to any preferment he previously held if it has not in the meantime been filled⁸.

A censure of inhibition is the disqualification of a clergyman for a specified time from exercising the functions of his order¹. Such a censure may be pronounced in respect of the same offence as that for which a censure of suspension is pronounced and for the same period². It may not be imposed in respect of an offence involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial unless the court is satisfied that the accused has already been admonished on a previous occasion in respect of another offence of the same or substantially the same nature³.

A censure of suspension is disqualification of a person for a specified time from exercising or performing without the bishop's leave any right or duty of or incidental to his preferment¹ or from residing in the house of residence of his preferment or within such distance of it as is specified in the censure². It may not be imposed in respect of an offence involving matter of doctrine, ritual or ceremonial unless the court is satisfied that the accused has already been admonished on a previous occasion in respect of another offence of the same or substantially the same nature³.

Where an archbishop is suspended or inhibited by censure the functions which he is thereby unable to perform must be performed by the other archbishop¹, and where a diocesan or suffragan bishop is suspended or inhibited by censure the relevant archbishops or, as the case may be, diocesan bishop may appoint another bishop to perform his functions².

Where a priest or deacon is suspended or inhibited by censure the bishop in whose diocese the priest or deacon holds preferment may appoint some person or persons to perform the duties of the preferment, and may assign such part of the net stipend of the benefice as he thinks fit and may, if necessary, sequester the profits of the benefice for the payment of the stipend so assigned³. He may require the person so appointed to reside in the parsonage house belonging to the benefice, and may assign to him the use of the whole or any part of that house and its offices, gardens and appurtenances without payment of any rent⁴. A person so residing in the parsonage house is liable to pay the rates payable in respect of the house, and any sequestrator appointed during the suspension or inhibition has power to deduct from that person's stipend any payments for which he is so liable⁵.

Where a person is suspended or inhibited by censure from discharging all or any of the duties attached to any office held by him he must not interfere with any person appointed to discharge any of those duties¹, he must not reside in or occupy any house of residence belonging to his office unless, in the case of an incumbent of a parochial benefice, the bishop for special reasons permits him to do so², and he will not be liable under any penalty or forfeiture for non-residence³. Subject to the bishop's directions any such incumbent is not to receive any part of the income of the benefice while he remains resident within ten miles from the parish or other principal church of the parish or other area in which he had the cure of souls prior to the inhibition⁴.

A person suspended or inhibited by censure is not to be re-admitted to his benefice or permitted to exercise the functions of his order unless he satisfies the bishop (or, if the person censured is a bishop, the Upper House of the relevant convocation) of his good conduct during the term of his suspension or inhibition⁵.

A censure of monition is an order to do or refrain from doing a specified act¹ the omission or commission of which constitutes an ecclesiastical offence or to rectify some previous act the commission of which was an ecclesiastical offence, and is usually accompanied by an order for costs against the accused². It may prohibit not merely the continuance or repetition of the same act but also the commission of acts of the same or a similar nature³.

2 3 Burn's Ecclesiastical Law (4th Edn) 191. Monition is described in the books as of a preparatory nature, that is to say as a warning or command to be followed in case of disobedience by some coercive sanction. It appears to have been a general, though not an invariable, rule of the canon law that monition ought to precede suspension or excommunication. It may be, and in practice it often is, issued for various purposes at the beginning or during the progress of an ecclesiastical cause; and it may be, and sometimes is, the sentence or part of a sentence upon the merits pronounced at the end of the cause: 1 Oughton's Ordo Judiciorum 137, observat. 3; Gib Cod 1046, 1048; Mackonochie v Lord Penzance (1881) 6 App Cas 424 at 433, HL, per Lord Selborne LC; Enraght v Lord Penzance (1882) 7 App Cas 240 at 247, HL, per Lord Blackburn. The ecclesiastical courts being organs of the church for enforcing discipline, the power to make orders to do or abstain from doing something ascertained respectively to be right or wrong is part of their very essence; and without such power their use in many cases would be gone: Martin v Mackonochie (1879) 4 QBD 697 at 770, CA, per Lord Coleridge CJ. The censure of rebuke is the least severe censure which may be imposed for an offence under the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963¹. 1384. Excommunication.

An ecclesiastical court formerly had power to pronounce sentence of excommunication for an offence of ecclesiastical cognisance¹, but is no longer among the censures which can pronounced by such a court². It seems, however, that the possibility of an extra-judicial declaration that a person is excommunicate is not excluded³ and this would presumably, in the absence of reconciliation, disqualify him for any office in the Church for which communicant status is a legal requirement⁴.

1 Kemp v Wickes (1809) 3 Phillim 264 at 271, 272, per Sir John Nicholl. A person excommunicate was subject to temporal penalties, including imprisonment and, until the Ecclesiastical Courts Act 1813, deprivation of certain civil rights, including the right to make a will or to bring certain action in the civil courts: see the Report of the Archbishops' Commission on Ecclesiastical Courts (SPCK 1954) 19, 20.

Under the old procedure the bishop signified the excommunication by issuing a significant, whereupon the civil courts issued a writ de excommunicato capiendo to the sheriff. After the Act of 1813 a person who refused to obey an ecclesiastical court was not excommunicated but his contumacy was signified to the civil courts who imprisoned him by a writ de contumace capiendo. Old enactments permitting excommunication have all been repealed; these included the Brawling Act 1551, s 2; Ecclesiastical Courts Act 1813, ss 2, 3; Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 2-12, 139-141.

2 Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 49. See also s 82 (4), which provides that no person shall be libel to suffer imprisonment in consequence of being excommunicated.

3 See the Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon B38 para 2 (amended by Amending Canon No. 3), which allows a minister to refuse burial according to the rites of the Church of England where the deceased has been declared excommunicate for some grievous or notorious crime and there is no evidence of his repentance (see PARA 1041 ante); and Canon B16 para 1, whereby notorious offenders are not be admitted to Holy Communion: see the Book of Communion; Prayer Book (Miscellaneous Provisions) Measure 1965, s 3 (1) (repealed); Church of England (Worship and Doctrine) Measure 1974, Sch. 3 para 4; and PARA 978 ante. The wording of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Measure 1963, s 82 (4), leaves open the possibility of such extra-judicial 'lesser excommunication'. See also Articles of Religion 33, which declares that 'that person which by open denunciation of the Church is rightly cut off from the unity of the Church, and excommunicated, ought to be taken ... as an Heathen and Publican, until he be openly reconciled by penance, and received into the Church by a Judge that hath authority thereunto'; and see Matt. 18: 15-17.

4 Consider eg the case of eligibility as a representative of the laity on the parochial church council or on any of the various synods: see the Church Representation Rules, rr 9 (1) (b), 25 (3), 31 (1), contained in the Synodical Government Measure 1969, Sch. 3 (amended by S.I. 1973 No. 1865), and PARAS 420, 510, 529 ante.

9. RELIGIOUS BODIES OTHER THAN THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

Co-operation between the Church of England and other churches

The Church of England (Ecumenical Relations) Measure 1988 makes provision for local co-operation between the Church of England and other designated churches. Such co-operation may take the form of joint worship, the use by other churches of Church of England places of worship for the conduct of worship and participation in local ecumenical projects. See further PARA 1186A.

(1) INTRODUCTION

1386. Recognition by the state.

All religious bodies enjoy the same general recognition by law¹, strengthened in the single case of the Church of England by the circumstances of its connection with the state, and modified in the case of other religious bodies by such special enactments as survive to mark in each case the history of its evolution.

In the following paragraphs are examined the distinctive marks which attend the recognition of certain religious bodies, all of which have in common the fact that they are not connected with the state.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/9. RELIGIOUS BODIES OTHER THAN THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/ (1) INTRODUCTION/1387. Terminology.

1387. Terminology.

The religious bodies with which this part of the title is concerned have commonly been known as nonconformist or dissenting bodies, terms which have their origin in the Acts of Uniformity¹, refusal to comply with which rendered the person so refusing liable to penalties. Those who refused to go to church and worship after the manner of the Church of England were classified as recusants². This terminology has, however, been rendered obsolete³, and there is now no convenient general term embracing all those who belong to religious bodies outside the established Church, the word 'nonconformist' being usually employed to signify protestants who dissent from the government and ritual of the Church of England⁴.

The religious bodies which are considered in this part of the title are Roman Catholics⁵, protestant Nonconformists⁶, Friends⁷, Unitarians⁸ and Jews⁹ and others¹⁰. There is also mention of those of no faith¹¹.

1 See especially the Act of Uniformity 1662. Historically protestants should be described as non-conformists and Roman Catholics as dissenters, but there is inconsistency of usage; thus the Roman Catholic Charities Act 1832, s 1, refers to 'protestant dissenters'.

2 Canons Ecclesiastical (1603) 65 (revoked). The term was later applied mainly to Roman Catholics. The duty is placed upon the Church of England clergy and people to do their utmost to avoid occasions of strife and to seek in penitence and brotherly charity to heal divisions among Christians which impair unity in the Church of Christ and grievously hinder witness to the Gospel: Revised Canons Ecclesiastical, Canon A8. See also the Book of Common Prayer, prayer for unity at the end of the Accession Service.

3 Ie by the passing of the Toleration Act 1688 (repealed) and the Roman Catholic relief Act 1829 (repealed in part).

4 In England the protestant nonconformist churches are now generally described as the 'Free Churches', although in Scotland the term has a special connotation.

The British Council of Churches, formed in 1942, is a fellowship of Christian churches in the British Isles, and is an associated national council of churches of the World Council of Churches. Its members include the Church of England and most of the Christian denominations which are located or represented in Great Britain, among them being the Greek Orthodox Church; and the Roman Catholic Church sends observers to the council: see the Church of England Year Book 1975, pp. 245-248.

(2) ROMAN CATHOLICS

1388. Distinctive features of Roman Catholicism.

The distinctive marks of the religious body known as Roman Catholics¹ have their origin in two facts, namely that that body, as distinct from protestant nonconforming religious bodies, has its central authority outside England and drives the whole of its system of organisation from abroad; and that at earlier periods in English history the Church of England was within that system of organisation, and that jurisdiction was claimed and from time to time exercised over it by that central authority².

A long series of statutes passed in the centuries succeeding the disruption of the ties between the Church of England and the see of Rome has, in spite of numerous repeals, left many traces of the conflict, and hence the law as it affects the Roman Catholic Church in England consists not only of provisions affecting the members of that body or even the whole body of its members in this country, but also of provisions which are directed to limiting or excluding the exercise of the powers of the see of Rome within the realm³.

1 See generally CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS.

2 Cf. para 304 et seq ante.

1389. Exclusion from throne and certain offices.

No Roman Catholic may occupy the throne, for any person who is either in communion with the Church of Rome or marries a person in such communion is expressly excluded from the succession¹.

A Roman Catholic may hold the office of Lord Chancellor² and provision may then be made by the Queen in Council for the exercise of any or all the visitational or ecclesiastical functions normally performed by him and any patronage to livings normally in his gift to be performed by the Prime Minister or any other minister of the Crown³.

1390. Status of Roman Catholic.

A Roman Catholic in his capacity of a private citizen is on an equal footing with all other subjects of the Crown, earlier disabilities having been removed by statute. Thus no special oaths are required from him, and those generally prescribed, namely the oath of allegiance and official and judicial oaths¹, are not of such a nature as to offend his conscience. There is no bar to his holding real or personal property², or exercising the parliamentary vote³, and, if a layman⁵ and otherwise qualified, he is eligible for a seat in the House of Common, and if elected may sit and vote there⁶. He may hold civil and military posts under the Crown⁷, and be a member of or hold office under any lay corporation⁸.

1394. Church patronage.

A Roman Catholic may own the advowson and be the legal patron of a benefice in the Church of England, and (subject to the general law¹) may buy or sell such an advowson, but he may not exercise the right of presentation himself² or by the agency of another³, and if he attempts to do so the presentation is void⁴. Where a Roman Catholic as a private person is the legal patron of a benefice, the right of presentation is vested in the University of Oxford or the University of Cambridge, according to the county in which the benefice is situated⁵. If he is the holder of an office under the Crown to which there attaches a right of presentation to benefices, the right of presentation is exercised by the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being⁶. For a Roman Catholic to advise the Crown as to an appointment to any office or preferment in the Church of England is a high misdemeanour and disables the offender from ever holding any office, civil or military, under the Crown⁷. If he is a member of any lay corporation he may not vote at or in any way join in the election, presentation or appointment of any person to a benefice, or any office or place belonging to or in connection with the Church of England, which is in the gift, patronage or disposal of the corporation⁸. A Roman Catholic, or a trustee or mortgagee for or under him, cannot make a valid grant of an advowson or right of patronage except in good faith for a full and valuable consideration to some protestant purchaser or purchasers for the benefit only of a protestant or protestants; nor can a Roman Catholic devise an advowson or right of patronage with intent to secure its benefit to his family⁹.

Strictly speaking, and subject to certain exceptions¹, a Roman Catholic could be a churchwarden if the Anglican bishop waived the requirement that the person appointed be an actual communicant member of the Church of England², but if the Roman Catholic has conscientious scruples as to acting as such, he might appoint a deputy³. A Roman Catholic in holy orders is exempted from serving in any parochial or ward office, or in any office in any hundred of any shire, city, town, parish, division or wapentake¹. He is also ineligible for jury service². Roman Catholic clergy, though disabled from sitting in the House of Commons³, may, if otherwise qualified, sit in the House of Lords.

They are required to register themselves, with their description as priest or minister, with the clerk of the local authority of any place where they intend to perform any ecclesiastical function⁴, and they are protected from molestation while conducting a religious service in any place of public worship where they are authorised to preach or in a burial ground⁵.

The recognition of the Roman Catholic Church as a religious body does not involve any recognition of the hierarchy¹ under which it is organised, except upon the basis of consent.

Ecclesiastical titles of honour or dignity can only be validly created, or any preeminence or coercive power conferred upon the holder, by the Sovereign², and it is an offence for any person not authorised by law to assume or use the name, style or title of archbishop of any province, bishop of any bishopric or dean of any deanery³, although where the title is not already legally appropriated⁴ on behalf of the Church of England, the law (on the ground of expediency) does not impose penalties upon those ministers of religion who may, as among the members of their own religious body, be designated by titles of distinction connected with some place within the realm⁵. A bishop or other dignitary of the Roman Catholic Church is not a corporation⁶.

1 The Roman Catholic hierarchy was re-established in England in the year 1850. In the following year a statute was passed declaring the assumption of titles connected with places in the realm illegal, and imposing heavy penalties on the persons assuming them: 14 & 15 Vict. c. 60 (Ecclesiastical Titles) (1851). This Act was, however, repealed by the Ecclesiastical Titles Act 1871, s 1.

2 Ibid preamble.

3 Roman Catholic Relief Act 1829, s 24. The penalty which may be imposed is £100, recoverable by information of the Attorney General: s 38.

4 While the enactment referred to in note 3 supra, could be made susceptible of an intention to include all titles whenever subsequently appropriated, the presence in the preamble of the section of the words 'and whereas the right and title of the archbishops to their respective provinces, of bishops to their sees, and of deans to their deaneries, have been settled and established by law', the more natural interpretation is to confine its effect to those titles already appropriated in the year (1829) when the Act was passed.

1401. Emancipation of protestant nonconformists.

Historical events which from their cause and circumstances could not afford relief to Roman Catholics, for the very same reason brought relief to the various bodies of protestant nonconformists. Their emancipation began, therefore, at a much earlier date than did that of Roman Catholics, The Toleration Act 1688 relieved all protestant nonconformists who took the oaths and made the declaration prescribed by that Act from prosecution in any ecclesiastical court by reason of their refusing to worship according to the forms of the Church of England¹. So far as such oaths are concerned, the Toleration Act is repealed and replaced by the Promissory Oaths Acts², which apply to all classes of Her Majesty's subjects.

Protestant nonconformist laymen are today under no personal disabilities whatever. They may occupy any post under the Crown³, whether civil or military, and may, if otherwise qualified, sit in either House of Parliament. They may be members of or hold office under any corporation or local authority. They may be patrons of and present to benefices in the Church of England and, if the bishop waives the requirement that the person appointed be an actual communicant member of the Church of England⁴, might be appointed churchwardens.

Protestant nonconformist ministers¹ enjoy the same civil rights as laymen, although until recently they were permitted to preach and teach in certified places of worship and to enjoy certain exemptions only if they had made a prescribed declaration of protestant faith before a justice of the peace². They are ineligible for jury service³. They are protected from molestation or obstruction while conducting a religious service either in a place of public worship or a burial ground⁴. It is an offence for anyone to teach or preach in a congregation or assembly in any place without the consent of the occupier of the premises⁵, or in any place with the doors locked, bolted, barred or fastened so as to prevent anyone entering⁶, except a private dwelling house or the premises belonging to it⁷, or a place not usually appropriated to purposes of public worship⁸.

1 The mode of address commonly adopted by a nonconformist minister, namely, 'the Reverend...' is legally unimpeachable. 'Reverend' is not a title of honour of dignity appropriate only to those in holy orders of the Church of England, but an epithet, an adjective used as a laudatory or complimentary epithet, a mark of respect and of reverence, as the name imports, but nothing more: Keet v Smith (1876) 1 PD 73 at 79, PC.

2 Places of Religious Worship Act 1812, s 5 (under which it was an offence to preach etc. without having made the declaration); Toleration Act 1688, s 8 (repealed) under which the making of the declaration conferred exemption from jury service or appointment as churchwarden or from certain other offices). The declaration was prescribed by the Nonconformist Relief Act 1779, s 1 (repealed). No person could be required to go more than five miles to make the declaration (Places of Religious Worship Act 1812, s 6), and any person could require a justice of the peace to tender the declaration (s. 7; Courts Act 1971, s 56 (4), Sch. 11, Part IV). A justice tendering the declaration had to give a certificate of the making of the declaration (Places of Religious Worship Act 1812, s 8). The making of the declaration had been obsolete long before the repeal of the Nonconformist Relief Act 1779 by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1969.

1405. Appointment of nonconformist ministers.

The appointment or election of a protestant nonconformist minister to a particular pastorate and his tenure of it are dependent upon the terms of the trust, if any, by which it is maintained¹. If there is no trust deed, or if the trust deed is silent upon these matters, they are to be decided by the usage of the religious body to which the congregation adheres². There must, where necessary, be an inquiry into what that usage is³, although the court will not necessarily be governed by usage⁴. If upon inquiry there appears to be a divergence between the doctrines professed by the founders of the pastorate and those of the subsisting trustees, the court will decide in favour of the course which will give effect to the founders' intentions⁵.

Where the appointment is vested in trustees an election by the majority of them⁶ or by a majority of the survivors⁷ is valid. Nevertheless a succession of trustees of the same persuasion as the original trustees, the duties of the office do not devolve upon the last survivor's personal representative but, if there is no provision for the creation of fresh trustees, inquiry must be held as to the proper mode of appointing them⁸.

Where the pastorate is supported entirely by voluntary contributions, the right of appointing a minister, where there is no provision to the contrary, is in the congregation⁹. In such a case the minister will be elected by the majority of the congregation¹⁰, and if there is a doubt as to what persons are entitled to participate in the election as members of the congregation reference must be made to the facts of the particular case, including any rules of the religious body concerned¹¹.

The mode of election, where merely customary and not prescribed, may be altered if the alternation is agreed to by all the candidates and approved by a resolution passed at a public meeting of those entitled to vote¹². Where the congregation is entitled to elect, an election of a minister is invalid if due notice of the meeting to elect is not given, or if the electors are not confined to members of the congregation¹³.

The eligibility of a particular candidate for any particular pastorate is determined upon general principles by reference to the terms of the trust under which it was created, and by his acceptance of the formularies of the religious body to which it is attached¹.

Where membership of or communion with a specified religious body is a condition precedent to the holding of the pastor's office, one who by his opinions or actions disavows such membership or communion is absolutely disqualified², and if already in office will be removed³. 1407. Validity of election.

The usual method for determining the validity of an election to an office of a public character is an application for an order of mandamus¹, and where there are not sufficient grounds to justify the making of that order, the court may entertain a suit to establish the right to elect². Pending a decision as to the validity of his appointment a minister will in general be permitted to officiate, and is entitled to be paid his salary while he continues to do so³. If, however, he is not acting properly, he will be restrained from officiating at all⁴.

1408. Tenure of office and buildings.

In the absence of a special usage or agreement between the parties a nonconformist minister, unlike a beneficed Church of England clergyman, holds his pastorate at the will of the persons who appointed him¹, whether they are the trustees in whom the building in which he officiates is vested², or the congregation who worship there³, or both⁴. On the other hand he may under the provisions of the trust deed⁵ or, in the absence of express provision, according to usage⁶ be appointed for limited periods⁷; or he may hold an appointment for life⁷, which, however, is terminable for misconduct⁸. In the absence of such a provision, and subject to any relevant statutory protection, his tenure of the chapel or minister's dwelling house may be terminated on demand⁹, and he is not entitled to notice or time in which to remove his goods¹⁰. A resolution calling upon a minister to resign, duly passed by the persons entitled to pass it, is equivalent to dismissal¹¹. Where there is an agreement between a minister and a body of trustees for the payment of a salary out of trust funds, however, and the arrangement amounts to a trust for the minister's benefit, the court will inquire into the administration of the trust, and if the minister has been dismissed upon insufficient grounds will declare the dismissal void¹². In the absence of any usage or agreement it is not necessary upon dismissing a minister that any grounds of misconduct should be alleged¹³, but if such allegations are made notice should be given to the minister, and he should be allowed an opportunity of meeting them¹⁴.

Where the constitution of the religious body to which the pastorate is attached provides for a procedure for the dismissal of a minister, that procedure must be followed¹. Where a minister has been dismissed and desires to contest the validity of his dismissal, the proper remedy is an action to recover the profits of office². A mandamus to restore him will not be granted except upon clear prima facie evidence of his right³. 1410. Registration of places of worship.

Places of meeting used by protestant nonconformists for religious worship may be registered as such¹.

Certificates of registration are to be delivered in duplicate to the superintendent registrar of births, deaths and marriages in the district in which the meeting place is situated, and must be forwarded by him to the Registrar General for England and Wales², by whom a list (which is open to public inspection) of certified places of religious worship must from time to time be made out³, and who must return one copy to the superintendent registrar, to be redelivered by him to the certifying party⁴. A fee of £1 is payable to the superintendent registrar when the certificate is delivered to him⁵. Upon payment of a similar fee to the Registrar General a sealed or stamped certificate of registration may be obtained, which is available in evidence at any proceedings⁶. Notice of the discontinuance of the use of any place for religious worship is to be given⁷, whereupon the registrar must cancel the record of certification and publicly advertise the cancellation⁸.

1411. Effects and advantages of registration.

Registration is not compulsory¹, but worship by more than twenty persons² in a building without registration, except in the case of a congregation or assembly for religious worship either (1) meeting in a private dwelling house or on the premises belonging to it³; or (2) meeting occasionally in a building or buildings not usually appropriated to purposes of religious worship⁴, renders the occupier of the building, if it is used for such purposes with his consent, liable to penalties⁵.

Registration is attended by certain advantages⁶. A registered building, together with connected land and buildings⁷, is excepted from registration under the Charities Act 1960⁸. It may be registered for the solemnisation of marriages⁹. Every marriage solemnised in a building so registered must be registered immediately after solemnisation either by a registrar of marriages, if present¹⁰, or by an authorised person if the registrar is not present¹¹.

A registered building is not liable to be rated. Under the old law it was necessary for a place to be exclusively appropriated to public religious worship¹², but the modern law lays down no such limitation¹³.

A building certified under the forgoing provisions as a place of meeting for religious worship on behalf of one of the churches which were united to form the United Reformed Church is deemed to be so certified on behalf of a congregation or assembly of persons of the United Reformed Church¹⁴.

1 The preamble (now repealed) to the Places of Worship Registration Act 1855 stated that it was expedient that all places of religious worship other than churches and chapels of the Church of England should, if the congregation so desired, but not otherwise, be certified to the Registrar General, and ss 2 and 4 are merely permissive.

Halsbury's Laws of England/ECCLESIASTICAL LAW (VOLUME 14)/9. RELIGIOUS BODIES OTHER THAN THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND/(3) PROTESTANT NONCONFORMISTS/(iii) Places of Worship/1412. Marriages in shared church buildings.

1412. Marriages in shared church buildings.

A church building¹ to which a sharing agreement² relates may be certified under the Places of Worship Registration Act 1855 as a place of religious worship of any church sharing the building other than the Church of England, and the provisions of the Marriage Act 1949 relating to the registration of buildings³ apply subject to specified modifications⁴ for and in relation to the registration of any such certified church building⁵.

A church building shared by the Church of England under a sharing agreement may be used for the publication of banns and the solemnisation of marriages according to the rites of the Church of England⁶. The rule that a superintendent registrar's licence may not be issued for a marriage in a church or chapel in which marriages may be solemnised according to those rites, or in one belonging to that Church or licensed for the celebration of divine worship according to its rites and ceremonies⁷, applies to a church building to which a sharing agreement relates, in respect of marriages solemnised according to the rites of that Church but not otherwise⁸.

Similar provision is made in the case of chapels of cathedrals⁹, universities, colleges, schools, hospitals and other public or charitable institutions or buildings held on trust for the purposes of public worship (but not a church building to which a sharing agreement relates) which are used for the purposes of public worship in accordance with the forms of service and practice of two or more churches but which are not the subjects of sharing agreements¹⁰.

1 For the meaning of 'church building', see PARA 1186 note 2 ante.

2 As to sharing agreements, see PARA 1186 ante.

3 See the Marriage Act 1949, s 41 para 1411 ante, and MATRIMONIAL AND CIVIL PARTNERSHIP LAW vol 72 (2009) PARA 186 et seq.

4 Thus the building may be registered notwithstanding that it is not a separate building or deemed to be a separate building within the meaning of ibid s 41: Sharing of Church Building Act 1969, s 6 (1), Sch. 1 para 1. The application for registration is to be made by a representative of a sharing church other than the Church of England and, if there are two or more such churches, the registration is deemed to have been made on behalf of the congregations of all of them whether or not their representatives applied: Sch. 1 para 2. 'Representative' of a sharing church means, if the building is jointly owned, a trustee representing that church, and, in any other case, a party to the sharing agreement on behalf of that church: Sch. 1 para 9. The registration is not cancelled by the withdrawal of a church other than the Church of England from the sharing if another such church continues to use the building: Sch. 1 para 3.

The authorisation and certification of a person to be present at marriages is effected by a representative of a sharing church other than the Church of England, and different persons may be authorised for different such sharing churches, although each authorised person is authorised in respect of any marriages in the shared building: Sch. 1 para 4. A person can be authorised before the expiration of a year after registration of the building, notwithstanding the Marriage Act 1949, s 43 (1) proviso; Marriage Acts Amendment Act 1958, s 1 (2); Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, Sch. 1 para 5. The fact that more than one person is authorised in respect of one building does not necessitate the supply of any additional register books: Sch. 1 para 7.

The consent to the solemnisation required by the Marriage Act 1949, s 44 (1) proviso, may be given by the minister ordinarily responsible for the conduct of worship by the relevant sharing church or, if that church is not the Roman Catholic Church, by a representative of the sharing church, and, if the marriage is not to be solemnised according to the rites of a sharing church, must be given by one of the trustees, owners or managers of the building: Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, Sch. 1 para 6. These provisions do not affect any registration or authorisation in force when the sharing agreement takes effect: Sch. 1 para 8.

5 Ibid s 6 (1).

6 See ibid s 6 (2). This applies notwithstanding that the building is registered under the Marriage Act 1949, Part III (ss. 26-42): Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, s 6 (2).

7 In the Marriage Act 1949, s 26 (2) proviso: see PARA 1028 note 3 ante.

8 Sharing of Church Buildings Act 1969, s 6 (3).

9 See ibid s 10 (2), (3), and PARA 1186 ante.

10 Ibid s 6 (4). However, the provisions of Sch. 1 paras 2-9, do not apply (s. 6 (4) (a)), and s 6 (2) applies in modified form (s. 6 (4) (b)).

Chapels and meeting houses established specifically for the benefit of one body of protestant nonconformists cannot without a breach of trust be devoted to the use of another body essentially different from the first².

1415. Effect of schism.

In the event of a schism among the members of one body of protestant nonconformists, the fact that the seceding party constitutes a majority either of the trustees or of the congregations does not of itself entitle the majority to claim possession of the premises¹.

The nature of the original constitution must alone be looked to as the guide in such a case², and the ratio decidendi must be the inclusion in or exclusion from that constitution of an inherent power of alteration³. The claims of those who adhere to that constitution will be enforced unless such an inherent power is proved to exist and to have been exercised by the body authorised in the constitution to exercise it within such limits as may have been prescribed⁴.

The same principle will be followed in the case of a chapel or meeting house not held under a trust attaching it to a specific religious body⁵. Where it subsists for the common benefit of those who in fact attend it either under no trust at all or under a trust of which the wording is indeterminate, however, the court will not intervene to enforce the alleged rights of a minority⁶. Where the religious body in whose interests a chapel or meeting house was founded has ceased to exist, the court will apply the endowment cy-près in favour of another religious body⁷.

Where usage for a shorter period than twenty-five years only could be proved, that usage, although not conclusive, might be recognised by the court according to its length, and a minority who continued to use the chapel in which an altered usage was proved, suing in their individual capacity, would be precluded by their acquiescence from maintaining an action: Cairncross v Lorimer (1860) 3 Macq 827, HL. The nineteenth century legislation¹ dealing with the vesting of property in trustees in connection with any congregation, society or body of persons associated for religious purposes, where the property was to be used in some way in furtherance of those purposes, has been repealed², but where on 1st January 1961³ the provisions of that legislation providing for the appointment of trustees applied in relation to any land, those provisions have effect as if contained in the conveyance or other instrument declaring the trusts on which the land is then held⁴.

Where a trustee is appointed or discharged by resolution a signed and attested memorandum is sufficient evidence of that fact and if it is executed as a deed it operates as if it contained a vesting declaration⁵. A deed appointing a new trustee or discharging a retiring trustee⁶ also operates as if it contained a vesting declaration⁷.

1418. Effect of constitution of society.

Save for the due disposal and administration of property there is no authority in the courts to take judicial cognisance of the rules of a voluntary society entered into merely for the regulation of its own affairs¹ unless those rules, as in the case of the Methodist Church² and the United Reformed Church³, have received legislative sanction⁴. The other protestant nonconformist bodies have not hitherto obtained such legislative sanction of their rules⁵. Accordingly they and the Methodist Church, insofar as its constitution remains unaffected by statute, are at liberty to exercise all such powers of self-government and discipline as are not inconsistent with their original constitutions.

1 Forbes v Eden (1867) LR 1 Sc & Div 568 at 581, HL, per Lord Cranworth.

2 The Methodist Church Union Act 1929 provides, inter alia, for the union of various Methodist bodies and for future union with other bodies if approved by the church conference, for the vesting of all church property in the Methodist Church and for the community being able to sue and be sued through its officers. For the effect of s 18, which transfers personal property of the Wesleyan Methodist, Primitive Methodist and United Methodist Churches to the Methodist Church, see Re Talbot, Jubb v Sheard [1933] Ch 895. See also Re Methodist Church Union Act 1929, Barker v O'Gorman [1971] Ch 215, [1970] 3 All ER 314, where the powers of the church conference are discussed in relation to Anglican-Methodist union. The conference, declared in the Act of 1929 to be the final authority within the Methodist Church with regard to all question concerning the interpretation of its doctrines, approved by resolution the inauguration of Stage 1 of the proposals for union, which, in the event, did not receive the requisite majority in the convocations of the Church of England. The plaintiffs contended that the resolution was ultra vires the conference on the ground that it involved an alteration of the church's doctrinal standards, expressly prohibited by the Act of 1929 and the Deed of Union 1932 made under it. It was, however, held inter alia, that the resolution did not in any way alter or vary the doctrinal standards of the Methodist Church and therefore was not ultra vires the conference.

3 The United Reformed Church Act 1972 made provision as to property held on behalf of the Congregational Church of England and Wales and its member churches and of the Presbyterian Church of England in consequence of the formation of the United Reformed Church (Congregational-Presbyterian) in England and Wales. Property held in trust for a uniting church or congregation became held in trust for the corresponding local church (ss.8,9), and gifts to a dissolved church take effect as gifts to the United Reformed Church (s. 16). Provision is made by s 8, Sch. 2, for the adaptation of trusts.

4 See note 2 supra.

5 The rules of such churches are therefore not enforceable except as matters of contract between members who voluntarily subscribe to them. The rules governing the Methodist Church are to be found in their model deed, which contains the trusts upon which their properties are held, and in the minutes of their annual conferences respectively: see Forms and Precedents, a conveyance in which the Deed of Union 1932 is recited. The rules governing the Baptist Churches are found in the Baptist Handbook (appearing annually). See also Forms and Precedents. The unit in the case of the Baptists or Independents is the congregation rather than the community. Such rules as they have in common must therefore be regarded as accidental rather than incidental to their constitution. For the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Wales, see their Constitutional Deed of 1826, and their Declaration of Trust of 1827; see the Calvinistic Methodist or Presbyterian Church of Wales Act 1933; and Forms and Precedents. The constitution of the Salvation Army, which is not a denominational body, is governed by the Salvation Army Act 1931.

(4) THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS (QUAKERS)

1419. Status of Friends.

Members of the Society of Friends, or Quakers (as they are frequently, though not correctly, called) remain in a somewhat different position from other nonconformists. The separate treatment accorded to them by the Toleration Act 1688¹ in consequence of their objection to the taking of oaths² led to their exclusion from the operation of other Acts relating to protestant nonconformists, with the result that they alone are not forbidden to hold a meeting, assembly or congregation with the doors locked or barred³.

1 The preamble to the Toleration Act 1688 (repealed) commenced 'Forasmuch as some ease to scrupulous consciences in the exercise of religion may be an effectual means to unite their Majesties' protestant subjects in interest and affection...'.
 2 Under the Toleration Act 1688 (repealed) dissenters who scrupled the taking of any oath were permitted to make a declaration of fidelity under s 13 in place of the oath otherwise required by s 2. Provision is now made for every person, upon objecting to being sworn, and stating as the ground of his objecting that the taking of an oath is contrary to his religious belief (or that he has no religious belief), to be permitted instead to make a solemn affirmation in all places and for all purposes for which an oath is required by law, and the affirmation is of the same force and effect as an oath: Oaths Act 1888, s 1; Perjury Act 1911, s 17, Schedule. For the form of the affirmation, see the Oaths Act 1888, s 2. A Friend or a Moravian, or a person who has been one, may alternatively make a solemn affirmation or declaration in the special form prescribed by the Quakers and Moravians Act 1833, s 1, or the Quakers and Moravians Act 1838, s 1. Persons permitted to make affirmations may affirm instead of taking the oath of allegiance, judicial oaths etc.: Promissory Oaths Act 1868, s 11. Such persons wilfully and falsely affirming in a judicial proceeding in a matter material to those proceedings commit perjury: Perjury Act 1911, ss 1, 15 (2).

3 Such a meeting etc. is forbidden by the Places of Religious Worship Act 1812, s 11 (see PARA 1413 ante), but that Act does not apply to Friends: s 14. They were thus also relieved from the requirements of ss 5, 6, as to declaration to be made by dissenting preachers, although as they do not have ministers the effect of these obsolete requirements on Friends would have been doubtful.

Friends enjoy special privileges in regard to marriage¹. Their right to contract and solemnise marriages after their own usages has been continuously recognised as valid in law². This right is extended to cases where only one, or neither, of the contracting parties is a member of the Society of Friends or is in profession with or of the persuasion of that Society, provided that due notice is given to the superintendent registrar of the district, and at the same time a certificate is produced to him signed by a registering officer of the Society of Friends in England, stating that the notice is authorised under the rules of the Society³. The marriage may be solemnised under the authority of a superintendent registrar's certificate (s. 26 (1) (c)), and may be either with or without a licence (s. 26 (2)); see further PARAS 1023-1029 ante. It may take place at any hour (s. 75 (1) (a)), and must be registered in duplicate by the registering officer of the Society of Friends appointed for the district in which the marriage is solemnised as soon as may be after the solemnisation (ss. 53 (b), 55 (1)).

Unitarians and others who deny the doctrine of the Holy Trinity were for many years subject to disabilities¹. These were relieved, so far as immunity from the penalties incurred by not taking oaths required from other protestant nonconformists is concerned, in 1813, and Unitarians are now treated equally with the adherents of all other denominations. There is now no post under the Crown which is not open to them upon making the oath or affirmation required by the Promissory Oaths Act 1868².

¹ They were relieved from the disabilities and loss of privilege suffered under the Toleration Act 1688 and the Blasphemy Act 1697 (both repealed) by 53 Geo. 3 c. 160 (Doctrine of the Trinity) (1813) (repealed). The oaths prescribed by the Toleration Act 1688 were not objectionable to Unitarians, so that since 1813 they have been on an equality with other nonconformists. The Promissory Oaths Act 1868 substituted certain oaths for those prescribed by the Toleration Act 1688: see PARA 1401 ante.

(6) JEWS

1423. Status of Jews.

According to the law of England Jews as such are not looked upon as a separate nationality¹ or a distinct caste, and they have no special status except insofar as they constitute a dissenting religious denomination². Hence they are almost invariably described in Acts of Parliament and legal documents as 'persons professing the Jewish religion'³. Their personal capacity is determined by the law of the country of their domicile even though this may conflict with Jewish law⁴, unless the law of the domicile expressly confers some special privilege or exemption upon them⁵.

4 The capacity of persons professing the Jewish religion who are domiciled in England to contract marriage is regulated by the law of England: see Re De Wilton, De Wilton v Montefiore [1900] 2 Ch 481. Cf. Levy v Solomon (1877) 25 WR 842 (Jewish law of legitimation by subsequent marriage not recognised in English courts when doctrine not part of English law). As to recognition of marriages solemnised according to the usages of the Jews, see PARA 1430 post.

5 They were formerly excluded from many civil and political rights by reason of the method of administering the oaths or the forms of the oaths, declarations or tests which were imposed as conditions precedent for the exercise of such rights. It was at one time thought that the Jews, because they were infidels, were perpetui inimici regis et religionis, and as such had no better status than that of alien enemies during time of war ie that they were without civil rights of any kind whatsoever, but this doctrine, though laid down by Sir Edward Coke, has long since been discredited (see Calvin's Case (1608) 7 Co Rep 1a at 17a, 17b; (1719) 1 Lilly's Practical Register 4; Wells v Williams (1697) 1 Ld Raym 282; Omichund v Barker (1745) Willes 538; Henriques, The Jews and the English Law 185-191), and discrimination against a person on account of his being a Jew is unlawful under the Race Relations Act 1968.

The Toleration Act 1688¹ was in 1846 extended to the Jews by an Act which provided that British subjects professing the Jewish religion should be subject to the same laws in respect to their schools, places for religious worship, education and charitable purposes, and the property held with them, as protestant dissenters from the Church of England². Inasmuch as the Acts relating to toleration are liberally interpreted by the courts and even held to be retrospective in their operation³, Jewish religious endowments, trusts and charitable gifts are recognised and executed by the courts⁴. Accordingly, since 1846 the Jewish religion has so far become one of the recognised religions of the country that a condition in a will or trust deed providing for the forfeiture of a beneficiary's interest in a fund if he should forsake the Jewish religion or marry a person who does not profess that religion is valid and will be enforced by the courts⁵.

Persons who disturb the service of the synagogue can be punished in the same way as those who interfere with the worship in a church or chapel⁶.

With the exception of his ineligibility for jury service¹ the minister of a Jewish synagogue has no special privilege or status by English law, and the tenure of his office is regulated solely by the agreement or contract under which he holds his appointment².

The secretary of a synagogue has statutory powers and duties as to the keeping of marriage register books and the due registration of marriages between persons professing the Jewish religion³, but he is not invested with this authority unless and until he has been certified in writing to be the secretary of a synagogue in England of persons professing the Jewish religion by the president for the time being of the London Committee of Deputies of the British Jews⁴.

1427. Concessions to Jewish faith and practice.

It is the custom of the courts, quite apart from any statutory enactments, to comply so far as possible with Jewish religious scruples; for instance, a Jew is and always has been allowed to be sworn as a witness upon the Old Testament instead of upon the New Testament¹, and arrangements have been made for cases in which Jews are parties or necessary witnesses not to be taken upon a Saturday or other Jewish holiday², and a Jew has been excused from giving notice of dishonour of a bill of exchange on a Jewish holiday provided it is his custom to keep his place of business closed on such a day³.

Again, a voter who declares that he is a Jew and objects on religious grounds to mark the ballot paper on the Jewish Sabbath may, if the poll be taken on Saturday, have his vote recorded by the presiding officer. It should be observed that this privilege can be exercised by Jews only when the election takes place on a Saturday, and not when it takes place on any other Jewish festival or holiday⁴.

Jewish parents (like other parents) may require their children to be excused attendance at religious worship and religious instruction in schools⁵, and a Jewish teacher (like any other teacher) may not be deprived of promotion or other advantage by the fact that he does not attend such worship or give such instruction⁶.

1429. Other rights and disabilities of Jews.

A Jew may hold an advowson and the right of presentation to a church or ecclesiastical benefice, but he must of course present a duly qualified person¹. If, however, he holds an office in the gift of the Crown to which a right of presentation to any ecclesiastical benefice is attached, the right devolves upon and is to be exercised by the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being². A Jew may not, under penalty of being guilty of a high misdemeanour and disabled from holding any office under the Crown, directly or indirectly advise the Crown concerning the appointment to or disposal of any office or preferment in the Church of England or in the Church of Scotland².

With these exceptions, Jews are on precisely the same footing in regard to political rights as their Christian fellow-subjects³.

The doubt there expressed over such an appointment is unaffected by the Lord Chancellor (Tenure of Office and Discharge of Ecclesiastical Functions) Act 1974, which does not apply to persons professing the Jewish faith. The English law expressly recognises marriages solemnised according to the usages of the Jews¹. Such usages must be proved in the same way as foreign laws are proved, and, when proved, will be enforced by the courts².

¹ The marriage may be solemnised under the authority of a superintendent registrar's certificate, but such a certificate may only be issued where both parties profess the Jewish religion: Marriage Act 1949, s 26 (1) (d). The marriage may be by licence or without a licence (s. 26 (2)), and may take place at any hour (s. 75 (1)). As to the registration of marriages, see ss 53 (c), 55, and PARA 1034 ante. (7) OTHERS

1433. People of other faiths and persons of no faith.

Persons of religious persuasions other than those discussed in the preceding paragraphs, and persons professing no religious belief, are generally in the same position of equality as other people. In the absence of some express provision adherence to the practices of a religious body does not exempt a person from the normal requirements of the law¹. Thus a parent who, for religious reasons, fails to obtain for his child necessary medical assistance is guilty of manslaughter if, as a result of that neglect, the child dies².

The parents of any schoolchild may require the child to be excused attendance at religious worship and religious instruction in school³, and a teacher who does not attend such worship or give such instruction is not thereby to be deprived of promotion or other advantage⁴. In reaching a decision as to the custody of a child the court may consider, in the context of the paramount welfare of the child, the effect on the child of a change in his religious education⁵.

A person who objects to the taking of an oath on the ground that it is contrary to his religious belief or that he has no religious belief⁶ is permitted to affirm⁷ if the judge is satisfied that the person comes within this provision⁸. The fact that a person who has duly taken an oath has no religious belief in no way affects the validity of the oath⁹. Any person may be sworn in any lawful manner¹⁰, and the law permits a person to be sworn in whatever manner is binding on persons of his religious persuasion. Thus a Muslim may be permitted to swear on the Koran. However, where it is not reasonably practical without inconvenience or delay to administer an oath in the manner appropriate to a person's religious belief he may be permitted to affirm instead¹¹.

Where the law provides no facilities for combining civil and religious marriage formalities it is necessary for the parties to contract a civil marriage before a registrar in order for the marriage to be legally valid; this is normally followed by a religious ceremony which has no legal effect. Obedience to parental wishes and submission to the practices of the appropriate religious faith is not duress so as to avoid a marriage celebrated between a girl and the man of her parents' choice whom she had never seen before the ceremony¹².

1434. Places of worship; ministers.

No meeting, assembly or congregation of persons for religious worship may be had in any place with the door locked, bolted or barred or otherwise fastened so as to prevent any persons entering during the time of the meeting, assembly or congregation¹.

Every place of meeting for religious worship² of any body or denomination of persons may be certified in writing to the Registrar General for England and Wales³, who will then register it in due course⁴. Certification is not compulsory, but if certified the meeting place, together with connected land and buildings⁵, is excepted from registration under the Charities Act 1960⁶, and the meeting place is not liable to be rated⁷. It may be registered for the solemnisation of marriages⁸.

Any person who is guilty of riotous, violent or indecent behaviour in any such certified place of religious worship, whether during the celebration of divine service or at any time, or who unlawfully obstructs any minister there, commits an offence⁹.

Any regular minister¹⁰ of any religious denomination is ineligible for jury service¹¹.

1 Places of Religious Worship Act 1812, s 11. The penalty, imposed on the person teaching or preaching there on summary conviction, is a sum of not less than £2 nor more than £20: ss 11, 15. The provision does not, however, apply to any congregation or assembly for religious worship meeting in a private dwelling house or on the premises belonging to it (Liberty of Religious Worship Act 1855, s 1 (2)), or meeting occasionally in any building not usually appropriated to purposes of religious worship (s. 1 (3)).

2 'Place of meeting for religious worship' means a place the principal use of which is for people to come together as a congregation to worship God or do reverence to a deity; whilst it would include a Buddhist temple it does not include a building used largely for instruction in a philosophy of human life, eg scientology: R v Registrar General, ex parte Segerdal [1970] 2 QB 697 at 707, [1970] 3 All ER 886 at 889, 890, CA, per Lord Denning MR. 'Worship' indicates humbling oneself in reverence and recognition of the dominant power and control of any entity or being outside one's own body and life (R v Registrar General, ex parte Segerdal supra, at 709 and at 891, per Winn LJ); it must have some, at least, of these characteristics, namely submission to the object worshipped, veneration of that object, praise, thanksgiving, prayer or intercession (at 709 and at 892, per Buckley LJ). It is the actions or practices of displaying reverence or veneration to a being regarded as divine by appropriate rites or ceremonies: Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints v Henning (Valuation Officer) [1964] AC 420 at 431, [1963] 2 All ER 733 at 735, HL, per Lord Evershed.

The exemption extends to ancillary buildings (see the General Rate Act 1967, s 39 (2) (b), and PARA 1411 note 13 ante) eg a Christian Science reading room (Board of Directors of Ninth Church of Christ Scientist v Westminster City Council and Cane (Valuation Officer) (1958) 3 RRC 35 (Lands Tribunal)).
